Mr. Thos. Pringle, a mechanical engineer from Montreal, was in Bowmanville last Saturday, inspecting the different water powers, on behalf of the parties negotiating for the establishment of a cotton factory in that town, and to confer with the corporation in reference to the same.

In the Stouffville abortion case, the jury last week returned a verdict—"That the deceased Rosa Holloway came to her death on Wednesday, the 16th day of March, 1881, at her late residence in Stouffville, by an abortion procured by her own act."

J. H. Knox, Warden of the County of Prince Edward, has been unseated on the ground that he had not obtained a majority of the votes of the County Council. He got 8 votes out of 17—the other nine votes being divided between three other candidates. The Judge condemned the practice of electing by ballot without nomination.

On the night of the 18th, the store of Mr. D. McIntosh, containing the Post Office, at Coldsprings, was destroyed by fire. The loss on the stock was almost total, there being hardly anything saved. The whole Insurance on the building and stock was only $2,000, which cannot nearly cover the loss.

Mr. John Haight, who died at his residence near Duffin's Creek, Pickering, on the 14th inst., was one of the oldest settlers in the township. In fact he was born within a mile of where he lived, and died on the old homestead. His father, John Allan Haight, originally came from Pennsylvania and settled in Pickering in 1812.

George W. Pillen, a former resident of Oakwood, died at Lake City, Mich., on the 26th February, from the effects of injuries received on the Canfield railway the week previous. One of his legs was successfully amputated, but he died from internal injuries. He was twenty-one years of age, and had only been in Michigan about 6 mths.

A boy named John Rolston, aged twelve years and eight months, son of Andrew Rolston, on lot No. 18 in the 3rd concession of Eldon, committed suicide by hanging himself from a beam in his father's barn, about four o'clock last Thursday. No motive can be assigned for his having committed the terrible deed, except that he had been punished by his parents some time before.

While Mr. John Taylor, one of the earliest settlers in Brock, was attempting to go up stairs in his house a few days ago, he fell, receiving a severe injury which resulted in his death. Up to this time Mr. Taylor was very active and frequently walked from fifteen to twenty miles a day, though he had reached the ripe age of one hundred and one years. His death is much regretted by his old friends.

The Orillia Times says that on last Wednesday afternoon, Stanley Rowe, youngest son of Basil R. Rowe, of Orillia Township, went into the stable to harness up a team of horses for the purpose of driving into town. While in the act of putting on the harness one of the horses turned upon him and literally kicked him to death. The deceased was about twenty years of age, and was a most exemplary and promising young man.

The prospects of gold mining in Marmora are [illegible]. A fresh lot of indications lately been discovered, and some more money is to be spent in developing the indications. A mill is to be put up, also, to crush and grind indications. The new mill is to have a capacity for treating 125 tons of ores a day, which is the largest capacity for treating ores we have heard of in the Province. The number of men to be employed will be 400, it will take all that number to do the work. It is to be hoped the ores are good.

Galway township receipts for 1880 were $859.91, and the expenditure was $828.67, leaving a balance in hand of $31.24. This is one of the best managed townships in the whole district; it owes nothing, it never has owed anything, and it has never been involved in any of the Messes which have distinguished other municipalities. In addition to this, its taxation is the lowest of any township in either of the Counties of Peterborough and Victoria.

The Whitby Mills, owned by J. B. Bickell, Reeve of the the township of Whitby, were burned down on Friday night, 18th. The adjoining buildings were saved through much exertion. There were nearly a thousand bushels of wheat in the mill and a large quantity of flour. The loss on the building and machinery is estimated at ten to twelve thousand dollar; the value of contents, not ascertained. Insurances, on building and machinery, in Western, $2,000; Home District Mutual, $2,000; Canadian Millers' Mutual, $2,000. Insurance on contents in the Phœnix, $1,500.

One day last week, while Mr. Charles Parkin was engaged piling lumber on the shore of the river at Norland, at the foot of a steep embankment on the top of which some logs were piled, he heard a noise above him, and on looking up he saw to his horror a huge log coming thundering down towards him, the snow having melted away under it. There being lumber piles on all sides of him there was apparently no chance of escaping from a horrible death. Fortunately Mr. Parkin is endowed with extraordinary presence of mind, and waiting calmly until the log was within a few feet of him, he gave a tremendous leap, the log passing harmlessly under him.

A By-law for the appointment of pathmasters, pound-keepers and fence-viewers was read a first and second time. On motion the Auditors' report as now finally audited was adopted by the Council, and the Clerk instructed to have the abstract published also to get 200 copies of detailed statement printed in pamphlet form for distribution. The offer made by W. H. Robertson for printing, stationery and advertising for the current year was accepted. The Treasurer was was instructed to hand over to Mr. Foley all papers in connection with the sale of A. S. Wright's property for taxes. Thos. O'Brien entered into an agreement to build a road for the sum of $30, through concession 4 between lots 15 & 19, according to certain plans and specifications drawn up by the Reeve. Moved by Mr. McCliggott, seconded by Mr. Foley. That a resolution of council authorizing the expenditure of $30 on said line of road dated November 15, 1880 be rescinded.—Carried. P. Fitzpatrick presented a petition signed by himself and others, against allowing Alex. Watts to enclose portion of Boundary line opposite lot 12 concession 2. Alex Watt presented a counter petition but as the signatures thereto were not really interested in the road it was resolved not to have the road enclosed. Mr. McCliggott moved, seconded by Mr. Foley, that council adjourn to 28th March then to meet at 9 o'clock a. m. and that passage of general school by-law as well as that of collector of taxes be laid over till that date.—Carried.

THE GREAT CONE PUMP CASE.

OWENS v. TAYLOR.

PROUDFOOT, V.C.

The patent issued 17th July, 1872, for "The Cone Pump and its connections" for a period of five years, and on the 16th July, 1877, it was extended for another period of five years. Powell, the patentee, in the specification attached to the patent, claimed as his inventor:—

1st. The Cone-shaped Pump, head or stock.

2nd. The oscillating or rocking support for the fulcrum pivotted, or secured at or near the surface of the ground.

3rd. The combinations of the oscillating support with a wooden pump.

4th. The arrangement of two cylinders and connecting chamber with the lever connecting with the plunger rods in the cylinder.

And these were the improvements in pumps covered by the patent.

There was abundant evidence that the cone shape was not new, pumps tapering in a similar way for a similar purpose, to enable them to be banded and thus give additional strength, have been long in use. It had been used, according to different witnesses, from fifty years ago downwards.

The rocking support or fulcrum also was shown by several witnesses not to be new. Powell himself says:—"The oscillating fulcum is an old thing; fastening it to the side of the pump is an old thing; the advantage of mine is fastening it nearer to the ground." Similar rocking supports are figured in the Scientific American for 1856 and 1857, and Reports of Patent Office of Washington, for 1855, 1857, 1859, 1860, 1862 and 1868, which involve the same principle, but different mode of attachment to the pump, some being nearer the top of the stock.

One witness saw 40 years ago a pump with a rocking support used for pumping water in York, in England, and the fulcrum rested on the ground and fastened about 8 inches from base of pump. Another witness said that thirty-two years ago he worked at the tin mines in Cornwall, where pumps with with oscillating fulcrum were to be seen on every ledge. The patent is for a fulcrum attached at or near the ground. In the diagram attached to the specification, it is not attached to the pump stock, but to a stand upon which the pump rests. Powell says that before he got his patent, he saw an oscillating support set up on the top of the spout, (that would be about half way up the stock). He attaches his to the stock. The nearer to the ground the better. It would need experiments to determine how far from the ground it could be with advantage. Without having made such experiments, it seems to me impossible to say that attaching the support 6 inches, 12 inches, or 18 inches lower, could be the subject of a patent.

The combination of the oscillating support with a wooden pump, does not seem to have been new any more than the parts of which it was composed. But I apprehend that changing the material of the stock would not render that patentable which was not so before.

The fourth claim set out above has never been used and is therefore void. (35 Vic., C. 26, S. 28.)

It would be of little use to give a lengthened analysis of the cases. I have referred to all those that were cited to me and others. They appear to establish that the element of invention is wanting in this case.

In my opinion the patent is void for want of novelty.

HUMBUG STOPPED!

H. Owens and his agents have systematically canvassed the surrounding Counties, distributing Circulars, and also threatening all those having Taylor's Pumps, or any person who they thought were about to purchase the same—asserting that they would be compelled to pay him (Owens) for said pumps, and that they would have to destroy the same, thus intimidating the public for the purpose of damaging my business as a manufacturer of pumps.

All this humbug I have now succeeded in stopping.

Feeling satisfied that the public will now appreciate my endeavors to obtain free competition as the best mode of regulating trade for all, I would inform them that I am still prepared to supply everything in the pump line on the best possible terms.

The Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad Company

Now offer for Sale over 1,350,000 Acres of the Choices FARMING and TIMBERED LANDS in the Northern Peninsula of Michigan.

Destined to be the best wheat-producing region in the world. These lands are situated in the counties of Chippewa, Mackinac, Schoolcraft, and Marquette, and embrace many thousands of acres of the best agricultural lands in the State of Michigan.

Among those in the counties of Chippewa and Mackinac are tracts of what are known as the "burnt or cleared" lands. These lands offer many advantages over the prairie lands of the West, as the timber lands adjoining insure a supply of fuel at little cost. The soil being a rich clay loam of great depth. The timber remaining upon the land being generally sufficient for the settlers' use in building and fencing.

These partially cleared lands are now offered at the low price of from $4 to $4.50 per acre, one-fourth cash, and the remainder at purchaser's option, at any time within nine years, with interest payable annually at seven per cent.

Roads are being opened through these lands, and no better opportunity has ever been offered to men of small means to secure a good farm, and intending purchasers will be wise by availing themselves of this chance before prices advance, as the lands are being rapidly taken and settled upon.

The lands more immediately on the line of the Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad, from Straits of Mackinac to Marquette, are more heavily timbered, and are almost universally good agricultural lands, leaving splendid farms when the timber is removed.

The iron and lumber interests of the upper peninsula are of such magnitude as to call for all the charcoal and lumber that the timber and wood upon the lands will produce—this will enable the settler to make good wages while clearing the land.

Lumber Mills and Charcoal Kilns will be built at various points along the line, and Furnaces are now being erected along the line of the road at Point St. Ignace.

The great demand and good prices for labor, both in winter and summer, make these lands particularly desirable as homes for the poor man. The lands adjacent the Railroad are offered at prices from $5 upwards, according to location, value of timber, etc. The lands are at your very door, and are being rapidly settled by Canadians.

For pamphlets, maps, and other information, address W. O. STRONG, Land Commissioner, 39 Newberry and McMillan Building, Detroit, Michigan. 9-1y.

PETERBOROUGH, MARCH 31, 1881.

For the Spring Trade.

The success which attended the circulation of our Christmas Edition, of six thousand copies, as testified to by those merchants who adopted its columns to give extra publicity to their announcements, has induced us to issue a similar edition for Spring Trade, the same number of papers being printed, and delivered by carriers and post to every house in the County, and the adjoiuing tonwships which do business in Peterborough. This edition will be issued, if possible, on Saturday, and will enable our merchants to solicit trade from the public, in the most thorough manner that it would be possible to conceive. It will be got up in attractive form, same style as the regular issue of the EXAMINER, and the letter-press enlivened with illustrations by Bengough. Those who desire to take advantage of its advertising columns, in which a limited space is still available, will do well to notify us at once. The advertising rates will be found most liberal, considering the expense of the publication, and its thorough and extensive circulation.

Midland Railway Enterprise.

The public will be interested in learning that Mr. Ellis, C.E., and staff commenced on Monday, the location of the direct line of railway between Peterborough and Omemee, in behalf of the Midland Railway. We understand that it is the intention of the Company to proceed at once with the speedy construction of this much-desired link in our system of railway communication, and that it will be pushed forward to completion with the least possible delay.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

TORONTO MARKET reports show the price of coal in that city to be $8 a ton, against $5.95 in Buffalo. This shows pretty plainly who pays the duty.

SO GREAT WAS THE enthusiasm over the recent banquet to Hon. Mr. Blake, at Montreal, that the seating capacity of the banquet hall was exhausted, leaving hundreds of anxious and disappointed applicants for tickets.

THE Review PAYS THOS. WHITE, M.P., a left-handed compliment. Mr. White is reported to have spoken contemptuously of the Trent Valley project, and the Tory organ intimates that he was punished therefor by the election of Mr. Crouter.

OUR CONTEMPORARY THE Review, was a little too fast in computing the "re-action" in Bellechase and Argenteuil. In the latter county, although "my dear Abbott" of Pacific scandal notoriety still holds the seat, his right to do it is to be decided in a few days by the Election Court. We observe, too, that in Bellechasse, where Mr. Amyot has a declared majority of 32, his opponent has demanded a scrutiny of votes.

WE CAN AFFORD to congratulate the Ottawa Citizen on the improved tone and quality of its editorial matter since Mr. Johnston's accession to the editorial chair. The rabid and shallow platitudes of the gentleman who has gone to work the oracle of the Toronto Mail will be missed from the Citizen with a sense of relief on the part of its readers. It is a case in which the Citizen's apparent loss is the Citizen's gain, the real loss falling upon the Mail.

TOWARDS THE CLOSE of the session, in answer to an enquiry, Hon. J. H. Pope, Acting-Minister of Canals, stated that the estimated cost of the Murray Canal was $700,000. In addition to the item of $25,000 set apart for "construction" of this work in the estimates, the supplementary estimates contain an additional appropriation for the same object of $25,000, making $50,000 in all. We hope the Ministers will not allow the verdict of East Northumberland to cool the ardor with which they regarded this enterprise before the election.

THE ONTARIO GOVERNMENT have completed the organization of the Sault St. Marie Railroad Company, by adding to the Board of Directors, the following gentlemen, as they were empowered to do by the Act of Incorporation: Senators McMaster and Hope, Ald. Ryan, Toronto; R. Chisholm, M. P. P., Brampton and J. C. Miller, M. P. P., Parry Sound. The other members of the Board are: James D. Edgar, H. H. Cook, M. P. P., John Ferris, M. P. P., George A. Cox, Robert Jaffray, James Holden, William Gooderham, Jr., Sir W. P. Howland, W. J. Copp, Æmilius Irving and J. M. Williams.

WE HOPE MR. HECTOR CAMERON, M. P., will not be offended if we remind him that during the session he wrote an open letter for the benefit of his constituents, in which he said that Mr. Charles Tupper had promised to make a statement on behalf of the Government, in answer to a question which he (Mr. Cameron) proposed to put in the House, that the Government intended to go on with the actual construction of the Trent Valley Canal. Perhaps Mr. Cameron will write another letter and explain why it is that he allowed the session to close without carrying out his unsolicited promise? The electors of North Victoria are beginning to believe that, as a representative, Mr. C. is an idle and useless humbug.

IT IS NOW POSITIVELY stated that the Collectorship of Customs at Toronto, will be given to Sir John Macdonald's former law partner, Mr. Paton. Mr. Paton is an elderly gentleman, without the slightest knowledge of commercial business, and utterly unqualified for so important a position. The duties of the position have been satisfactorily performed for upwards of a year by Mr. Douglas, the Surveyor of the Port, showing that there was no actual necessity for filling the position, and if there were, the passing over of Mr. Douglas for an inexperienced outsider is a queer commentary upon the recommendations of the Government's Civil Service Commission. It looks very much as if the real object of the Commission were to find perquisites for the Commissioners at the public expense.

ACCORDING TO A RETURN of the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics at Washington, the number of immigrants who arrived at the Ports of Baltimore, Boston, Detroit, East Port, New Bedford, New Orleans, New York, Philadelphia, Port Huron and San Francisco, during the eight months ending Feb. 28th, 1881, were as follows:—From Germany, 82,699; Dominion of Canada, 77,218; England and Wales, 36,276; Ireland, 26,161; Scotland, 8,078; China, 3,517; all other countries, 67,073. These figures are alarming, and show that the country is actually being depopulated by the N. P. exodus. Even admitting that the returns have been loosely prepared, and are not wholly reliable, which is a mere assumption, the loss of one-half that number of Canadian citizens in the short period of eight months, is a matter for serious reflection.

A CASE OF MORE THAN usual importance was recently tried in Toronto before His Honor Judge Mackenzie. It is one which is of special interest to publicans and all who sell intoxicating liquors. Mrs. Annie McKay sued David Clarke, tavern-keeper on Front street west, for $200 damages for selling liquor to her husband, who had the habit of drinking to excess, after having been forbidden to do so by her. The action was laid under section 90 of the Temperance Act of 1864, which provides that the husband, wife, parent, brother, sister, guardian or employer or any person, may prohibit any one selling to those who are in the habit of drinking to excess, and claim damages from them should they persist in doing so. The case was given to the jury at five o'clock the same afternoon, and Mrs. McKay was awarded $60 damages with costs.

ELEGANT CASKETS. There is nothing to which attention is more properly devoted than the care which is always taken, according to our means, to do honor in the most decorous and becoming way to the remains of the loved ones called on before us. Up to a recent period the great expense of metallic caskets, and other burial cases of the better class, debarred those in ordinary circumstances from using them, but this difficulty has been overcome by the casket patent burial case, of which Mr. Aaron Comstock is the agent in this county, and which may be seen on view at his ware-rooms on George Street south of Charlotte. This case is made of glass and iron, the glass forming the top, and side panels. The iron work is elegantly designed and as painted makes so perfect a representation of rosewood and walnut that it is impossible at sight to detect the difference. The satin and cashmere triming visible through the sides is elegantly arranged, while the outer lid, removable by the hands, gives a view of the interior through a pane of heavy plate glass. This casket combines all the merits, as to durability, elegance and preserving qualities, of the most expensive burial case, and is obtainable at a price so moderate as to be placed within the reach of all who may be compelled to the purchase of such an article.

SPRING ASSIZES.

The Spring Assizes opened on Tuesday forenoon, before Mr. Justice Galt, Mr. Fletcher, of Woodstock, appearing as Crown Counsel.

The following Grand Jury was empanelled:—Thomas Telford, Foreman, A. H. Macdougall, Jas. McCliggott, Wm. McKee, A. McMartin, R. A. Morrow, W. J. Mason, Jos. Nelson, Samuel Nelson, Sidney Payne, J. L. Paget, J. W. Ratcliff, T. W. Robinson, J. Ritchie, J. Z. Rogers, W. Spence, G. Savigney, W. Stewart, W. Snelgrove, S. Stewart, M. Shearer, Walter Scott, Samuel Spencer.

As there was but one criminal case, and that a case held over from the Fall Assizes, and already pronounced on by a Grand Jury, there was nothing to bring before the Jury, and the Judge after a brief reference to the importance of maintaining the Grand Jury system, discharged them.

There were two civil cases on the docket, but the lawyers not being ready the Court adjourned till 9.30, yesterday.

Yesterday the case of the girl, Mary Fredenburg, for infanticide, was called, when the Crown withdrew the charge of murder, and the prisoner through her counsel, Mr. H. H. Smith, pleaded guilty to the charge of concealment of birth. She was sentenced to six month in goal at hard labor, the lightness of the sentence being in view of the fact that she is alleged to be deficient mentally.

CLEARY v. MILLER.—Moore & Sawers, for plff.; J. F. Dennistoun, Q. C. for deft. Plaintiff had been tenant on defendant's farm, and paid his rent by note. Defendant subsequently, after maturity of note, distrained for rent due, and in addition to rent collected a small sum over. Plaintiff sought damages for excessive distraint. Plaintiff was awarded $9 excess of rent collected. Verdict for deft. on other counts. Costs reserved.

THORNTON v. HILLIARD.—Scott and Edwards, by C. A. Weller, for plff.; H. H. Smith, by J. F. Dennistoun, for deft. Case not decided when we went to press.

THE TORONTO World quaintly summarizes the various explanations offered by the Tory organs of the recent event in East Northumberland, as follows:

"East Northumberland was lost, the Belleville Intelligencer says, because Patrick Boyle supported Mr. Kennedy. The Toronto Mail says it was because the Methodist women were aroused. The Colborne Express says it was because ministers of the gospel denounced Mr. Kennedy from the pulpit. The Montreal Gazette says it was because Mr. Crouter rode the Protestant horse. The Peterborough Review says it was because Mr. Kennedy was a lukewarm supporter of the Trent Valley Canal project. Mr. Ryan and Mr. Paterson, M.P., say it was because of the unpopularity of the government, and especially of the contract made with the St. Paul syndicate. Anyway, Mr. Kennedy didn't get enough votes, and that's enough to defeat any candidate."

BROCK MEMORIAL WINDOW.

The Brock memorial window intended for the church at Queenston Heights has just been completed. The window is lancet-shaped, and has three lights. The centre one bears a beautifully depicted ideal scene of the angel appearing to Joshua. Underneath is the inscription, "Art thou for us or for our adversaries?" The side lights bear trophies of arms and warlike accoutrements, with four smaller designs representing crown and consitution, the arms of Canada, and those of Great Britain. The tracery in the upper part of the window is made up of two small pieces representing angels with scrolls bearing texts of scripture appropriate to the central design, and above a larger piece with Gen. Brock's arms and motto. The inscription is as follows: "In memory Major-General Sir Isaac Brock, born 9th of Oct., 1761, fell in action at the battle of Queenston Heights, Oct. 13th, 1812." The design is by Mr. Robert McCausland, and does great credit to that gentleman's artistic talent. The value of the window is about $400.

PETERBOROUGH PRESBYTERY.

Conclusion of the Meeting Last Week.

At the meeting of the Presbytery on Monday of last week there were present Rev. J. R. Beattie, (Moderator), James Cleland, John Ewing, J. W. Smith, W. Bennett, P. Duncan, A. Bell, J. Ballentyne, N. Clarke, T. F. Fotheringham, J. Cameron, E. F. Torrance and F. R. Beattie, Ministers, and Geo. Morrison, J. Carnegie, J. Sutherland, J. Casement, I. Kerr, Col. Haultain, G. A. Orr and Jas. Grey, Elders.

The first business disposed of was the St. Andrew's petition, reported in last weak's issue.

On Tuesday the Presbytery met at 10 a.m.

A paper was read from St. Paul's congregation on the subject of the great good done by Mr. Hammond upon his late visit to Peterborough.

Upon motion of Mr. Bell, a Committee consisting of Rev. Messrs. Clarke, F. R. Beattie, Duncan and Ewing, and Mr. Morrison, elder, were appointed to examine the paper as to its regularity and to report as soon as possible.

The Presbytery then entered upon the consideration of the questions on temperance sent down to Presbyteries from the General Assembly. The most of the brethren present gave reports as to the prevalence or otherwise of intemperance in their respective fields, and in answer to the other questions contained in the schedule. Rev. Messrs. R. J. Beattie, Bennett and Fotheringham were appointed a Committee to draw up a report based upon the answers obtained during the Conference on the subject of temperance and to report at the meeting of the Presbytery to be held in connection with the Synod.

The Committee on the subject of the paper from the St. Paul's congregation, Peterborough, reported that the paper was in order, and recommended that it be read in connection with the report on the State of Religion.

Messrs. Orr and Casement were added to the Committee on the State of Religion, and it was agreed to call for the report at the evening sederunt.

Mr. Bennett moved the motion of which he had given notice at last meeting, seconded by Mr. Smith, —That the temporary absence of a brother be not allowed to exclude him from the Moderator's chair, when he would be appointed thereto if he were present.

It was moved in amendment, —That the Presbytery continue to act as heretofore in the matter of the election of a Moderator.

The amendment was carried.

Mr. F. R. Beattie presented the motion of which he had given notice at last meeting, for the adoption of an overture on evangelistic work. The overture was to the following effect:

1. That whereas, the spiritual life of God's people may often be helped, and sinners be converted to God by means of special services;

2. That whereas, the peace of congregations is often disturbed by so-called Evangelists who find their way into their midst:

3. That whereas, the Church has no direct control over the life and doctrine of such Evangelists; Therefore it is humbly overtured to the Venerable the General Assembly that such action be taken by it as shall secure:—

1. That competent persons only shall be employed when Evangelistic services are held in connection with the congregations of this Church;

2. Putting competent persons in the same relationship to the Church as regular ministers as regards responsibility for life and doctrine.

3. That such directions be given the office-bearers and people of our congregations as shall help to guide to uniformity of action, and tend to secure the peace of congregations and the prosperity of the cause of Christ in their midst.

The overture was adopted and ordered to be transmitted to the General Assembly.

Presbytery adjourned to meet at two o'clock, and was closed with the benediction.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the Presbytery met and was constituted.

It was agreed to hear the minutes read at next sederunt.

The Rev. Mr. McMullen, of Woodstock, who was present, was invited to sit as a corresponding member.

The Presbytery then proceeded to take up the call from River-street Church, Paris, to the Rev. D. Ballentyne, of Cobourg. The call and relative documents were read.

Mr. Smith stated that he had duly cited the congregation and session of Cobourg to appear for their interests at this meeting.

The Rev. W. J. McMullen, Dr. Clarke, and Mr. Peter Wilson were heard on behalf of the Presbytery and congregation of Paris, in prosecution of the call.

Messrs. J. Sutherland, Alex. Russell and Robert Mulholland, representatives of the Session and congregation of Cobourg, were also heard.

Rev. Mr. Ballentyne was heard on his own behalf. He intimated his conviction that it was his duty to accept the call.

It was thereupon moved and adopted that the translation sought for be granted.

Rev. Mr. F. R. Beattie was appointed to declare the church vacant on the 17th April.

Rev. Mr. Smith was appointed Moderator of Session during the vacancy.

Rev. Messrs. R. J. Beattie and F. R. Beattie, with Mr. Williamson, was appointed a Committee to draw up a minute expressing the feelings of the Presbytery towards Rev. Mr. Ballentyne, and to report at next meeting of the Presbytery.

Rev. Mr. Cameron reported regarding visit to Oakhills and adjoining congregations, with a view to re-union with Perrytown, as instructed at last meeting. The report recommended the re-union of the stations as one pastoral charge.

A long discussion ensued in connection with this recommendation, and it was at length agreed upon motion of Mr. Carnegie,—That the report of the Committee on Oakhills be received, and that the congregation be informed that the Presbytery will treat with them in reference to re-union with Garden Hill, on their payment of $20 still due to Mr. Hodnett.

The application of Perrytown to sell the old Manse and apply the proceeds to the payment of the debt on the new church was not granted.

Presbytery adjourned to meet again at 7 o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

Presbytery met at 7 o'clock and was duly constituted.

A Committee consisting of Messrs. Carnegie, Cameron and F. R. Beattie were appointed to answer the reasons of appeal of Col. Haultain, should these be handed in within ten days, and to support the action of the Presbytery on the floor of the Synod.

Upon application made in due form permission was granted the congregation of Perrytown to change its name to that of Garden Hill.

Mr. Fotherinham reported on behalf of the S. School Committee. The report was received and adopted.

The report of the Home Mission Committee was read by Mr. Cleland, and it was agreed that it be received.

The Presbytery then agreed to hold a conference on the state of religion within the bounds.

The paper from St. Paul's congregation in reference to the great good which had been derived from the visit of Mr. Hammond to Peterborough was read. Several of the members stated that they had no report to make regarding any special work of grace within their bounds. Rev. Messrs. Torrance, Bennett and Clark were heard regarding the apparent awakening in their respective fields, and the very large addition to the membership of the Church already realised and anticipated.

Mr. G. M. Roger, being present, was invited to take parted in the conference, and he reported a marked work of grace in Peterborough and in several of the adjoining districts which he had visited.

The Committee on the State of Religion were instructed to draw up a report based on the returns from the different Sessions already on hand, and on the statements made in the conference meeting, and to forward the same, with Presbyterial authority, to the Convener of the Synod's Committee on the State of Religion, by the 15th of April.

The Presbytery then proceeded to appoint delegates to the General Assembly. Rev. Messrs. Clarke, Sutherland and R. J. Beattie were appointed by rotation, and Rev. Messrs. F. R. Beattie and Ewing by ballot. The elders chosen were Messrs. Gabriel Orr, Cold Springs; W. E. Roxburgh, Norwood; Geo. Morrison, Omemee; Alex. Douglas, Warkworth, and T. Casement, Lakefield.

Messrs. F. R. Beattie and D. Sutherland were appointed to support the overture on Evangelistic Services, and Messrs. F. R. Beattie and N. Clarke that on the Examination of Graduates, on the floor of the Assembly.

Mr. Bell presented a bill of $6 for printing questions to be used at visitation meetings of Presbytery, which was ordered to be paid.

Mr. Bennett presented a bill of $3.50 for travelling expenses to Home Mission Committee meeting and to the mission field, which was also ordered to be paid from the Presbytery fund.

The minutes of the last ordinary meeting of Presbytery and of the adjourned meetings were read as corrected by the Committee appointed at the opening of the first sederunt, and were sustained with a few additional alterations.

The minutes of the meeting for the purpose of considering the call to Bethesda, and of the meeting for ordination and induction of Mr. J. S. Ross, were also read.

A discussion arose in reference to the regularity of the meeting at Alnwick, and it was at length agreed to sustain the records and to ask the Synod to sanction the proceedings in connection with the ordination and induction of Mr. Ross, notwithstanding any apparent irregularity that may have been committed.

The Presbytery adjourned to meet in the Mill-street Church, Port Hope, on the third Monday in September, at 7.30 in the evening, and was closed with the benediction.

NORWOOD NEWS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Detective Davidson, of the Pettigrew force, having received information that a suspicious character was trying to get rid of a horse on the Hastings road, at a very low value, started in pursuit of the same, and succeeded in overtaking him shortly after having disposed of the horse, which Davidson made him at once recover, and hand over to him, besides refunding the sum of $5, which he had received for the animal, to the man he had sold it to. After severely reprimanding the unknown horse-dealer, the Detective warned him to quit the country at the earliest possible moment, which advice he has likely acted upon, as he has not since been heard off. Davidson at once advertised the horse, which he keeps at his own stable until the proper owner calls.

The Hastings road is drying up fast, and buggies and waggons can get along pretty well again except in a few places where the drifts have not all disappeared.

There is considerable excitement over the coming election which takes place to-morrow, in the county adjoining here, occasioned by the death of Mr. Keeler, M. P. Seemingly the contest will be a close one, as both sides have able speakers employed urging the electors to the poll. Thos. White lectured Tuesday night, in Hastings, on the present Government, and Alderman Ryan lectures to-night for the Opposition.

Sugar making is all the go now—no more sour faces.

IN THE HANDS OF HIS FRIENDS.

On Thursday evening of last week, there was a very pleasant event at Phelan's Hotel, a large number of the young gentlemen of the town and vicinity having gathered to make a sort of a bachelor's farewell demonstration in honor of Mr. George Walton, of Emerson, Manitoba, on the event of his embarking upon the sea of matrimony. Mr. Walton, it will be borne in mind, is one of the "sons of the soil" of Peterborough, and is, with another former resident of this section, Mr. Bird, now one of the most prominent business men of the flourishing town of Emerson, Manitoba. The firm of Walton & Bird was among the first to embark in business in the "gateway" of the North-West, as it is called, and we are glad to know that they have kept apace with the rising and thriving fortunes of their western home. Mr. Walton's present visit having been brought about by a contemplated entrance into the matrimonial condition, many of his friends took advantage of it to tender him a complimentary supper. As a result, some forty or fifty sat down to an elegant repast got up by mine host Phelan in a style that did credit to the house, and fully exemplified the hospitality which the company were extending to their guest. The chair was occupied by Mr. Joseph Tully, and the vice-chair by Mr. Harry Phelan, both of whom did the honors with the ease of old campaigners. Among those present were Messrs. J. G. Macdonald, McBain, James Little, E. Stuart Wood, J. W. Jenkins, G. W. Rubridge, A. N. Shaw, J. C. Robertson, H. Long, Brealey, Moore, Brock, Dann, S. English, Stothart,

After the "usual loyal and patriotic toasts" had been duly honored and disposed, the chairman gave the toast of the evening, "Our Guest," and in doing so said Mr. Walton and himself had been born in the same neighborhood, had gone to the same school together, got into the same scrapes, and started life in the same business. He recalled another similar meeting at which they had to express regret at Mr. Walton's removal from amongst us, but he was glad to know that since taking up his residence in Emerson, that gentleman had met with the most unqualified success, in business and otherwise. The toast was received with an enthusiasm that must have been highly gratifying to the gentleman named.

Mr. Walton in reply said he was at a loss to give expression to his feelings, as he would desire to do. He referred to a similar honor which had been done him two years previously, on the occasion of his first departure for Manitoba. He saw a number of new faces around the board, but the spirit which animated them was the same as he had met before. He was then going into a new country to seek his fortune, as it were, and he could say now that he did not regret it. There were many drawbacks to be overcome, and if a man had land and capital, he would no doubt do better in the old settled country, but to the young man struggling with his chances in the world, the west was the place. Lands were to be had for a trifle, and were constantly increasing in value. There was a steady and increasing immigration, and most of the immigrants had their outfit to buy on reaching the border, thus opening up a large business. There was money to be made in the increase of the value of lands. As an instance, he might mention that lands at Emerson bought two years ago by an old Peterborough boy, Mr. F. K. Burnham, for from $30 to $40 an acre, were now worth $125 a foot. He would advise young men to go out and see the country, and would bespeak a hearty welcome for all from Peterborough who might visit Emerson.

Mr. Tully alluded to his visit to Manitoba last summer, and testified to the hearty manner in which he had been received by former residents of Peterbororg, now living in the west.

Other toasts and speeches followed, all appropriate to the occasion, the list concluding with "our host and hostess," which was suitably acknowledged, in the absence of the proprietor, by Mr. Harry Phelan, and a very pleasant assembly broke up at an early hour—in the morning.

POLICE COURT NOTES.

On Thursday Jos. Condon, an Otonabee agriculturist, appeared before the Mayor to answer the charge of being drunk and disorderly on the previous evening. As he had spent the night in the cells, and presented a respectable appearance, he was allowed to go on payment of a fine of $1, with $3.25 costs.

Angus McDonald, a young man who had been working in the shanties all winter, and who had spent all his money at Haliburton, managed to get blind drunk on Wednesday evening. He was sent to gaol for ten days, to think it over.

Henry Govais, a Frenchman, was brought up in the afternoon on charge of committing a nuisance, having been caught by the constable in flagrante delicto. He pleaded whiskey, and was fined $2 and $3 costs.

On Friday the case of Pillar, of the M. R.R., for destroying a shade tree, came up for judgment. By consent the information was changed, to bring it under By-Law instead of under statute, and the case was enlarged for a week.

James McCullough did not appear to answer to his name, having lit out for Toronto.

Chas. Beavis was fined $10, and $5.25 for having interfered with a constable in discharge of his duty, on July 28, 1879. Beavis was allowed to go on his own recognizance to answer an old charge of malicious injury to property, preferred by one Jennie Wilson.

On Saturday Hugh Riley was brought up charged with an assault on Mr. James Stevenson. It seems that Riley, with other loafers, were standing, according to custom, loafing on Fairweather's corner on Friday evening, and Mr. Stevenson, passing by, the fellow gave him a back-hander, knocking off his hat, just for "the fun of the thing." Mr. Stevenson did not press the case and the man was remanded to gaol till Monday to sober up. On Monday he was fined $2 and costs, or 30 days. We think both Mr. Stevenson and the Magistrate were to blame, as in justice to the public and to prevent similar practices the heaviest penalty the law allows ought to be imposed. Street corner loafers have the town at their mercy in the evenings, as night air does not seem to agree with our town constables.

On Wednesday morning, Mr. W. Bell, of the St. George's Hotel, was charged by Inspector Beavis with keeping a pigeon-hole table without taking out the necessary license. A fine of $20 and $5 costs was imposed.

D. Henthorn, for similar omission as livery stable keeper, was fined $5 and $2 costs.

REVIVAL WORK AT KEENE.

[Lines written by Mr. Alex. Graham, of Keene, after the recent visit of Rev. E. Payson Hammond and his band of converts to that place.]

Hammond, that man of God,
'Mongst us to-day hath been,—
The wond'rous grace hath wrought,
Before us plainly seen.

Young men who erst were sunk
Deep in sin's miry clay,
Standing on Christ the Rock,
And singing "Happy Day."

When singing the new song
Of Jesus and His love,
Most hard'ned 'mongst the throng
It could not help but move.

None could these converts see
And hear what from them came,
And not wish for to be
In heart and mind the same.

The work it is Divine
That now is going on,
All may God's army join,
For Christ rejecteth none.

Then seeking soul don't grieve
Fearing He'll not thee own,
Upon all who believe
The Holy Ghost comes down.

It's Heaven's high decree
Pardon through Jesus give,
The call, "Come unto Me,
Hear and your soul shall live.

A Great Cause of Human Misery

MANHOOD

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price in a sealed envelope, only 6c. or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

"Poor Dick!" he said to himself, very softly, under his breath as it were—'unsettled,' 'miserable,' I should think you were indeed. What can have set it astir?"

His eyes still followed the closely written lines spread before him, and his brows met, as he sat there, after a curious fashion of their own. But look at them as he would, the words remained the same, sad and heeding, coming straight from a full heart, and touching him strangely.

Slowly a faint far-off memory stirred within him—it seemed as if the thinking of this trouble of Doctor West's life had evoked it. It was a half-forgotten circumstance which had astonished him once, which, recalled after all these weeks and months, puzzled him still more, and began to haunt him with a strange persistency, and always in connection with Doctor West and Doctor West's perplexity. He could not quite grasp the remembrance yet. It floated before him, hazily, like a fancy of a dream, but neither could he forget it.

The words of the letter before him were clear enough—bold words that went to the point at once, as true words should.

"It seems to me, Paul, that a suspicion has grown up that if I tried I might have saved his life. Some people, I fear, go farther than that even—Heaven knows I dare not ask—sometimes I dare not even think about it; but their looks almost seem to accuse me of having taken his life. And you know, Paul, how I loved him. This money bequeathed to Ethel surely had a curse upon it. Since the report of the legacy has got abroad, I have not a moment's peace or quietness. Not that anyone says a word. They do worse—they shun me; they even of late shun Ethel. Persons who used to have me, and me only, now call in Estes to attend them. I feel haunted, half-maddened; and all the time no one has said out, in so many honest words, that they believe I have done wrong. What would you have me do? I can think for myself no longer. Come down and let us talk the matter over."

"I will go to-morrow," said Paul to himself, reading the sad words for the twentieth time, and then resuming his work heavy-hearted.

He was baffled too. The memory that troubled him had grown clear in his brain, but he was not sure as yet of one or two circumstances that he must be sure of before he could rest.

That same evening he sat by the open window, smoking and dreaming in the warm dusk. The quiet street was quieter than ever. The shadows gathered densely in his room, but he did not light the gas. His day's work was over and this inclination of his to sit thinking in the dark had become a habit, and one that he did not care to shake off. Like his soliloquisings, it was one of the strange ways that had grown upon him in those back years of his life, when, as yet, living alone had been a novelty to him. A man who had known changes in his life was this Paul Knox.

Sitting smoking, as if he had no other aim but to consume the tobacco in his huge pipe as quickly as he could, his thoughts were very busy. In the room facing his, across the street, a young music teacher lived. She, too, has been sitting dreaming dreams in the dusk; but time to her meant money—of that she had none to waste. When the servant came into her room to light the gas, Paul could see the young teacher standing by the centre table, bending her head over the little glass jar of flowers that stood upon it. She made quite a pretty picture for that half minute before the blind was drawn down and she was shut away from his view.

Paul Knox seemed to think so, for, looking at her, he grew suddenly elate. He laid his pipe down. He walked to and fro between the door and the window with quick, heavy strides—a man who began to see light ahead in some way or other—a man whose mind was doing battle with its difficulties, and mastering them little by little.

"I see it all. At the worst you can only battle me. And if I am right, my lady, beware! I never could bear the sight of you."

He spoke almost fiercely, gazing straight before him with intent eyes, as though he saw some other face looking back into his through the shadows.

People calling next day to ask for Mr. Knox were informed that he had gone out of town, and that it was not known when he would be back.

"I may be away only a few days, or I may be away a few months" he said, in his odd way to the landlady; "but don't think you have got rid of me, for you haven't. I'm pretty sure to get back to you some time."

* * * * * * *

"And so you did not expect me. You thought perhaps I would never return to see you again?" And Paul Knox, holding Ethel's hands, and looking down into her face with kindly eyes. He had just walked in from the station, and she did not dream that he had been sent for.

"I thought you might come back some day, when you had tired of making money, but I never expected to see you so soon as this."

"That may show you the folly of expecting anything in this world; for the good things that are to come to us will come if nothing should happen to hinder them on their way. And you see nothing has hindered my visit."

She laughed at him, and he smiled gaily back.

The short interval she was out of the way—gone to see after something for him to eat—he was serious enough, and troubled enough also. When she came in again, he was lounging back among the cushions of her low chair by the window, looking so comfortable and contented that trouble would appear never to have touched him.

"He was as hungry as a hunter," he told her, "and ready to devour anything and everything;" yet he ate but little, and seemed more anxious to converse than she ever before remembered.

When this pretence of a meal was over he went back to his seat by the window where he could look out on the garden, and the crags, and the turquoise sea trembling in the hot, breathless noontide.

"I like to sit here," he remarked to her very seriously, "because, when I am tired of talking with you, I can look out on that pretty picture, and forget you are in the world."

"I see you are as candid as ever," replied Ethel, sitting down near to him, quite content to be forgotten at his pleasure.

She felt strangely glad to see him again. He was some one fresh to chat with—some one who would neither pity nor grow to avoid her, as others had done, falling away one by one like the dead leaves when the first keen Autumn winds sweep by them.

"Tell me all the news—every little scrap," said Paul. "But first, when will your father be home?"

"Not till evening. He has gone to visit a friend of Mr. Grant—six miles from this, I think, he lives, across the country."

"Very good. and how is Mr. Grant? Married, I suppose, and settled by this time?"

"Oh no, he is not married. Why should you expect him to be?"

Ethel looked up, a shade of surprise in her eyes, a faint tinge of red sweeping over her face, when she found he had been watching her.

"I don't really know why I expected it, I'm sure. He was certainly grim enough and stiff enough to live and die an old bachelor."

The colour deepened.

"I don't consider him grim or stiff; I think he is one of the best of men, and one of the kindest too," said Ethel.—"So do I!" cried Paul, heartily.

She gave up trying to understand him after that, and he smiled a little at her puzzled face, with that tell-tale shade of annoyance on it.

"And the Thorntons? What of them? The young fellow is married, isn't he to that pretty girl who used to come here with him sometimes?"

"To Vivienne Stuart, you mean. Yes, they are married a year ago—a year to the very month, for this is the first of September."

"Of course they are happy and all the rest of it?" Paul spoke carelessly, but his eyes were keen to notice every change of the face before him.

"I think they are. He is very fond of her. And no wonder, for she is very beautiful. I don't think they could be a lovelier face than hers."

"That is only your fancy. You were always fond of her, I remember."

"No," she said, flushing a little, "I was not. I admire her, and like her too in one way, but I never could be fond of her, I think."

"Why couldn't you?" asked Paul.

"I don't know, I'm sure; and this is the strangest part of it."

"Well, I never could be fond of her either," said Paul Knox, emphatically—"no, not if she were a million times handsomer than she is."

"Why not?" asked Ethel, questioning him as he had questioned her.

"I don't clearly know; and, if I did, I would not tell you seeing that the woman is your friend and near neighbour: but, though I never could be fond of her, I'd like to see her again."

"Then you must come with me or with my father to the Manor," said Ethel. "She never visits here now, and indeed she does not go out much at all since old Mrs. Thornton has been so ill."

Paul opened his eyes wide at the news.

"What has been the matter with her?"

"She had a kind of low fever some time ago, and it has left her feeble. She has not been able to leave her room for weeks. They will all be glad to see you, I know. We often talk about you."

"Indeed! That sounds serious. Pray what do you say about me?" inquired Paul.

"Oh, all sorts of things," she answered demurely—"some of them good, some of them bad; but I shall not repeat them now."

"Very well—keep your own counsel; but of course, if I hear any evil reports, I shall know whence they have originated," he said, laughing.

He turned his face from her, and, looking out on the shady garden and the glistening sea, seemed to forget her presence altogether, as he had told her he should, when tired of her.

Doctor West, coming back earlier than was expected, and seeing Paul Knox, with his hat on the back of his head, smoking his big pipe among the roses with the air of a man who felt at home, gave him a hearty welcome.

"It was so unsufferably hot in town, that I thought I'd run down here and get a breath of fresh air, to set me up for my Winter's work," said Paul, meaningly, as he shook the Doctor's hand. "Are you sorry to see me?"

Doctor West smiled, pushing the damp hair back from his forehead.

"So much, that I don't care to tell you. Surely you knew I should be."

The Doctor was hot and tired, and anxiety showed in his face strongly. Paul Knox had not looked so well for months; and yet the likeness between them, sauntering over the long grass in the delicate gray twilight, was so strong that Ethel, meeting them, saw it, and wondered. Walking betwixt them, she put her wonderings into words.

"I never knew until this moment," she said to Paul, "that you were like my father. You might easily pass for his younger brother."

Doctor West smiled. Paul Knox, coming to a sudden halt, flushed hotly, and, were it not for the dimness, they could have seen tears in his eyes.

That night, sitting in the little study, with the window wide open, and the lamp lit between them, Paul Knox and Doctor West talked together.

"Tell me everything from the very beginning," Paul had said to him.

Everything took long to tell. And when it was told, it did not amount to much. Gilbert Thornton, knowing well that he could not live, had told Doctor West candidly that he loved Ethel. Perhaps the Doctor, shrewd and observant, had guessed as much before, but he did not say so. It could have done no good, it might have done harm, for Gilbert's sore heart was sensitive. That he intended leaving her any money he had not hinted. The will was made long before he knew that Jocelyn loved, or had asked her to be his wife.

"The date proved that to me," the Doctor said.

"And did Jocelyn ask her to marry him?"

"Yes, he did, and that privately too, without a word about it. But he told Gilbert," replied Doctor West.

"Well, did he object?" inquired Paul.

"On the contrary, he was pleased; a mixed pleasure you may be sure it was, but still a true one. In all things Gilbert was true to the core," Doctor West said, his eyes glistening. He told no more than the truth when he said he had loved Gilbert Thornton.

"Perhaps," went on the Doctor, "he knew his brother's real nature; perhaps he wished to conquer the love in his own heart before he saw her given over to another; but whatever it was, Gilbert had some reason, a good one he told me on his death-bed, for wishing the engagement kept secret for a while. And so they managed it should be, from me. Mrs. Thornton knew of it, and, soon after she came, so did Vivienne Stuart; but no one named a word of it to me."

A sore spot still in the father's heart was this guarded secret—the one thing about which his little daughter had not been frank with him. And yet after all it had not been her fault but theirs. The girl was shy and proud, and did not care to speak before she was allowed, and so they ruled her.

"After a while Jocelyn cooled. He began to find that he loved Ethel no longer, but that he loved Vivienne Stuart instead. And he chafed over his engagement, as men will when they grow tired of such contracts, for he wanted to marry Vivienne and let my Ethel go by."

"I should not have thought it of him," said Paul Knox. "For once in my life I have been deceived by a frank face. I thought him one of the finest young fellows I had ever met, and a perfect gentleman."

Doctor West smiled a little bitterly. He had not forgiven Jocelyn yet, nor forgotten the pain he had brought into his darling's life, and into his own through hers.

"He is a fine fellow in one way," replied the Doctor. "Like a good many others in the world, he is all right and smooth as long as he gets what he wants; but he has one fault—one sin I call it—and that is selfishness. Well, Gilbert and he quarrelled, for the first time perhaps since they were grown men, about this Vivienne. Gilbert declared that Jocelyn would never marry her; Jocelyn declared that he would. I heard it all from the mother long afterwards, when the hearing of it could do no good. It seems that the very night Gilbert died he told Jocelyn, in so many words, that if he did not give up all thoughts of marrying Vivienne, he would make a will the next day—which he could have done had he been spared—and leave the Manor away from him."

Paul Knox rose up, his face flushed, his eyes sparkling.

"And did she hear this?"

"I don't know," answered the Doctor, "but I should think not. It is not likely she would."

"And that was the night you sent her here for the medicine you had forgotten to bring with you?" continued Paul.

Doctor West stared.

"I did not send her. She came late, and it was of her own will she did so, that Jocelyn might not leave his brother. I remember that I thought it at the time a brave thing for her to do, and a generous one too."

"And what other medicine did you order her to mix with that which you had forgotten, before she brought it back?"

Paul, as he asked the question, was standing by the table, his back to the light, looking up at the bottles labelled on the shelves before him.

Doctor West turned pale and then red. His right hand, lying on the table, clenched sharply a tiny pearl paper-cutter of Ethel's he had been playing with, shivering it to atoms.

"Why do you ask me that, Paul?" His voice was harsh and low, and not at all in its natural tone.

Hearing him, Paul turned round. With the instinct of a strong love, he divined the cause of the half-angry, half-wistful look in the Doctor's eyes.

"I have a good reason for asking. Coming into the house that very night, I stopped out there before the window to look into this room, seeing it lighted and the blind being but half down. Standing there, with my own eyes I saw that girl take down a bottle, a small one—I don't see one like it here—and pour out drop after drop from it into the one on your table—the one that she afterwards took away with her, and brought to you that night. I noticed that she was agitated, but I thought nothing of it then; I put it down to her long dark walk and a girlish dread of trouble. What I wondered at was, that you, whom I knew to be so careful, should let a stranger meddle with your drugs. But my brain was full of other things, and the incident passed out of my memory."

Paul had spoken fast, eager to chase the pain out of the face before him; and after he had ended, there was silence in the room—a silence pulsing with the excitement which all feel when a great discovery is at hand.

Doctor West was first to break it. He was not angry, but very stern and rigid—a man full of thoughts that troubled him, bringing dark suggestions in their train, which could not well be met.

"What was the bottle like from which she poured those drops, Paul? Should you know it again if you saw it?"

"At once. It was small—about so big." Paul held up one of his fingers. "It was round, with a glass stopper, carved—I saw it plainly—and it had writing on a narrow label."

Doctor West, still very pale, shivered.

"Did you read what was on it?"

"No. How could I? I didn't want the girl to see me staring at her in that stupid way. But she looked so beautiful, that I could not help it; and all the time something in her face surprised me."

Doctor West, going across the room, opened one drawer after another in an old oak bureau that filled one corner of the little study. He was looking for something; and Paul, sitting down in the big chair where Vivienne had sat that night, talked on while he looked.

"Do you know," he said, "from the first time of reading your letter, that girl seemed to me to be mixed up with the affair in my mind. I could not help thinking that she was at the bottom of it in some way. The memory of her tampering with the bottles came back to me, but I could not recall what she had been doing with them—that is, not clearly. I don't think I should have remembered the circumstances at all but for something that freshened up the picture of her as she appeared to me that night. It was a peep I got in London at a young teacher, in a room opposite mine, leaning over a table, while the servant lit the gas above her head. I dare say the girl is not a bit like Vivienne, but her attitude and her face, with the strong light flung upon it, brought back that half-forgotten memory just as I needed it, and made me see Vivienne in my own mind as I had seen her that night. You may think what I say odd, silly, if you like, but it is true for all that. I was stuck fast for one thing, though. I could not, for the life of me, patch up a motive for her doing such an act; but you have found me one. She heard Gilbert Thornton tell Jocelyn he should never marry her."

Doctor West returned to the side of Paul and held out a little glass-stoppered bottle towards him, between his eyes and the light.

"Is that like it?"—"That is it," cried Paul, eagerly.

He took it into his own hand, and looked closely at it.

"See, it is about the size I said, and the stopper too is carved."

He had turned the labelled side round by then, and he read the writing upon it. Only one word there—"Poison." Hastily he laid the bottle down. The Doctor, standing beside him, expectant, said not a word.

Paul had begun to have some idea of the mystery, but the truth, bare and simply, appalled him. He had talked the affair over coolly enough since he had been in that room, but with the bottle in his hand he realised the full meaning of his words thoroughly, perhaps, for the first time.

Taking up the bottle after a while, the Doctor explained to him in a few words the nature of the essence it contained—namely, a vegetable poison, subtle, powerful, not to be detected by the minutest scrutiny, once it had entered the system and mixed with the blood.

"It brings on a sleep," he said, "that is deep, peaceful, seemingly natural and refreshing, but which in the end is fatal. Gilbert, before my own eyes, died as one would die who had taken a strong dose of this poison; and I never dreamed of the truth."

He was trembling excessively, and the shadows the lamplight threw on his face made it seem ghastly. Ignorant of Gilbert's real state at the time, and innocent of the cause, the Doctor was now wrecked with a horror of remorse thinking of it all. That Gilbert should have met death from his hand—for he had held the mixture to his lips—seemed to him most horrible. His eyes filled with bitter tears of pity which were vain—of self-blame which he did not merit.

Paul Knox, scarcely less agitated, sat and thought the matter over in silence.

NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrised.

NOT THE SLIGHTEST AFFINITY exists between the numberless cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct, itself, and nothing else. It embodies the best results of pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive, decisive results, effectually relieving coughs when the lungs are not tuberculous or hopelessly affected) colds, larnygitis and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure Consumption it is the most reliable means of defence against that dreaded scourge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing emollient action of the cod liver oil upon the inflamed lung mebrane. The phosphorus, lime and soda, in combination with it are all natural components in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of those elements. These the hypophosphites supply, increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tottering human structure with a degree of promptitude as astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both time and experience have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

Little Brown Hands.

Boy drive home the cows from the pasture,
Up through the long shady lane,
Where the quail whistles loud in the wheat-fields,
That are yellow with ripening grain.
They find, in the thick, waving grasses,
Where the scarlet-lipped strawberry grows,
Tempting for the earliest snow-drops
And the first crimson buds of the rose.

They find the hay in the meadow;
They gather the elder-blooms white;
They find where the dusky grapes purple
In the soft-tinted October light.
They know where the apples hang ripest,
And are sweeter than Italy's wines;
They know where the fruit hangs the thickest
On the long, thorny blackberry vines.

They gather the delicate sea-weeds;
And build tiny castles of sand;
They pick up the beautiful sea-shells—
Fairy barks that have drifted to land.
They where from the cold, rocking tree-tops,
Where the oriole's hammock nest swings,
And at night-time are folded in slumber
By a song that a fond mother sings.

These that toil bravely are strongest;
The humble and poor become great;
And from these brown-handed children
Shall grow nobly rulers of state.
The pen of the author and statesman,
The noble and wise of the land—
The sword, the chisel, and palette,
Shall be held in the little brown hand.

FARM, GARDEN AND HOUSEHOLD.

The use of Salt as a Fertilizer.

We give another section of the summary of testimony at to the value of salt as a fertilizer given in the report of the Agricultural Commission. The report says:—Mr. John Moore, of North Dumfries in the county of Waterloo, who was one of the witnesses examined during the sittings of the commissioners at Galt, has recently substituted salt for gypsum, which he had been using for many years, and had found the change advantageous. He had applied salt to his turnip crop with benefit, and it is important to notice that its effects appeared to be maintained upon his crop of barley, which followed the crop of turnips. The barley, he says, ripened sooner, the sample was brighter, the straw stood up better, and, so far as the appearance went, he thinks he had double the yield. The salt had been applied in the very moderate quantity of 100 pounds to the acre. It may be fairly open to question whether the salt alone produced the benefit on the barley to so great an extent as Mr. Moore attributes to it, but it appeas to be quite certain that, previous to the application of the salt, barley-growing had been unsuccessful on Mr. Moore's farm, and that, after the application of the salt, he obtained a fair average crop. He has also tried the experiment of using salt on a strip of land adjacent to other portions to which no salt was applied; the effect, he says, was that the crop (of turnips) was better all through the season. The use of salt, he states, is becoming very general in his locality. It is hardly necessary to say that, in common with all other good farmers, he uses salt very largely in feeding his cattle.,

Mr. Thompson, of Brooklin, a very observant and careful farmer, thinks that the salt is beneficial as a fertilising agent, and while he agrees with others that it produces stiffness in the straw, he adds that it had the effect of absorbing the moisture from the atmosphere, and keeping the land moist in dry seasons. He applies it very liberally mixed with droppings from the hen-coop. He uses Goderich salt, which can be delivered in Brooklin at $6 a ton.

Mr. Walter Riddle, of Cobourg, has noticed the very decided effects of salt on root crops, both as regards the tops and roots. He says:—"I have experimented very carefully with salt and am quite convinced of its beneficial effects no mangolds and Swedish turnips."

Mr. Richard Rennelson, of North Dumfries, at Galt, went rather minutely into his experiments with salt. He says:—"I have used salt for some three or four years. I have tried it mostly on all crops. In our barley field this season, there had been a crop of wheat the year previous. This field was ploughed in the fall by three horses—deep ploughed—and manured during the winter; about eight good waggon loads of manure to the acre were applied to it; and in the spring we sowed our salt before touching the land, about 200 pounds to the acre. This was harrowed and gang-plowed in; but across the field, taking a fair average of the soil, I left unsalted a strip six yards wide. On about fifty yards of this unsaulted part, however, I put the manure doubly thick, and when it came near harvest time the difference was very marked. Some of my neighbors saw the barley, and it was the universal opinion that the un-salted part would not yield more than one-half what the other did, partly because it was broken down and did not ripen.

Mr. Hobson, of Wellington, mentioned that some years ago he had fifteen acres of wheat in one field with a clay loam soil and undulating land. He selected ten acres, upon which he put salt, and left the other five acres without any. The result, he says, was, "The wheat sown on the five acres without salt fell down as almost worthless, while the other stood up and was very fine." He has used salt ever since, generally applying about four hundred weight to the acre.

The Oshawa Farmer's Club on "Dairying and Feeding."

The important subject of "Dairying" was discussed at the last meeting of the Oshawa farmer's club. The discussion was not as interesting as usual. A suggestive remark was made by Mr. L. Mackie who said that to have a beef worth $100 each year it was necessary to have a cow, a calf, a yearling, a two year old and a three year old. Thus for the $100 you have to feed four animals. This would keep four milch cows, and these cows fed as the beef cattle would be, would yield more than could be got for the beef and the cows got what the others would not eat. Then they complained that butter-making would not pay. A good cow, well fed, should produce 300 lbs. per annum. This, at 20c. would give $60 per cow. But, taking the yield at 200 lbs., and the price only 15 cents, then the four cows would yield $120, and the milk would pay for the cost of milking and butter-making. This gave a profit of $50 over beef.... Mr. Camplin said four beef cows would eat more than the four beef aninals.... Mr. Lick said, that if cows were fed like beef animals, and get as well bred cows as a beef animal that would make $100, at three years' the yield would be from 300 to 400 lbs. of butter per annum.... Mr. Mackie said he did not think the butter was not better now than previously. He did not believe that the butter could not be improved until a market was established here. The sort of butter brought here would be driven out of the Port Hope market. The quality of butter was improved in Whitby on account of the market. The shop keepers would not grade the butter, and so long as all sorts of butter would bring the same price, it would not be improved.... Mr. Camplin said rented farmers were not in a position to make butter, as they had not proper appliances. He put very little value on the skim milk; he thought it would not pay the cost of the labor of dairying.... Mr. Lick said, whey, which was much poorer than skim milk, was considered to be worth $5 per per annum. He thought that fed to pigs the skim milk would pay for the labor. He said the quality of salt was a most important thing. He found nothing equal to Ashton salt. The Canadian and the American was not good for best butter.

On the Renovating of Worn-out Lands

Farms which have become run down by a long series of exhaustive croppings are too numerous in this country. How to restore these lands to fruitfulness and make them yield a paying crop is a problem which is now forcing itself on Canadian farmers for their consideration. Let them not shirk it, but meet it fairly and solve it. The longer farmers put off making an attempt to improve their farms the more difficult will the improvement become. Everyone knows that manure will increase the fertility of the soil, and that it is want of manure that causes cultivated lands to become barren. If a farmer thinks he would like to attempt the improvement of his worn-out farm he usually finds that he has no manure on hand and no money to purchase it; for a poor farm usually makes the farmer poor. So he goes on cropping the land the same as ever until he can live no longer on it and is then compelled to sell out and rent a farm or commence life again on a new farm.

The first step to be taken in the renovation of a worn-out farm is to under-drain it if it needs it. This of itself will often double the crops. Manure, tillage and seed are wasted when put on wet, undrained land. But when the land is drained it gets the full benefit of the manure, is made warmer, and can be cultivated earlier in the spring and later in the fall. The drains take away the excess of moistare in a wet time, and by keeping the soil porous enable it to absorb moisture from the atmosphere in a dry time. We are glad to see that the practice of under-draining is on the increase in this county, because we believe it to be one of the most profitable investments a farmer can make.

The increase of the quantity and quality of the manure pile should be another object aimed at. The best way of doing this is to keep more and better cattle, feed them well and see that none of the manure is wasted. If more cattle are kept less grain must be grown and more roots and green feed. This green feed being consumed upon the farm and the manure returned to the land, the more of it we feed the richer our farms must become. Thus each year a farmer can raise a larger quantity of fodder because his land is getting richer, and the more fodder he has the more cattle he can feed, and thus make a larger quantity of manure, which being applied to the same number of acres as the less quantity in former years the land is thereby constantly being increased in fertility, and with increase of the fertility of his farm the farmer's profits must also increase.

Plowing under green crops is often recommended as a means of increasing the productiveness of a farm. But the trouble with this plan is that a run-down farm will produce but a very small crop to plow under and plowing under a light crop does very little good. Hence in the adoption of this plan it will be necessary to use some artificial manure, as superphosphate or guano, to stimulate the soil to produce a heavier growth than than it naturally would. The best crop for plowing under is red clover. On a very poor soil, however, buckwheat might be the best plant to start with.

Thorough and frequent tillage is another important point that must be attended to. Many good farmers think that tillage is the best and cheapest manure that farmers have within their reach. Joseph Harris says, "that tillage and manure are one and the same thing is an important fact." Cultivation by loosening the texture of the soil gives it the power of absorbing moisture from the atmosphere, makes the fertilizing elements in the soil available to plants, and destroys weeds.

Rotation of crops must also be attended to. Until the land gets some of its strength restored there should be very few grain crops grown. As much clover should be grown as possible and a crop of it frequently turned under.

In attempting the renovation of a worn-out farm it is well not to attempt too much at once. The process of exhaustion has been gradual; the process of renovation must also be gradual, but it must be continuous. "Make haste slowly" is a good maxim to be guided by. But let some progress be made each year, such as draining, more thorough tillage, the adoption of a good rotation of crops, feeding an extra animal, and feeding better those on hand. In this way any farmer can gradually work his farm into a high state of cultivation.

The Family Doctor.

FELON.—A certain cure for a felon is said to be to wind a cloth loosely about the finger, leaving the end free. Pour in common gunpowder till the affected part is entirely covered. Keep the whole wet with strong spirits of camphor.

SANITARY ERRORS.—1. To believe that the more hours children are at their studies the faster they learn. 2. To believe that the more a person eats the stronger and fatter he will become. 3. To believe that if exercise is good for one it should be taken at all hours and seasons, the more violent the better the result. 4. To imagine that the smallest room in the house is large enough to sleep in. 5. To eat without appetite. 6. To eat a hearty supper the last thing at night.

HOW TO TREAT A COLD.—When you get chilly all over and away into your bones, and begin to sniffle and almost struggle for your breath, just begin in time and your tribulation need not last very long. Get some powdered borax and snuff the dry powder up your nostrils. Get your camphor bottle and smell it frequently; pour some on your handkerchief, and wipe your nose with it when ever needed. Your nose will not get sore, and you will soon wonder what has become of your cold. Begin this treatment in the forenoon and keep on at intervals until you go to bed, and you will sleep as well as ever you did.

CURE FOR DIPHTHERIA.—Dr. H. P. Guthrie, of St. Paul, Minn., highly recommends iodine as a cure for that fell disease, diphtheria. His method of treatment is this: "The patient is ordered tincture of iodine in ten or twelve drop doses every hour, diluted with water, so long as the fever lasts, subsequently reducing it to ten drops every two, and finally every three hours; local applications of the drug are made use of at the same time. These later should be made by the physician himself at least twice a day. For internal use, I give, latterly, the decolorized tincture; bread and starchy articles of diet are at the same time used in abundance. Such is my treatement."

A gentleman of 77, and a lady of 72, were married at Belleville on the 16th.

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand, yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes of adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 40c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

MORSE'S PAIN RELIEF!

A Favorite prescription of a celebrated New York Physician, for the IMMEDIATE RELIEF OF ALL PAIN.

Twice as powerful as any known remedy. Four times as quick in its action. Sold at the low price of 25 cents a large Bottle. The following testimonials of the great number received will show most conclusively the remarkable merit of the Relief.

EASTWOOD, ONT., March 5th, 1880.

"I am gratified to hear from various quarters that your medicine is doing wonders. As an instance, one man received a severe blow from a block of wood thrown from a circular saw. It struck him in the thick part of the leg, so injuring him as to render him unable to walk. Two applications of Morse's Pain Relief cured him. I might multiply instances." JOS. EDMUNDS, Druggist.

CHATHAM, ONT., Sept., 14, 1880.

"Your Pain Relief gives general satisfaction; in fact I believe I sell more of it than all other pain remedies put together." J. C. Bright, M. D. and Druggist.

CHESTERVILLE, ONT., June, 25, 1880.

"All speak highly of your Pain Remedy, and I have much pleasure in recommending it as a good and reliable medicine." CHAS. T. CARSELMAN.

BRUSSELS, ONT., Aug. 26, 1880.

"I hereby certify that my son has suffered for six years with a pain in the thigh, had tried a great number of things which did no good. He has been completely cured by one bottle of Morse's Pain Relief which was obtained at your agent in Brussels (Wm. Grahame, M. D.)" GEORGE CROOKS.

STRATHROY, ONT., July 5, 1880.

"For the benefit of suffering humanity I write you of the great value of your Pain Relief. I was suffering from a bruised thumb and leg, and by its use obtained immediate relief and in 2 days I was entirely well." GEO. M. FRANCIS, Baker and Confectioner.

FIVE TESTIMONIALS From EASTWOOD, ONT., SHOWING MORSE'S PAIN RELIEF Cured the following: Diarrhœa, Deafnes Swollen Face, Toothache, Cold, Headache and Pain in the Stomach.

No. 1. Used a trial bottle for a much swollen face with instant relief. A relative used the relief for deafness and to her surprise was perfectly cured. (Signed) S. G. ROBINSON

No. 2. Having suffered much with toothache, I concluded to try your Pain Relief. One application gave me instant relief. I also cured a violent cold I had contracted with the remedy. (Signed) MR. E. HERBEE.

MILLINERY

1881.—SPRING.—1881.

Our Millinery and Mantle Show Rooms will be opened at an early date, when we hope to have the favour of a visit from all Ladies who would like to inspect the LATEST NOVELTIES IN STYLES AND DESIGNS.

These Departments are now under the supervision of MISS MCPHERSON, who has had a large experience in both Town and City trade, and we can assure our lady friends that all orders entrusted to her care for either MILLINERY or MANTLES, will be executed in a most satisfactory manner.

The variety of odds and ends which, when grouped together, constitute a Millinery Department, is so great that any detailed description of them is both superfluous and impossible. We would much prefer that our customers and lady friends would come and see our display for themselves on the opening days. Suffice it, therefore, to say here, that the stock has been selected with that taste and judgment which a knowledge of the trade and the requirements of our customers has given us, and that our prices are on the ONLY BASIS COMPATIBLE WITH LEGITIMATE TRADE.

MANTLES:—In Silk Pattern Mantles we are showing very rich goods, surpassing in finish anything we have hitherto seen in made-up goods.

Made-up Ulsters, Circulars, and Meltons, Diagonal and Cashmere Mantles.

The Order Department is under efficient superintendence, and a fit is GUARANTEED EVERY TIME.

KILLED IN THE WOODS. A man named William Mills, while getting out wood near Warsaw last Sunday was struck on the head by a falling limb and instantly killed.

PETERBOROUGH CRICKET CLUB. This Club will hold its annual meeting at the Huffman House next Tuesday evening, when the election of officers for the ensuing year will take place, and general business connected with the coming season be discussed.

OUT AGAIN. The many friends of Dr. Harvey will be pleased to learn that he has completely recovered from his recent attack of illness and has been about the streets for a week past looking as full of health and vigor as if nothing had ever ailed him.

HELP YOUR TOWN. Says an exchange: "Either run your town with a vim, or just get up and leave it. One or two things should be done; push things; find means or a way to put some go-ahead into the business; run the town for all there is in it; get steam up and keep it up, or else quit the whole thing. Vamoose the ranche; slide out and let nature have her own way. Do you want trade? Bid for it. Do you want business men to come to town? Encourage those who do come. Do you want to have a prosperous town where people can come disposed to make it their home? Then do away with, bury from sight all local difference, all jealousy, all spite; work no more for a few individuals, but all work together for a common prosperity and for a mutual benefit. Wake up, rub your eyes, roll up your sleeves, and go to work. Don't go to work with fear and trembling, but take it for granted that work will tell. Leave results to themselves, borrow no trouble, but all unite and make the biggest kind of a try.

DEAF AND DUMB INSTITUTE.—We have received from Mr. R. Matheson, Superintendent of this Institute, a copy of his annual report. It shows that of the 496 pupils received in the Institute since its opening, there were 11 from Peterborough County,—9 males and 2 females.

SHEPARD COMPANY.—The entertainment of this company at Bradburn's Hall on Tuesday evening was liberally patronized, and a very good programme of songs and character sketches was carried out. The audience testified their appreciation by repeated applause.

FINANCIAL.—It is understood that the credit of last year's accounts will exhibit a surplus of some $3,000. This speaks well for the persistent insistance on economy by Messrs. Menzies, Denne and McNaughton. We hope the new Council will give an equally good account of themselves.

SHIPMENT OF CATTLE.—On Thursday Mr. Jas. Howden shipped for Montreal by the Grand Junction Railway, a car load of very fine cattle. These cattle have been sold to Montreal butchers for the Easter market, showing that Peterborough is beginning to attract attention abroad as a district for the supply of superior cattle.

HORSES.—The demand for horses in this vicinity of late has been unprecedented. Nearly the whole surplus stock of horses has been called in by the dealers, the animals being shipped to the United States. The prices paid have been liberal, and a very large amount of money has thus been added to our local circulation.

SCHOOL TRUSTEE ELECTION.—The election of a School Trustee for the South Ward, ordered by the Judge, consequent upon the voiding of the former election, took place yesterday, when T. W. Robinson was nominated by J. R. Stratton, seconded by S. White. There being no other nominations, Mr. Robinson was returned by acclamation.

FIRE IN SOUTH MONAGHAN. A house in South Monaghan, owned by Mr. A. Goodfellow of Springville, and occupied by Archibald Stewart, was consumed by fire on Sunday last, while the family were away at church. Most of the household goods were saved by the exertions of the neighbors. Loss about $800; insurance $500 in the London Mutual.

NEW SONG.—We have been favored with a copy of "That Sunny Ray of Love," by Miss H. L. Stratton, of Etchemin, Que., and published by Lavigne. The Quebec Morning Chronicle says of it: "The title page is a gem of art. The music is bright and cheerful, and the words are eminently replete with charm and sentiment. This song ought to meet with favor, as it belongs to that attractive class to which one can always revert with a feeling of pleasure. Altogether, this pretty song is sure to make many friends."

METHODIST APPOINTMENTS. We understand Rev. Mr. Jeffrey, of Cobourg, has been invited to replace Rev. Dr. Harper in the ministry of the George-street Methodist Church, at the expiry of the latter's period of incumbency. Rev. J. E. Starr, of the Charlotte-street Church, has been invited to remain for another year. Dr. Harper will be parted with with regret, but the itinerant system makes it compulsory. We are glad to know that Rev Mr. Starr is to be with us for a time longer.

GOOD FRIDAY. Friday the 15th April being Good Friday and a general public holiday, advantage has been taken of the day by the Fire Brigade Band to organize the first excursion party from Peterborough to Belleville. While in Belleville the band will be the guests of the 15th Batt. Band, since the acceptance of whose invitation, Mr. E. McCabe, the Secretary, has received other invitations, one from the Odd Fellows Band the other from the Fire Brigade. Evidently Belleville is laying itself out to do the amiable.

ELEGANT EQUIPPAGE.—Messrs. Fitzgerald & Stanger are about completing at their establishment, corner of Brock and Water streets, one of the finest equippages, probably the finest, ever turned out by them. It is a hearse, for the business of Mr. D. Belleghem, Undertaker, and when completed will be one of the finest in the Dominion. The design is after that in vogue in New York, and is unexcelled for elegance and richness. No expense is being spared in its fittings, and when completed it will be a credit to both the skill of the builders, as well as the enterprise of Mr. Belleghem. 13-1t

EGGS BY WEIGHT. Several of our exchanges have, of late, been advocating the selling of eggs by weight, and there is no reason why our dealers should continue to buy and sell eggs by the dozen instead of by weight. There is no more justice in a consumer or a retail dealer being forced to pay a certain price for a lot of eggs that will only weigh 17 or 18 ounces, and some lots as low as 14 ounces, when the next customer may get for the same price a lot that will weigh from 22 to 24 ounces, than there is in selling short-weight canned goods or raisins.

PICTURESQUE CANADA. I beg to inform my friends and patrons that I have severed my connection with The Art Publishing Co. (Messrs. Belden Brothers), and their intended publication entitled "Picturesque Canada." I have done so as recent developments preclude the possibility of my placing before the community what I could not confidently recommend. I shall endeavor to protect the interests of those whose patronage I have received. I hereby also state that I have neither directly nor indirectly been connected with Messrs. Belden Brothers for the sale of their maps or Atlases in Canada or elsewhere. S. MARTEL DAVIES. Toronto, March 12, 1881. 13-2t

STOPPING YOUR PAPER.—Once upon a time a man got mad at the Editor and stopped his paper. The next week he sold his corn at four cents below the market price. Then his property was sold for taxes, because he didn't read the sheriff's sales. He was arrested and fined $8 for going hunting on Sunday; and he paid $300 for a lot of forged notes that had been advertised two weeks and the public cautioned not to negotiate them. He then paid a big Irishman, with a foot like a stonehammer, to kick him all the way to the newspaper office, where he paid four years' subscription in advance, and made the editor sign an agreement to knock him down and rob him if he ever ordered his paper stopped again. Such is life without a newspaper.—Ex.

A WORD TO THE WISE.—One of the most extensive and shrewdest of our business men, who advertises with excellent judgment in all the papers, informed us the other day that in order to estimate the comparative value of his advertising in different journals, he had enquired of his customers, during a period of three months, to ascertain in what paper they had seen the advertisement which had attracted them to his establishment. The result was that he concluded that he received two customers through his EXAMINER advertisement to one from any other source. We withhold the name of the firm for obvious reasons, but the publishers of the Review are welcome to it if they desire further information.

THE SCHOOL BOARD.

The Review says of the recent session of the School Board:—"We believe that this is the first meeting of any public body ever held in this town that has refused the admission to the press, and it is due to the people that such work be put down at once with a strong hand. We do not want to impute anything wrong regarding any of the Board, as we are fully convinced that they are all gentlemen, but at the same time we cannot but give it as our opinion that they made a great mistake in acting as they did. If there is anything wrong with any of the teachers, or anything to be said regarding any of them, the ratepayers, who are heavily taxed to pay the salaries, have a perfect right to become acquainted with the facts, and there is no way for them to find out except through the local newspapers. We have no doubt that the trustees in acting as they did thought they were acting in the best interests of the school, but at the same time we know that the large majority of the ratepayers are opposed to these secret meetings, and firmly believe that the representatives of the press have a perfect right to be present and report proceedings at every meeting of the Town Council or School Board, whether open or in committee, as they firmly believe that all public matters should be dealt with openly and above board. The ratepayers, however, will have a chance of finding out how their representatives voted, when the salary question comes up before the Board, as no doubt some of them will demand the yeas and nays. All kinds of stories are in circulation regarding what was done, and we are positively assured that the salaries were increased by something like $1,000. We refrain from comment, and patiently await further developments."

PERSONAL MENTION.

Rev. I. Campbell, of Richmond Hill, is in town.

Mr. Geo. Stewart, of Toronto, formerly of this town, has been engaged by the new Quebec and Ontario Railway Company, on the survey.

J. R. Benson, of Winnipeg, and M. Huston, Emerson, have been in town for some days past buying horses for the C. P. R. contractors.

Mr. Cahill, Inspector of Weights and Measures has returned from a tour of inspection through the northern part of his district.

Mr. Richard Clurton, of Emerson, Ma., is on a visit to his friends in town.

Mr. N. D. Beck has been appointed a Notary Public.

A Hamilton despatch says that the Midland Railway Company have secured the services of Mr. Harry Nicolls as station agent at Peterborough. He was for seven years the purser of the Royal Mail line steamer Algerian, in which position he was a general favorite with the public as well as the officers of the company.

TRUE AGAIN.—The advertising columns of a good live paper are probably worth as much in a year to the general reader as all the reading matter supplied. If readers would only reflect upon the many ways in which they benefit from the announcements in our advertising columns during a year they would more fully appreciate the value of a newspaper. A friend who has for years been receiving this paper in a distant land, recently declared to us that he considered the advertisements as great a source of information and entertainment to him as the news column. Every one should read the advertisements of a good paper.—Exchange.

GIVING THE PLACE A BAD NAME.—Our contem. the Daily Evening, by its reiterated exaggerated accounts of "bloody rows" and "brutal fights," for the most of which it is indebted to a lively imagination, is giving the place a bad name abroad, as witness this paragraph in the Lindsay Warder:

BECOMING NOTORIOUS.—The many brutal fights which have taken place in Peterboro' is fast establishing a name for the town. The Review tells us of a fight in broad daylight that at first seemed fair enough, but it soon turned to a regular dog fight, both contestants using fists, feet and teeth as each became handiest. The half dozen persons who appeared to be interested spectators, made no attempt to interfere, and they fought until tired out. Fingers, ears and cheeks were cut and bitten, and blood flowed quite freely. As soon as the fight was finished the men separated, each going a different way, looking for a pump to wash off the signs of the conflict.

We trust our esteemed contemporary will see the error of its ways, and desist from a practice which brings discredit on the town. It is bad enough to have to chronicle events of this nature when, at rare intervals, they do occur; but it is poor policy to give outsiders the impression that anarchy and riot rule the streets of Peterborough.

MATRIMONIAL.

A few weeks ago we observed the following paragraph in the Emerson International:—"One by one the roses fall." Mr. Geo. Walton, of the Hardware firm of Walton & Bird, left for his home at Peterborough, Ont., Tuesday. It is said he will return in a few weeks with a bride. Hosts of friends will wish Mr. Walton happiness and prosperity in his new relations. He is one of the deserv- young men of Emerson." The happy event here predicted took place on Monday last at 1.30 o'clock, when Mr. George Walton was united in matrimony to Miss Maggie Robinson, the ceremony taking place at the residence of Mrs. W. J. Walton, a sister of the bride, and being performed by Rev'd's J. W. and Isaac N. Robinson, brothers of the bride. The invited guests were confined to the relatives and a few intimate friends, and the affair passed off very quietly, the bride receiving the usual congratulations and and a number of handsome and valuable presents. The happy couple left in the evening for their western home, where they will be followed by the best wishes of their numerous friends. A great many of their friends bade them adieu from the station.

One Ontario firm paid $25,000 in freight charges last year on importations of agricultural implements from Ontario to Manitoba, and there are many other firms doing a large trade in the same business. Inter-provincial trade is assuming enormous magnitude.

Tuesday's Port Hope Times says:—"A little girl named Annie Hutchinson, four years of age, while at play with some companions yesterday morning, fell and broke her right leg above the knee. Dr. Clemesha was called in and set the limb, but during the night the fractured bone parted, the little sufferer being very restless. The family recently moved in from Bobcaygeon, and are living about a mile out of town, on Cavan-street."

LAND SALT!

TO FARMERS!

The experience of Canadian Farmers during the last few years corroborates almost without exception the benefits to all grain crops by an early and liberal application of LAND SALT. The immediate effects noticeable are the retention of moisture and a marked stiffening of the straw preventing its lodging; thus enabling the kernel more fully to mature.

These effects were fully brought out at the last meeting of the N. and D. Association held in town on the 12th and 13th of January. Many of the most influential members of the Society testified that they had used Land Salt for several years, and always with good results.

In reply to the question as to which kind of Salt was the best, the testimony of all was emphatically in favor of LIVERPOOL SALT. In fact it was stated that one sack of Liverpool Salt was worth from one and a half to two barrels of Goderich Salt.

Liverpool Salt is stronger, it has more vitality, and hence is the most economical to apply. It has been proved to be better than bulk salt, which is the refuse left from refining the finer kinds of barrel salt, also; it is acknowledged to go further and give better results.

WE OFFER TO THE FARMERS

Several Thousand Bags Liverpool Salt,

At 80c. per bag, of 185 lbs. ☞LAND PLASTER in Barrels.☜

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Auditors' Report—A Handsome Surplus—Uniforming the Police—The License Question—Shade Trees By-Law, Etc.

The Council held their regular meeting on Monday evening, His Worship Mayor Smith in the chair. Present,—Messrs. Cahill, McNaughton, Kelly, Paterson, Chamberlain, Yelland, Douglas, Rutherford, Menzies, Hartley and Richardson.

The minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

The Auditors' report was presented and read.

It concluded by stating that: In statement of assets (available) and liabilities (current) submitted by us, we have given the figures as they appear in your accounts as the amounts due to the School Board and the Commissioners of the Trust. These figures do not entirely correspond with the amounts, which by the books of the School Board and of the Trust appear to be due. This discrepancy arising 1st from the fact that your Treasurer debits himself with the actual levy, and in the case of the Commissioners of the Trust he reduces his liabilities $500, which sum he claims is due by the Commissioners to the Town Council on the South Reserve Land Sale Account.

It is, however, very gratifying that at the close of the year 1880 your available assets exceed your current liabilities by $2,500 or $3,000. It is only in very exceptional years that the revenue has exceeded the expenditures.

It having been suggested to us that the town still holds stock to the amount of 3,000 shares in the Midland Railway Company, namely stock subscribed for in the year 1854 in the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company, we have ascertained from J. F. Dennistoun, Esq., the following in relation thereto:

In 1854 the town of Peterborough subscribed for 3,000 shares in the then Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company.

Statement of the position in which the town was in with regard to this stock in the year 1862 appears in the report of the case of Woodruff v. Peterborough.

In 1863 by Cap. 60 of the statutes of the year a certain agreement therein referred to was confirmed and the lien of the town on the railway placed on its present basis.

Port Hope was also interested in the mortgage and made in respect to its stock an arrangement which was confirmed by statute.

In pursuance of which the Port Hope stock was, we learn, transferred to Henry Covert, of Port Hope.

Statute passed in 1864 provided for the surrender of the stock held by the municipalities of Hope and Ops and town of Lindsay, which, we were informed, was acted upon.

Unless something further exists it would seem that Peterborough still holds its 3,000 shares, which in the present improved condition of the road must shortly, if not now, be of considerable pecuniary value. We therefore suggest that the position of the stock and the rights of the town in regard thereto be fully ascertained."

The statement of receipts and expenditures is made up in two audits, one up to June 1, 1880, and the other to Jan. 1, 1881, and as the entries differ, it would have been more satisfactory if the Auditors had given the whole expenditure for the year under the respective headings. We note that for the year the receipts from Police Court were $520.89; Market, $1,230.50; Licenses, $3,720.10. The expenditure under the head of miscellaneous, amounted to $658.17; charities cost $1,174.44; $5,280 of the revenue was handed over to the Town Trust; $9,915.92 went; to High, Public, and Separate Schools Fire Department cost $2,382.90; $550 were expended in special grants; law expenses amounted to $2,241.83; streets and bridges cost $4,772.09; salaries amounted to $2,237.27. The Auditors' statement shows the following:

Mr. Chamberlain presented the report of the Committee on Appointments, recommending the payment of $20 for a uniform for P. C. McGhee. After some discussion the report was adopted, the By-Law to be amended to allow it, Messrs. Cahill, Kelly, Paterson, Yelland, Rutherford, Menzies, Hartley and Richardson voting in favor, and Messrs. McNaughton, Chamberlain and Douglas against.

Mr. Rutherford explained that the reason why the streets were not watered yet was that the pipes were frozen at the end. He thought the difficulty would be overcome by Mr. Johnson in a day or two.

On application of John Cronin, it was agreed that on taking the statutory declaration that he had no dog, the taxes charged him in that connection be struck off.

The By-Law vesting the ownership of shade trees in the owners of property in front of which they were situated, was then taken up in Committee, Mr. Yelland in the chair, reported and passed through its several stages.

SPRING EXHIBITION FOR STALLIONS AND BULLS.

On Saturday last a meeting of the Directors of the West Riding Agricultural Society was held in the room adjoining the Council Chamber for the purpose of completing arrangements for the Spring Exhibitions for Stallions and Bulls, according to a resolution passed at the annual meeting.

The following Directors were present: Jas. Campbell, President, and Jas. Elliott, John Garbutt, Jos. Walton, W. Rutherford, J. J. Bennet, T. E. Bell, and H. Collins.

After the minutes of the last meeting were confirmed the Secretary, Mr. Carnegie, stated that as instructed he had communicated with the East Riding Agricultural Society with reference to their joining the West in holding a Union Show, and received a reply to the effect that they did not wish to join in holding a Union Show this year, but expressed their willingness to join in a Union Ploughing Match in the Fall.

It was then decided, notwithstanding that the East Riding had refused to join, to hold a Spring Show.

Moved by Mr. Walton, seconded by Mr. Garbutt,—That prizes be offered two class of stallions only, viz: for pure-bred Blood and Draught horses.

Moved in amendment by Mr. Elliott,—That in addition to these two classes there be added a third class for General Purpose horses.—Carried.

It was then arranged to offer three prizes in each class:—1st, $8.00; 2nd, $6.00, and 3rd, $4.00.

Moved by Mr. Garbutt, seconded by Mr. Collins,—That prizes be offered for all thoroughbred bulls—Devons, Durhams, Ayrshires, Herefords and Galloways—and that they be classed one, two and three years and over, and two prizes offered in each class, $8.00 for the first prize and $6.00 for the second.—Carried.

In addition to the usual rules the following were added:—Stallions awarded prizes are to remain in the West Riding two days in each week during the season. Bulls awarded prizes must remain in the Riding from date of exhibition until the 1st of September. Exhibitors when making entries are required to sign an agreement to comply with these clauses of the rules. The exhibition is to be held on Saturday the 23rd of April, in the Agricultural Grounds, at one o'clock p.m. Admission ten cents.

The Judges appointed to act in all classes were Messrs. T. N. Willan, South Monaghan; Isaac Watson, Lakefield; and W. Redmond, Cavan.

On motion, Mr. W. H. Robertson, of the Times, addressed the meeting, soliciting a share of the printing and advertising of the Society. The Directors thought that they could not afford to spend money for the sake of patronizing anybody. The meeting then adjourned.

The ice in the Lake up till first of April is apparently quite safe to travel on and will be so probably for two weeks.

Mr. N. Doige has about completed arrangements for making valuable additions to his buildings near Idyl Wild during the coming the coming season. Take out your spy-glass when you are coming down on the Golden-Eye and see at a glance that his farm is an exception to the rule for neatness. His valuable nursery of fruit trees will be considerably improved also during the coming season.

Mr. West (carpenter) and Mr. Kerr (painter) have been engaged for some time remodelling the Presbyterian Church in Roseneath.

Brian Goheen's horses stopped the other day going up our hill with a few sticks of wood, and for a little while we couldn't tell which to commend, Brian for swearing and abuse or one of the ponies taking a balk. But the pony persisted and Brian had to get a substitute.

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 7, 1881.

Handwriting on the Wall.

The Government at Ottawa has already had a foretaste of the bitterness of the next general elections. The first two elections since the shameful Syndicate transaction, in Conservative constituencies, one in the Province of Ontario and the other in the Province of New Brunswick, have resulted in most signal rebuke of the Government's general policy. In East Northumberland a Tory majority of 63 was, as recorded last week, transformed into a Liberal majority of 190. On Thursday last an election took place in Carleton, N.B., in which constituency in 1878 the late Mr. Connell defeated Mr. Appleby, the Liberal candidate, by a majority of 319. The Government candidate was Dr. Connell, a brother of the late member, and son of the former member. Dr. Connell possessed many advantages. Personally popular, belonging to a family of powerful influence and traditionally associated with the representation of the county, with all the influence of both Dominion and Local Governments in his favor, and with the Census patronage fresh in his hands, it was conceded that opposition to him would be useless, and the Liberal nominee, after receiving the party nomination, withdrew from the contest, and Dr. Connell thus had the advantage of an unopposed canvas of the County. However, at the nomination there came forward Mr. David Irvine, who in his address to the electors, describes himself as "a farmer from the backwoods," and whose position, as well as the political significance of the election, will be gathered from the following summary of his nomination speech, as reported in the Woodstock Sentinel :—

"Being AN ARDENT LIBERAL, and having strong convictions and the courage of his own convictions, and as no other man had offered on the Liberal side, he decided to place his services at their disposal. True, he was told that no person could run against the Connells without plenty of money, but he was reminded how, in olden times, the armies of Israel were defied and the scripling David accepted the challenge and slew the Philistines.

"He liked the tariff policy of the Liberal party of Canada best, which was that the revenues of the country should be raised as much as possible from the rich and bear as lightly on the poor as possible; tax the goods used by the rich heavily, and the goods used by the poor lightly. The present Government raised the revenue from the poor.

"It was a matter of little consequence to him personally whether they elected Dr. Connell or himself; it was NOT A QUESTION OF MEN BUT OF PRINCIPLES; above all things stick to principles. He was opposed to the present Government ON ACCOUNT OF CREATING MONOPOLIES; they had manufacturing monopolies, railway monopolies and land monopolies.

"In reference to the contract entered into with the Syndicate for the construction of the Pacific railway, he would say very little, as the bargain was now signed and sealed, but it would be fresh in the minds of the people THE EXTRAORDINARY TERMS GIVEN TO THE SYNDICATE, in exempting their land, road, etc., from taxes; the liberty of importing everything duty free, and after the contract was signed making them a present of an additional $35,000 on the Pembina branch, which the Minister of Railways had declared was finished.

"He appealed to their honor, as intelligent men, to throw aside feeling in the matter and vote upon principle. It was not a contest between Dr. Connell and David Irving, but a contest of principle; IT WAS WHETHER THEY WOULD SUPPORT SIR JOHN A. S ONE-SIDED PROTECTION TARIFF POLICY, WHICH BENEFITED THE MANUFACTURER AND ROBBED THE FARMER AND LABORER; ENDORSE THEIR MODE OF LETTING CONTRACTS; ENDORSE THEIR MODE OF CANCELLING CONTRACTS; OR SUPPORT MEN WHOSE POLICY IS TO MAKE THE RICH PAY AS MUCH AS POSSIBLE AND BEAR LIGHTLY ON THE POOR. He urged them to let their decision be a just one, their vote a conscientious one, and he would willingly accept the verdict of the people."

Mr. Irvine, it will be seen, placed the contest squarely on the issues which divide parties in the House of Commons. He raised no side issues, nor did he resort to any kind of equivocation to capture weak-kneed Conservative votes, and the result of the contest thus placed, with all the casual advantages strongly in Dr. Connell's favor, is the Government candidate's defeat by a majority of 47—a reaction from a Tory majority of 319 to a Liberal majority of 47! There can be no question but this is the voice of the people, speaking through the ballot-box their condemnation of the Taxation and Monopoly Tariff, the contract jobbery and corruption, and the shameful Syndicate Swindle, which prominently characterize the policy of the Macdonald-Langevin Government. The result, too, proves that the people find the champion of their rights and interests in Edward Blake, and that they have the confidence of enthusiasm in his high character, unsullied reputation, brilliant attainments, and above all, in his patriotic devotion to Liberal principles, which are the principles of the people. These victories will inspire the people with renewed zeal in their efforts to throw the yoke of monopolists' rule, and extortionate taxation, and we trust that the friends of Liberalism everywhere will rouse themselves to increased and increasing activity from this time forth, till the elections of 1883 are crowned with a victory which will vindicate the integrity and honor of the Canadian people, and place at the head of affairs the first Canadian of his generation, and the first Dominion Premier grown upon Canadian soil. There are but two sessions more of the odious rule of the servile and corrupt majority who last session so outrageously sacrificed the best interests of the country, entrusted to them by the misplaced confidence of the people. From this time forth let organisation and action be the motto of all true friends of the country, and let the work be so thoroughly and effectually done, as to leave nothing to chance in the result. We hope to see the two ridings of Peterborough in the next political contest place themselves on the side of the people, and unite themselves with the great majority of the Dominion, who we are firmly convinced, will triumphantly crown the good work begun by the electors of East Northumberland and Carleton, when they are allowed again to assert their sovereign control of the government of Canada.

The Blind Asylum Investigation.

We have recently received several papers containing marked paragraphs favorably commenting upon Dr. Hunter in connection with the recent Blind Asylum investigation, and intimating that he is a victim of a persecution. A few of our contemporaries appear to have accepted these statements and adopted them. For our part we think it little to the Principal's credit that he has resorted to this flimsy method of soliciting the favor of public opinion. We have carefully read the evidence as given, taking special note of Mr. Hunter's cross-examination of the witnesses, and we are forced to the conclusion that, even admitting an improper animosity on the part of Mr. Hossie, the facts developed point to Dr. Hunter, however great his ability, as a man utterly unfit to occupy a controlling position in such an establishment as this. His infirmities of habit and temper are such as must necessarily demoralize any institution, where harmony is, as it is conspicuously in this case, essential to its well-being. Even if some of the graver charges made against him be considered not proven, and we confess we trust he may be exonerated in some respects, his usefulness in connection with this institution is clearly gone, and we do not think the Government will be justified in retaining his services. We agree entirely with the Galt Reformer which sums up the case thus:

"To whip a pupil even with an iron rod no thicker than a lead pencil, is a most unwarrantable piece of cruelty, and the balance of evidence seems to indicate that this method of punishment has been resorted to. To keep a lady teacher standing an hour or two in his room to face his wrathful reprimands, and to have his fist presented to her face is not consistent even with the idea that the Principal is a "diamond in the rough," and and that this was the case is sworn to by the lady referred to. Some of the evidence appears to show that the principal has shamefully neglected to provide for the sick, evidently through the ill-natured contrariness of his nature, and at any rate the fact has been well established that tyrrany and ill-nature have been prominent features of the Principal's conduct for several years past. That complaints were not made long ago is said to be owing to the fact that communications to Mr. Langmuir had to pass through the Principal's hands and if these reports be true, the final resort of teachers and pupils to the press can be easily understood. A full report free from partiality to Mr. Hunter, and from undue stress on the complaints of aggrieved parties is urgently demanded, but though it should clear Mr. Hunter from the grave charges against his management as we hope it will, the Government will be unwise in the extreme to retain him any longer in its service."

A LAND TRANSACTION.

AN INTERESTING CASE—A BARGAIN BROKEN ON ACCOUNT OF MISREPRESENTATION.

CHATHAM, March 31.—Buyers and sellers of land will doubtless read with interest and profit of the facts of an important case brought to enforce an agreement to purchase a farm in Sandwich East, which was decided in the Court of Chancery here to-day. In a number of The Globe, in 1880, there appeared the following :—

FARM OF 400 ACRES—IN THE COUNTY of Essex—300 acres under cultivation 100 acres bush; 60 acres corn; 50 acres wheat; 50 acres oats; 5 acres potatoes; 5 acres beans, etc., etc. For further particulars apply to JOHN WOOD, Farmer, Box 845 Chatham.

Such, with the advertisements usually employed in such cases, was the welcome advertisement which met the eyes of two well-to-do Peterborough farmers, Galvin and Mellmoyl, by name, who had been longing for more acres on which to set out their maturing sons. As they were relatives, one was commissioned to examine the property and report, and subsequently an agreement to purchase was entered into by the parties, the price agreed upon being $10,000. The purchasers, who are the defendants, entered into possession and harvested most of the crops, but discovering, through a survey, before the conveyance was executed, that instead of the quantity of land represented by the plaintiff, the block contained only 366 acres, they thereupon refused to carry out the purchase and abandoned the farm. The plaintiff in consequence filed the bill to compel them to carry out the purchase. The defendants resisted this, claiming that their object in leaving Peterborough was to obtain such a block as would enable them to give at least one hundred acres each to certain sons; that the plaintiff, Northwood, represented it as containing 400 acres according to the previous conveyances, which are not the fact; also that the crops set forth in the advertisement were greatly exaggerated in the area, there being in fact no basis whatever where five acres had been inserted.

The plaintiff at the trial offered to make up the deficient acreage, which was declined however, and he then sought to show that the character of the surroundings, the property being located in Sandwich East, and the people French; also the absence of congenial church associations were the real motives with defendants for seeking to withdraw. The evidence went to show that the plaintiff, who is described in his bill as a yeoman—and on a pretty large scale it seems, as he is said to manage the cultivation of about one thousand acres, besides doing an extensive business as land broker—had represented and sold the farm in question as 400 acres. His Lordship, the Chancellor, in dismissing the plaintiff's bill, which under the authorities he held could not be sustained, said that it would be unreasonable to oblige the defendants to fulfil the agreement in view of the great deficiency in acreage, there being only 366 instead of 400 acres, and the avowed purpose for which they required the farm being for division into not less than 100 acre lots among certain sons.

The litigation has aroused much interest in this section of the Province owing to the issues at stake and the extensive land transactions of the plaintiff, who, on account of the rapidity with which he enters into and carries through his operations, is known as "Lightning John."

Mr. Moss and Mr. Wilson appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. A. J. Boyd, Q. C., and Mr. Dumble, of Peterborough, for defendants.

THE GRAND DUTY FRAUD.

(From the Montreal Witness.)

Mr. Wheeler enquired in the House the other night whether the Government proposed to amend the Order-in Council with regard to the wheat duties, so as to prevent foreign wheat coming into Canada to be ground, from going into consumption here without paying the duty. Mr. Bowell, the Minister of Customs, replied that the Order-in-Council provided that no wheat could come into Canada for consumption having paid the duty, and, therefore, no amendment of of the Order-in-Council was necessary. The reply was strictly correct, but not satisfactory. When Sir Charles Tupper was asked how the Government were going to prevent American wheat, which was being ground in bond, from going into consumption here, he replied, if we mistake not, that it could not go into consumption unless the miller perjured himself. Now, whether this alternative has been accepted or not, it is morally certain that flour ground from American wheat does escape the duty. It is to be hoped that the Government will take steps to render the Order-in-Council effective. They are bound to do so on moral as well as commercial principles. The only way by the Government could insure effectiveness is by establishing an inspection officer in every mill that grinds in bond, much the same as they do in the case of distilleries. This would be very expensive of course, but then the whole protection system from its very character is an expensive one, and the bad must be taken with the good, or at least with what we have accepted as good. It might be some check if the description of all wheat entered in bond was taken by the custom house officer. Spring wheat is never ground in Canada except for home consumption. If a miller imported spring wheat it might be taken for granted that he would not export the very product of that wheat.

A MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.

A correspondent of the Bowmanville Statesman, says:—"We next visited the Leskard Woollen Mill, a substantial two-storey frame building, containing all the requisite machinery of a first-class one-set mill, owned by Mr. Carvety, and leased to Messrs. William and John Andrew, practical men, late of the Auburn Mills, Peterborough, who have recently become occupants, and are not fully under way, but are turning out first-class goods, and purpose making further improvements as soon as the warm weather sets in, when they will run it to its fullest capacity, and will, no doubt, reap the reward of their skill, energy and enterprise. In the evening, after our visit to this institution, the following miraculous escape from a sudden and horrible death occured. As Mr. William Andrew, one of the proprietors, was adjusting a belt upon the main driving shaft, which lies in a horizontal position and revolves at a rate of 150 times a minute, the sleeve of his coat caught in the machinery, and why he was not hurled around the shaft to his death, he can never tell. He called to his brother John, who was in the upper storey, who at once recognizing that something was wrong, came down at a jump, and stopped the machinery and rescued him. Looking at the machinery in motion, one finds it impossible to conceive how Mr. Andrew escaped, and he has every right to and does feel thankful for his Providential preservation.

MOUNT JULIEN.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Mr. John Hull, of Lakefield, has purchased the saw mill at this place, and is busily engaged in having it repaired, and new machinery placed in, so as to commence operations about the 1st of May. Mr. H. has purchased a large quantity of logs and it is expected that the mill will be running the most of the summer.

ENNISMORE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

WEATHER NOTES FOR MARCH.—The month of March now closed, show a middling temperature, although keeping good the old adage of high piercing cold winds. Still the lowest point reached was 2° above zero on the morning of the 12th, ranging up to 20°, making the mean temperature 22° 38' above zero for the month. Snow fell on 8 days making a depth of 17½ inches. The snow storm of the season was on the 4th, when it fell 10½ inches of wet heavy snow. Rain fell on two days to the depth of 1¾ inches. So that snow melted including the rain make our water fall 5¾ inches for the month. There was good sleighing in the country up to the 15th, so that for the winter we had 116 days of good sleighing.

The snow is disappearing slowly, and although the fall wheat is safe so far, still should the present cold continue any time into April it will no doubt injure it to a certain extent.

LAND SALT!

TO FARMERS!

The experience of Canadian Farmers during the last few years corroborates almost without exception the benefits to all grain crops by an early and liberal application of LAND SALT. The immediate effects noticeable are the retention of moisture and a marked stiffening of the straw preventing its lodging; thus enabling the kernel more fully to mature.

These effects were fully brought out at the last meeting of the N. and D. Association held in town on the 12th and 13th of January. Many of the most influential members of the Society testified that they had used Land Salt for several years, and always with good results.

In reply to the question as to which kind of Salt was the best, the testimony of all was emphatically in favor of LIVERPOOL SALT. In fact it was stated that one sack of Liverpool Salt was worth from one and a half to two barrels of Goderich Salt.

Liverpool Salt is stronger, it has more vitality, and hence is the most economical to apply. It has been proved to be better than bulk salt, which is the refuse left from refining the finer kinds of barrel salt, also; it is acknowledged to go further and give better results.

WE OFFER TO THE FARMERS

Several Thousand Bags Liverpool Salt,

LAND PLASTER in Barrels.

A MISTAKE.—It is a great and often fatal mistake to take repeated drastic purgatives for constipation of the bowels, they induct piles and cause debility of the bowels. GRATFUL WOMAN.—None receive so much benefit, and none are so profoundly grateful and show such interest in recommending Hop Bitters as women. It is the only remedy peculiarly adapted to the many ills the sex is almost universally subject to. Chills and fever, indigestion or deranged liver, constant or periodical sick headaches, weakness in the back in kidneys, pain in the shoulders and different parts of the body, a feeling of lassitude and despondency, are all readily removed by these Bitters.—Courant. 14-2t

CAMPBELLFORD NEWS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The future of our village looms up in roseate hues. With the thawing of the ice dissolve the frosty hard times, and on this the time honored first of April we can see a considerable gang of men employed at the foundation of Gault Bros. flannel factory, the dimensions of which are to be 60x190 and 4 storeys high, a dye and storehouse, each 30x70 and 2 storeys, besides a handsome dwelling house. The contractor for the whole is Mr. T. Russell, of Morrisburg, but what the contract price is, has not been made public yet. Two of our townsmen, experienced and competent carpenters, tendered for the carpenter work alone, and were invited or inveigled down to Montreal by the agent of the proprietors, and having borne their own expenses thither and back, found out in a few days that the whole was let to the contractor. They have certainly not been used as might have been expected by a firm so well able to do what is right and honorable. The building will be of a substantial and even ornamental character, and will materially help to establish an equality between the two sides of the river, as at present the east greatly perponderates over the west, the side on which the new edifice will stand.

The Messrs. White are doing a good and extending business in supplying the farmers with implements. In their upper story Messrs. Mirfield and Smith carry on a Shoddy, or more properly, Woolen Stock Factory, and turn out a considerable number of tuns of stuff that certainly deserves a better name than shoddy. The Paper Mill of Messrs. Keeler and Cornell, at Ranney's Falls, approaches completion, and in about two months will be ready to start with about thirty hands, all men. The proprietors intend to build some half dozen cottages for some of the men, and a house of some dimensions for Mr. Keeler near the mill.

However, the election of Mr. D. Crouter to the Commons in opposition to the Government candidate, Mr. W. Kennedy, has been the event of the greatest importance to the general public. We had a Reform meeting addressed by Alderman Ryan, of Toronto, and the well known orator, W. Paterson, Esq., of Brantford. The former in the course of his speech appealed to his co-religionists of the Roman Catholic persuasion not to vote for the Gov't. candidate because he was of their own faith, but to vote with the party which they thought best calculated to advance the interests of the country. Mr. Paterson's speech was a masterly indictment of the general policy of John A. & Co.

The voice is well known for power, though there is nothing about it to deserve the name of Roarer, which his political enemies have called him. The speech lasted about three hours, and received the attention of every intelligent listener. It was considered the greatest effort in public speaking yet made in this place. Our most prominent Conservatives were too busy to attend.

On the following night the Hon. McKenzie Bowell and the well-known T. White, of Montreal and Cardwell, addressed a very large meeting in behalf of the N.P. and P.R.S. The former gentleman labored under the disadvantage of a cold in the head, but was well listened to and not unfrequently applauded. Both speakers tried to stir up religious animosity, devoting considerable time to showing how much more liberal they were to Catholics than their opponents. This had been carefully abstained from the previous night, and in this respect the speakers and speeches compared unfavorably with those of the night before. The Syndicate scheme was defended by comparing it with Mr. McKenzie's offer, which struck some as not being a first-class defence, as both times and circumstances are considerably changed since Mr. McKenzie advertised for tenders. Towards the close of Mr. White's speech he stated that all the by elections had been carried by Government candidates, and appealed to the electors of East Northumberland not to be the first constituency to go back on the old chieftain. However, the electors unheeding his eloquent advice, returned Mr. Crouter by a large and unexpected majority. Indeed, the Tories calculated on the modest majority of 150, which would have been delightful to them and their venerable chief. But this is one of the vacillating constituencies where intelligence prevails, and consequently parties are about evenly balanced.

The Hum organ in Belleville has been trying to prevails itself and readers that the Government have not been condemned by so large a majority, but that religious feeling has carried the election adverse to the party in power. It is certain that when their candidate was nominated, it was expected that the election would be mainly carried by obtaining his co-religionists' vote. All honor, then, to those Catholics—and there were many—who chose to fight it out on political grounds.

The Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad Company

Now offer for Sale over 1,350,000 Acres of the Choicest FARMING and TIMBERED LANDS in the Northern Peninsula of Michigan.

Destined to be the best wheat-producing region in the world. These lands are situated in the counties of Chippewa, Mackinac, Schoolcraft, and Marquette, and embrace many thousands of acres of the best agricultural lands in the State of Michigan.

Among those in the counties of Chippewa and Mackinac are tracts of what are known as the "burnt or cleared" lands. These lands offer many advantages over the prairie lands of the West, as the timber lands adjoining insure a supply of fuel at little cost. The soil being a rich clay loam of great depth. The timber remaining upon the land being generally sufficient for the settlers' use in building and fencing.

These partially cleared lands are now offered at the low price of from $4 to $4.50 per acre, one-fourth cash, and the remainder at purchaser's option, at any time within nine years, with interest payable annually at seven per cent.

Roads are being opened through these lands, and no better opportunity has ever been offered to men of small means to secure a good farm, and intending purchasers will be wise by availing themselves of this chance before prices advance, as the lands are being rapidly taken and settled upon.

The lands more immediately on the line of the Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad, from Straits of Mackinac to Marquette, are more heavily timbered, and are almost universally good agricultural lands, leaving splendid farms when the timber is removed.

The iron and lumber interests of the upper peninsula are of such magnitude as to call for all the charcoal and lumber that the timber and wood upon the lands will produce—this will enable the settler to make good wages while clearing the land.

Lumber Mills and Charcoal Kilns will be built at various points along the line, and Furnaces are now being erected along the line of the road at Point St. Ignace.

The great demand and good prices for labor, both in winter and summer, make these lands particularly desirable as homes for the poor man. The lands adjacent the Railroad are offered at prices from $5 upwards, according to location, value of timber, etc. The lands are at your very door, and are being rapidly settled by Canadians.

For pamphlets, maps, and other information, address, W. O. STRONG, Land Commissioner, 39 Newberry and McMillan Building, Detroit, Michigan. 9-1y.

PETEBBOROUGH, APRIL 7, 1881.

Edward Blake at Montreal.

One of the greatest triumphs of the public career of the Liberal chieftain was his reception and dinner at Montreal last week. The ovation at the banquet far exceeded in numbers and enthusiasm any of the brilliant events of which the Windsor Hotel has been the scene, and of which Earl Dufferin, Lord Lorne, Sir John Macdonald and others have been the heroes of the hour. In numbers it exceeded by 130 the largest gathering of the kind ever held in Montreal, and hundreds were unable to obtain tickets on account of the limitation of room. Mr. Blake's speech was worthy of his abilities and of his position as leader of the cause entrusted to his guidance. The force of his logic, his irresistible sincerity, the utter absence of harsh language and bitter epithets towards opponents, and the equally marked absence of that ribald flippancy which Sir John Macdonald's admirers call wit, made a deep and lasting impression, and evoked all the enthusiasm which is part of the French nature, and which was not decreased when, in the course of an eloquent speech, Hon. Mr. Huntington reminded them that Lower Canada was not likely to suffer injustice at the hands of the son of that Blake who, with Lafontaine and Papineau, had in darker days fought the battle of the people's liberties. A very marked event of Mr. Blake's visit to Montreal was the fact that by request, he held a reception at the Windsor Hotel on the following day, at which he was visited by many prominent men of Montreal, who have hitherto occupied no decided place in politics, with whom he discussed the public affairs of the day. His candor, frankness and logic had an evident effect, and there can be doubt that the Tories of Montreal have been much worried and annoyed at the evidence, which was manifest,. of the strong re-action in favor of the Liberal policy which has been inspired by Mr. Blake's presence, his speeches and his intercourse with the people of the commercial metropolis. In order to counteract this public expression, the Tory party decided upon a dinner to Hon. Mr. Langevin at Quebec, to take place immediately after Lent, the object being to impute odium to those who dined in the period of fasting The disinterested public men who waited on Mr. Langevin to tender him a banquet, were P. Garneau, Mr. Rouleau, M. P., Mr. Valin, M. P., Israel Tarte, M.P.P., John Hearn, Charlebois, Hamel, and other political hangers-on. It is said the Lt.-Governor was present.

In East Northumberland in 1878 the late Mr. Keeler polled 1,799 votes and the late Mr. Biggar 1,736. By the official return of the recent election, Mr. Crouter polled 1,890 votes and Mr. Kennedy 1,700. This shows a falling off of 99 Tory votes, and a gain of 154 Liberal votes. The total vote polled in 1878 was 3,535; in 1881, 3,590. This shows how thoroughly the election was contested, and makes the Liberal victory stand out all the more prominently.

Reports from Ballina state that a large number of evictions have taken place on the property of a Galway gentleman within the last few days. Some of the scenes were pitiable. Over one hundred police accompanied the bailiffs and subsheriff in two town lands, where thirteen families were put out. Many of these families were very destitute. Only two of these were allowed to return, one as caretaker and the other paying rent. The parish did all he could to relieve the wretched people, who probably refused or have been unable to pay rent for some years. In every case the evicted tenants carry away the doors of their houses, and the sheriff's assistants had to build up the space with stones.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Tuesday's Meeting—The ratepayers in force—Report of the Committee of the Whole—Resignation of the Principal—Just where they began nine months ago.

On Tuesday evening there was an unusualy full attendance of Trustees at the Board meeting—in fact the first full Board that has assembled for over twelve months, those present being the Chairman, Jas. Stevenson, and Messrs. Dumble, McClelland, Rutherford, Denne, Toole, Robinson, Cox, Stratton, Sawers, Wrighton, Burnham, Best, and Dennistoun.

There was also for the first occasion for a long time, a full attendance of ratepayers, the board room being nearly filled with people evidently taking an anxious interest in the proceedings, among those present being the Mayor and several members of the Town Council, the Clerk, the County Inspector and others.

The minutes of the former meeting were read and confirmed.

The Chairman said Mr. T. W. Robinson had been duly elected by acclamation, had taken the necessary declaration, and had taken his seat.

Mr. Dumble from the Committee on School Supervision reported upon the application from Mr. Sherin, who was a non-Resident, but who paid $13 taxes in the town, and who desired to send his children to the schools at the same rate as other ratepayers and the question of outsiders generally. The school act provided that pupils in any part of a county or union of counties might attend High Schools in a town situated in such county on payment of the usual fees, but where a town was separated from a County, as Peterborough, pupils from the County might have access to the schools in similar manner only when the County furnished an equivalent to the government grant. This the county of Peterborough had not done, and therefore pupils outside the town had no legal rights. Respecting Public Schools the law provided that non-residents residing contiguous to town, who contributed to local taxation, and whose school taxes equalled the average taxation of the town, might have pupils admitted on payment of a fee not to exceed 50 cts. but it was doubtful if this provision affected a town separate from a county as Peterborough is. He pointed out that that the property of non-residents was generally occupied by tenants whose children attended the schools and received all the benefits to which the property was entitled.

Mr. Rutherford asked if there were any pupils attending from outside the town who did not pay non-resident rates.

The chairman said there were, and mentioned the case of Mrs. Jas. Dixon, who was a large taxpayer, and this year assessed for the property of John Delaney.

Mr. Dumble said that the school tax was nearly half the whole tax. The average tax was about $18, and Mr. Sherin only paid $13.

Mr. McClelland said if the schools were suffering from over crowding, he would object to the attendance of outsiders. If they exacted fees from outsiders on exceptions ought to be made.

Mr. Dumble said the Board should be guided by general rules, and no regard should be had to individuals. If the property of the outsider is covered with houses the children of tenants exercised the right of the property with regard to the schools. They didn't educate a single pupil for the money they got in fees. The average cost to the town was $8 a pupil, and they should not encourage taking in outside pupils from all the country round to lessen the attention given to town pupils and increase the cost to the town. If non-resident property was vacant lots, it was all the more reason they should not extend privileges to it. It was the policy in all towns to give the least advantages possible to unimproved property. They ought not to burden themselves with the education of the children of all the pupils in the country surrounding the town.

The report was adopted.

The Secretary read a report from the Inspector, respecting the teachers concerning whose qualifications he was instructed to report, stating that these teachers had authority to teach for three years.

Mr. Dennistoun moved to introduce the report of the Committee of the Whole as to teachers' salaries. In doing so he said at the last meeting of the Board it was the wish of the Board that this matter should be debated in Committee, where the matter could be debated by the members among themselves, without the assistance of the reporters. On the occasion of the meeting of the Committee of the Whole, reporters were present, attention was drawn to the fact, and the reporters withdrew. He said the course of two newspapers in the town was unfair and unjust to the Board and imputed that the Board had met by themselves with some improper motives to carry out. One of them had reported a portion of the proceedings, and a second had stated that they had been deceived as to the holding of the meeting. The third paper took the more honorable course, and stated fairly, that not having any notice that a meeting of the Board was to be held their reporter did not attend. It was a matter of very little consequence perhaps of no consequence whatever. It was the object of Committees to make enquiries into matters committed to them, and when the result of their deliberations came up for discussion at the Board, every member could express his views upon it. He moved, seconded by Mr. Dumble, that the report be received and read by the Secretary.

The Secretary read the report as follows:

1st. Resolved, that in the opinion of this Committee, it is apparent that the Collegiate Institute has been gaining ground for some years past and now ranks amongst the foremost of such public Educational Establishments in this Province.

2nd. Resolved, that in the opinion of this Committee, the highest standard of efficiency which can be secured, consistent with proper economy of local taxes should be zealously worked for, and carefully sought after, as being in the general interests of the Town, for the following reasons:

(a) Because the more efficient, the larger the proportion of Government grants to be obtained.

(b) Because the more efficient, the larger the amount of Revenue received from fees payable by persons not ratepayers of the Town.

(c) Because the more efficient, the larger the number of pupils who will be brought to take advantage of it from surrounding Townships and Counties, whose presence materially affects the trade and reputation of our Town.

(d) Because the more efficient, the better the education which can be offered to such of the children of our Town as may desire to avail themselves of its advantages.

(e) Because the more efficient, the larger the sums obtained from outside sources, and the less needed from local taxation.

3rd. Resolved, that in the opinion of this Committee, the accounts for last year show (as owing to the efficient work done and the good general results obtained, the Institute cost the town at large, with its staff of six teachers, the small sum of $2,301.99, such result being arrived at as follows:

Amount raised by general taxation for the Institute	$3001 99
Transferred from Institute accounts to Public Schools for rent	700 00
Net cost to the Town	$2301 99

4th. Resolved, that in the opinion of this Committee, the reduction of the Teachers, or the payment of inadequate salaries could only result with the loss of efficiency of the Institute, and in consequence loss of grants from the Government and other sources, and loss further of Revenue from inevitable reduction in amount of fees paid, and that such losses would in all probability be larger than any saving that could be effected in the directions indicated, deficiency falling on ratepayers in the form of increased taxation, loss of such trade to our town as pupils from a distance now bring to it, and loss of the benefits which are now in the reach of all of our ratepayers, who desire to take advantage of them.—Carried.

5th. Resolved, that in the opinion of this Committee, one of the things necessary to getting the best work from teachers in the Institute, is to put them in a position of certainty as to their salaries, and that when once fixed, it should be understood they will not be readily changed either by raising or lowering them—that the salaries should be fixed with regard to the position to be held by Teachers, and the work to be done by them, it being expected that thoroughly competent talent and attainments alone would be satisfactory in each department, and that salaries should not be changed or fixed out of feeling for a teacher individually.—Carried.

6th. Resolved, that in the opinion of this Committee, it has taken years to build up our Institute to its present standing, and that any step now taken which would lower it, might take years to retrace.—Carried.

7th. Resolved, that in the opinion of this Committee, it is necessary that there should be as at present, six teachers on the staff in the Institute, the Principal having, as at present, the supervision of the Public Schools, in order to assure the continuance of the present high ranking of our Institute among similar institutions in the Province. Carried.

8th. Resolved, that in the opinion of this Committee, it is erroneous to suppose that our Public School System bears heavily on the smaller ratepayer, and that the larger ratepayer is benefitted thereby, the fact being that the larger ratepayers have to contribute much more largely to the maintenance of our Schools, than would be necessary to represent any direct return they get from the education of their own children thereat, while many of this class of ratepayers contribute largely to our Schools and get no return whatever of a direct kind.—Carried.

9th. Resolved, that in the opinion of this Committee, the salaries in the Institute, dating from 1st January last, per annum, should be as follows:

Principal	$1200 00
Classical Master	1000 00
Mathematical Master	1000 00
English Master	900 00
Asst. Mathematical Master	650 00
Asst. English Master	600 00

Mr. Dennistoun moved the adoption of the first eight resolutions.

Mr. Toole, while not agreeing with all the details of the report, thought all the members should support the whole result arrived at. It was usual in such cases for the minorty to agree with the conclusions of the majority, and he would have preferred have to see Mr. Denne moved the adoption of the whole report. He did not see what was gained by going into committee, if they had now to come back here and do the whole work over again. He moved to consider the report as a whole, but did not find a seconder.

Dr. Burnham said he dissented from the fourth resolution declaring that it was impracticable to reduce the staff.

Mr. Denne, moved seconded by Mr. Wrighton, that the 4th clause be dropped out.

Mr. Rutherford thought the report should be read clause by clause.

Mr. Denne's motion was lost. Yeas—Messrs, Best, Burnham, Wrighton and Denne. Nays—Messrs. Dumble, McClelland, Rutherford, Toole, Robinson, Cox, Stratton, Sawers and Dennistoun.

Mr. Dennistoun's motion was then declared carried.

Mr. Dennistoun then proposed that they should take up the clauses affecting the Institute salaries, involving an increase of $400. He thought they had better deal with them seriatim, and moved the adoption of the Principal's salary.

Mr. McClelland would like to hear from the Principal who was present, whether this arrangement would be satisfactory.

Mr. Dumble said they were arranging the salaries according to the position of the office. They were not supposed to be fixing salaries for individuals, and should not enter into any discussion with the Principal at the Board.

Mr. Toole moved that all the remaining alaries be adopted according to the report, to take effect from Jan. 1st, but did not get a seconder.

Mr. Sawers moved that the salaries take effect from 1st April, and also failed to get a seconder.

Mr. Stratton moved the following amendment:

Moved by Mr. Stratton, seconded by Mr. McClelland, that all that part of the report referring to Teacher's salaries be struck out, and that the following be inserted in lieu thereof,

The Committee recommend that the salaries of J. F. Jeffers, Principal, and John Dixon, Mathemetical Master, be increased by $100, making them equal to the salaries received by them last year, such increase to date from Jan. 1st, last, and that the salary of the Janitor of the Central School be $400, and of each of the Ward Schools $100.

The Committee while acknowledging the general efficiency of the Schools, cannot in view of the large expenditure now imposed upon the ratepayers for school purposes, recommend any further increase of salaries till such time as the Principal and Public School Inspector may be able to report, that, by revision of classes or by re-distribution of teachers, they can advise the Board to dispense with the services of one teachers in the Central School, and one teacher in each of the Ward Schools.

And that the report as so amended be adopted.

Mr. Denne, moved in amendment to the amendment, seconded by Mr. Wrighton, that no increase in any of the salaries be considered until the Principal and Inspector are able to report that the Board can dispense with the services of one teacher in the Institute.

The latter portion of the motion was ruled out of order, and the amendment, that no increase of salaries be granted, was lost on the following division:—

Yeas—Messrs. Denne, Wrighton, Burnham, Best and Sawers.

Nays—Messrs. Dumble, McClelland, Rutherford, Toole, Robinson, Cox, Stratton and Dennistoun.

On Mr. Stratton's amendment, Mr. Toole said that it was hardly fair to the other teachers that this resolution should shut out some of the hardest worked teachers under the Board that only two teachers should be increased, and all the others left as they were.

Mr. Dumble said whatever they did at the Board should be done in an open and straightforward way. If Messrs. Jeffers and Dixon were worthy of an extra $100, give it to them; but he held that this resolution was inconsistent, as it made the Board say that there was one teacher too many in the Institute, and each of the schools.

The Chairman said if that were the case he would not have put it.

Mr. Dumble read the resolution, but failed to find anything in it respecting the Institute.

Mr. Dennistoun said this resolution covered all the ground he took in the Committee, as to the High School, and he was prepared to accept and vote for it. The part of it which referred to the conditions of any further increase, he considered of little or no value. It expressed an indisposition on the part of the mover to place any more taxes on the people, and was harmless.

Board of Education.

Mr. Cox said he felt himself in rather a peculiar position. He would have voted for the adoption of the whole report. He had supported every motion for an increase of salary in the Committee, but some of the gentlemen who had moved these increases in Committee had gone back upon them. He would vote for Mr Stratton's amendment, if the increase were to go back to the 1st September, the date at which the salaries were raised.

The Chairman said after the passage of the first eight resolutions this could not be done.

Mr. Cox said then he would vote for the resolution. He was in favor of increasing all the teachers' salaries. He did not believe there was a teacher in the employ of the Board receiving adequate remuneration. He was aware that this might not be a very popular position to take, but that was his view. He had known that it was to support a family in a state of semi-starvation at $35 a month, and he had always been in favor of liberal salaries. He had always taken this course, whether at the Board, in the Council, or the Railway Board, when the balance sheet at the end of the year justified it. He believed in paying men well and working them hard.

Mr. Sawers said he would support Mr. Stratton's motion because it would save $700.

Mr. Denne said he had moved increases to the teacher's salaries in committee, but the Principal's salary had been increased, because he believed that if Mr. Jeffers and Mr. Dixon were increased all the others should be increased as well. They were all equally entitled to it. He was opposed to any increase in the cost of the schools at all.

The amendment was then carried on the following division:

YEAS:—Messrs. Dumble, McClelland, Rutherford, Toole, Robinson, Cox, Stratton, Sawers and Dennistoun.

NAYS,—Messrs. Denne, Best, Wrighton and Burnham.

Mr. Denniston moved, seconded by Mr. Best, that to meet the expenses of carrying on the schools till the Board was placed in funds by the Town Council, the Chairman and Secretary be empowered to borrow $8,000 from the Bank of Montreal, and that the seal of the Board be affixed to the resolution to give it the effect of a By-law.—Carried.

After hearing a deputation from the pupils of the Institute and public schools, through Mr. Ventress, on motion of Mr. Stratton, seconded by Mr. Denne, the request of the pupils to have the Easter holidays run from the 11th to the 15th, inst., instead of from the 14th to the 18th, was granted and the Secretary instructed to notify the Principal.

Mr. Burnham gave notice that at next meeting of the Board, he would move, seconded by Mr. Wrighton, That the pay in the three higher forms in the Collegiate Institute should be increased from 50 cents to $1.00. He said as the expenses were increased, they would require those who wished to learn Latin and Greek to pay for it.

Mr. Dennistoun said this was a move in the right direction. He gave notice of motion for an increase of fees generally in the schools.

Mr. Cox gave notice of motion to charge a fee of 10c per month in the public schools.

On motion the Principal was heard.

Mr. Jeffers said that when he had first put in his resignation, last year, he had been induced to hold it over, and he had suspended it for a long time at the request of the Board. He had found that several members of the Board were pledged to reduce salaries, and he had advised them to do what they thought was right in the matter. He had said to members privately that he would not accept the reduction. He argued in this way, that his work in the school and the stamp he had put upon it were worthy of an increase, and he must say that he could not accept this. His figure in the first place had been $1,400 but he had been induced to accept less. He had found the school in a very bad state, ranking as third-class. After his first year it was re reported second-class, and the third year it rose to first-class. He referred to the work he did in the school, teaching two branches in addition to management of both the Institute and the Public Schools and thought the workman worthy of his hire. He felt that, in justice to himself as he stood before the country, he could not, under all the circumstances, accept the conclusion of the Board. He wished them to regard what he had said as an explanation and not as a reflection. He believed that if the members of the Board would see more of the schools, they would be in a better position to promote their interests.

Mr. Dennistoun enquired if they were to understand that Mr. Jeffers wished to leave at once

Mr. Jeffers explained that he had last year given the Board till January to arrive at a decision. They then agreed, on his continuing, to allow him to leave at a month's notice, if matters were not satisfactorily arranged, and on March 1st, he had given a months notice, and his term of service therefore expired on Thursday last. His health was suffering from the worry attending the unsettled condition of matters, with the responsibilities that rested on him. The interests of the schools required a generous support, and he felt that he could not expect that. For these reasons, he wished to be relieved of his position.

Mr. Dennistoun said he was taken by surprise and thought Mr. Jeffers was not treating either his friends on the Board or the School in a proper manner. He proceeded to animadvert severely upon the Principal.

Mr. Jeffers said if he had omitted anything, or given a false impression, he had not so intended, and as he was not feeling very well he would be excused. He had served all his notices in writing on the Board, and had in every case given the proper notice. In conversation with Mr. Stevenson, he had told him he could not accept $1,200 In giving the months notice he had only taken the privilege the Board had given him in January, and he had waited in suspense for nine month for the action of the Board. He did not intend to stay away from the School to-morrow. He had more regard for the boys than that. All he wanted was that the Board provide themselves with another Principal as soon as possible. He would stay for their convenience.

Mr. Stratton asked if it was found impossible to fill the place for three month, would he be able to remain that long.

Mr. Jeffers said he would like the Board to fill the place as soon as they conveniently could.

Mr. Dumble said he did not think Mr. Jeffers had acted in any way unfairly with the Board. If there was any unkindness it was on the part of the Board. They had kept the Principal in a state of harassing anxiety for months and months. It was said that corporations had no souls, but Mr. Jeffers had suffered in health through the state of uncertainty in which he had been kept, in connection with the arduous work placed upon him. He thought the Board had not treated him (Mr. Jeffers) with that generosity which they ought, and he questioned if they got another man to take his place and keep up the School as he had done.

Mr. Dennistoun moved that Mr. Jeffers' resignation be referred to the Committee on appointments to devise a scheme for the earliest acceptance of Mr. Jeffers resignation and the appointment of his successor, and to report to the Board as soon as consistent with the best interests of the Schools.

Mr. McClelland said Mr. Jeffers had tendered his resignation in the middle of last summer and it had been allowed to remaid in abeyance. The Board had got him to remain till the end of the year, and had given him permission to retire at a month's notice. He thought it was quite competent for Mr. Jeffers to tender his resignation as he did.

An amendment by Mr. Stratton, placing Messrs. Dixon and Braden temporarily in charge of the Institute and Public Schools respectively, was withdrawn, and Mr. Dennistoun's motion carried.

The Board then adjourned.

FRASERVILLE NEWS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Mr. A. Stewart's house was consumed by fire on Sunday, March 27th. They attended the Presbyterian Church, leaving home about 10 o'clock, and on their return the dwelling was burned to the ground. Although sheds were attached to the house nothing was burned. A number of the neighbors arrived in time to save most of the furniture. The house and contents were insured, and the loss is light.

Mr. Geo. Goodfellow, formerly a resident in this vicinity, at present employed on the Midland railway, was married lately to Miss Christina Laing, of this place, the service being performed by the Rev. T. Manning, B. A. Their many well-wishers in this place wish them a long, happy and prosperous life. Much more should be said on this occasion but time will not permit.

Revival services are being conducted in Frazerville Methodist Church. A glorious revival is in progress, many having given their hearts to Christ, and many each night desiring an interest in the prayers of the Christian people. It is thought by some that the number present on Tuesday evening was about 500, and each evening the house has been well filled. Many thanks are due to those ministers from Peterborough that assisted; also, to those that accompanied them. The meetings are conducted similar to by those in Peterborough, having an Inquiry Meeting. May the glorious work that has thus been begun continue, and may many be brought to a knowledge of Christ Jesus. The young men have started a prayer meeting, about 40 in attendance, and a great interest is being taken. The pupils of Cairo School are being trained for eternity, nearly all that have arrived to the years of understanding professing to be followers of Christ.

A car load of potatos were shipped from our depot this week.

Roads are good.

Rev. W. Hunter, Presbyterian pastor of Parkdale, preached a very effective sermon on Thursday evening in the Methodist church.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

We have received from the author, who is taking subscriptions for the same, a copy of a handsomly bound volume entitled "Stirring Incidents in the life of a British Soldier, an autobiography, by Thomas Faughhan, late Color-Sergeant 2nd Batallion 6th Royal Regiment," dedicated by permission to H E. the Governor-General. Published (second edition) by Hunter, Rose & Co., Toronto Without any pretensions to literary merit, this work displays a free and unconstrained style of narrative, which betokens no little natural ability, with a facility of expression, and a happy knack of weaving the humorous into the thread of serious discourse, which is nature's gift to the Irishman. It gives a panorama of 21 years of actual service taking in its course, experience of the Crimean war, and service at Malta, Gibraltar, the Ionian Islands, Egypt, France, Trinidad, etc. It will be found well worthy perusal, and is sold at the cheap rate of $1.00 per volume.

A large number of processes for rent and ejectment have been served on the estates of Mr. Guy Lloyd, a Justice of the Peace at Croghan, and will be heard at the ensuing Quarter Sessions, when nearly a thousand processes will be heard. Upward of these hundred and fifty civil writs and ejectments for rent have been issued on the estate of Col. King Harman, M. P. for Sligo. The majority of the tenants have resolved to hold out against the present rents until ejected. It is stated that the coming ejectments were discussed at the last Cabinet Council, together with a possible outbreak.

THE SOWER'S SONG.

Now hands to seed-sheet, boys.
We step and we cast; old Time's on wing:
And would ye partake of harvest joys,
The corn must be sown in spring.
Fall gently and still, good corn;
Lie warm in thy earthy bed,
And stand as yellow some morn,
That beast and man may be fed.

"Old earth is a pleasure to see
In sunshiny cloak of red and green:
The furrow lies fresh; this year will be
As fer years that are past have been.
Fall gently, etc.

"Old mother, receive this corn,
The seed of six thousand golden sires;
All these on thy kindly breast were born
One more thy poor child requires.
Fall gently, etc.

"Now steady and sure again,
And measure of stroke and step we keep;
Thus up and thus down we cast our grain;
Sow well, and you gladly reap.
Fall gently and still, etc."

—THOS. CARLYLE.

FARM, GARDEN AND HOUSEHOLD.

Farm Hints.

DRINK.—If cattle are left to hunt their own drink from pools that are ice-cold and scant at best, or are compelled when the weather is severely cold to travel long distances for water, they will at times go without their necessary drink rather than be placed at so much discomfort to obtain it. Running daily in the stock fields and eating freely of dry stuff, is very hazardous to life, unless they have sufficient drink to soften the entire mass. No digestion can take place until the food is thoroughly moistened and they should receive daily attention and water plentifully provided for their use, and if possible such as is not ice-cold.

CLEAN WHEAT.—The one who raises produce for a market will find it pays to present it in the cleanest possible state. An exchange gives the account a miller had kept of his operations for a certain time. There had been purchased, during this particular run spoken of, 2,066,917 pounds of wheat, there were cleaned away in dirt and poor wheat 89,690 pounds which makes a loss of about 1,500 bushels of wheat out of 36,115 bushels, or a loss of about five cents per bushel. The loss should have been cleaned out at home by the farmers, or at least 1,000 bushels of it, and this thousand bushels, if fed to poultry, would have paid him twice as much per bushel as his good wheat brought.

EXHAUSTED LANDS.—The cry we often hear about exhaustion of soil seems to be an unnecessary alarm. Thirty-five years ago we heard the conversation of some farmers with one who was somewhat slovenly, against the exhaustive course he pursued. His argument was: "Those fields that have borne beans and wheat (the most exhaustive crops known to the section), alternately for twenty years." It was near harvest which suggested the additional remark, "and there are four quarters an acre on them to-day," i. e., 32 imperial bushels. That ground has since been steadily cropped under a six course shift—first year, fallow or fallow crop; second, spring grain, oats or barley; third, clover or grass; fourth, wheat; fifth, beans; sixth, wheat. The wheat, most of the wheat straw, some of the beans and oats, and the best of the hay went to market. The wheat on 60 acres of it, a few years back, averaged 50 bushels per acre. We heard recently that by good cultivation and steam grubbing it has become quite productive. We have faith enough to believe that by judicious rotation land is practically inexhaustable. Probably the cry we hear arises from neglect of proper cultivation. We would be the last to insinuate anything against the use of available manure.

Household Hints.

TO KEEP RIPE TOMATOES ALL WINTER.—Select fine sound tomatoes, wipe them perfectly dry, and place them very carefully in a stone jar two-thirds full. Fill the jar quite up with good lard, and cover closely. When wanted for use, take them out from under the lard, and wash them in hot water.

RICE CROQUETTES.—Soak some rice, then boil it in milk. When done add sugar, the grated rind of a lemon, three yolks of eggs; form into croquettes, and fry in lard. The lard must be boiling, and sufficient to cover the croquettes. When done sprinkle over with some powdered sugar.

TO ROAST A CALF'S LIVER.—Wash thoroughly and wipe dry; cut a long deep hole in the side; stuff with crumbs, bacon and onions chopped; salt and pepper to taste; bit of butter and one egg; sew or tie through the liver; lard it over, bake in the oven, basting frequently; serve with gravy and currant jelly.

POTATO SALAD.—This is Berlin fashion: Take your potatoes, not too large ones, and boil them; potatoes that are mealy are not good, when cold, cut in slices and pour the oil on them, and let them stand a little while; slice a third of an onion as fine as possible, and one apple, and mix with the potatoes; add vinegar to taste; salt and pepper. The addition of a Dutch herring makes a herring salad.

TO WASH FLANNELS WITHOUT SHRINKING.—First have soft water for the whole process, made so artificially if necessary, and next have good soap, or that which does not contain rosin. You may wash and rinse entirely in cold water if you choose, but if you wash in warm water you must not rinse in cold. It is decidedly best to use only warm water all through, the rinsing water warmer than the suds, if there is any difference. It is best to make a good, strong, clean suds (that is, don't wash the nice white flannels in a dirty suds with other clothes that are to be boiled), and put the flannels in it, instead of rubbing soap into the cloth. Hand rubbing tends to full and shrink flannel, as it mats and interlaces the delicate fibres.

Health Notes.

THE USE OF TEA.—Whoever uses tea should do so in great moderation. It should form part of the meal, but never before eating, between meals, or on an empty stomach, as it is too frequently done. The best time to take tea is after a hearty meal. Those who suffer from weak nerves should never taste it at all. Those who are troubled with inability to sleep nights should not use tea, or, if they do, take it in the morning. Brain-workers should never goad on their brains over-work on the stimulus of tea. Children and the young should never use tea. Tea should never be drunk very strong. It is better with considerable milk and sugar. Its use should at once be abandoned when harm comes from it. Multitudes of diseases comes from the excessive use of tea, and for this reason those who cannot use it without going into excess should not use it at all.

CURING A COLD.—Except a Turkish bath, nothing is more efficacious in the sore throat of children or adults than a wet compress to the throat. Double a towel two or three times, so as to make a pad that will fit snugly under the chin and over the throat, and let it extend around from ear to ear. Then bind a thickly-folded towel over the wet pad, having the towel wide enough to overlap the edges of the pad. It is best to pass this outer covering over the head, and not around the neck after the style of a cravat, the object being to exclude the air so as to keep a perspiration over the diseased parts. But if the soreness is low down on the throat, the outside towel may be passed around the neck; yet, when this is done, it is much more difficult to exclude the air. The wet compress may be put on cold, it soon becomes warm; from the heat of the skin, and is really a warm vapor bath. When the pad is taken off, the throat should be washed in cold water to close the pores, and then well dried with a towel. This is applicable to croup and all kinds of sore throats, and will be found more cleanly and equally as efficient as grandmother's stocking filled with ashes.

Waddell asked the Council what they intended doing about the unpaid taxes for the East ½ Lot 15 Concession 1. The Clerk was ordered to communicate with the Collector respecting the same. On motion of Mr. Lightfoot, seconded by Mr. Dawson, an order was drawn on the treasurer in favor of D. Baxter for $80.00 on account of contract for building Deyell's bridge on West boundary. A ratepayer intimated that he had been by Joseph Wood requested to ask the Council to remove the stumps from off the road allowing North end between Lots 12 and 13, concession 2. The pathmaster for Beat No. 9, north part, was ordered to have the said stumps removed with the least possible cost to the corporation. Mr. Riddell reported on behalf of this corporation, that he had examined the cedar supplied by Thomas Dodds for the use of West Boundary, and that the same did not come up to the requirements of the contract. On motion the foregoing report was received and the Clerk was ordered to notify Mr. Dodds to that effect. Moved by Mr. Riddell, seconded by Mr. Wood,—That the sum of $4, be granted Mrs. Neville an indigent, and the same be placed in Mr. Rutherford's hands to be given her at his disposal. Carried. A STREET CAR SCENE.

Recently a man dressed in good clothes, an eye-glass and a gold mounted cane, and possessing an altogether clerical appearance, hailed a passing street car. There was nothing unusual or particularly noticable in this, the air of lofty dignity with which he commended a halt, and the desperate effort which he made to maintain his centre of gravity as he passed the car and revealed the fact that he was slightly intoxicated. Arriving at the door he solemnly raised his foot to enter; but not raising it high enough, he fell headlong on the floor of the car. Raising himself up with some difficulty, he cast a severely reproving look at the the old gentleman sitting near the door, and said:—

"Sir, why d'you lift this car just as I was goin' to get in?"

"My dear sir I didn't lift the car," replied the old gentleman meekly.

"Well perhaps you didn't. I won't 'tempt to argue with a man in your condition. My amiable friend, it is my firm and deliberate 'pinion you've been looking upon the wine that is red. Very sorry to see it in a man of your age. What'd s'pose your mother would say if she would see you intoxicated? My friend I have shed many bitter tears over such a case as your's. "Yes," continued he, in faltering voice and pulling out his handkerchief, "I'm blessed if I ain't weeping now, as you readily observe."

Whereupon he wiped his eyes with a grand flourish, blew his nose and navigated to the other end of the car. When he reached his destination he pulled the bell strap and started for the door. When he got about half way, and just as he was in front of a lady. he tripped and fell at full length on the floor. Raising himself with difficulty and turning to the lady he said.

"Madam you've got the biggest feet I ever saw?"

"Sir," exclaimed the lady indignantly.

"Oh don't 'pologize?" said he "I beg you won't 'pologize but if you'd just pare 'em down a little it would be a great convenience to the travelling public."

The lady was speechless with indignation, the passengers were convulsed, while the man staggered to the platform jumped off and immediately sat down, raising himself with difficulty, shouldered his cane and staggered off.

THE RAM AT CHURCH.

Mollie had a little ram, fleece black as rubber shoe, and everywhere that Mollie went, he emigrated too.

He went with her to church one day—the folks hi-la-rious grew, to see him walk de-mure-ly in to Deacon Allen's pew!

The worthy deacon quick-ly let his angry passion rise, and gave it an unchristian kick between the sad brown eyes.

This landed rammy in the aisle; the deacon followed fast, and raised his foot again, but ah! that first kick was the last!

For Mr. Sheep walked slowly back about a rod, 'tis said, and e'er the deacon could retreat, it stood him on his head!

The congregation then arose and went for that e'er sheep, but several well directed butts just piled them in a heap.

Then rushed they straightway for the door with curses long and loud, while rammie struck the hindmost man and shot him through the crowd.

The minister had often heard that kindness would subdue, the fiercest beast—"Ah!" then he says, "I'll try that game with you."

And so he kindly, gently called; come rammy, rammy, ram; to see the folks abuse you so, I grieved and sorry am!

With kind and gentle words he came from that tall pulpit down, saying rammy, rammy, ram; ram, rammy rammy, ram—best sheepy in the town.

The ram looked meek, and on he came, with, "rammy, rammy, ram; rammy, rammy, rammy ram; the nice pretty ram."

The ram quite dropped his humble air, and rose from off his feet, and when the parson lit he lay beneath the hindmost seat.

And as he shot out the open door, and closed it with a slam, he named a California town, I think 'twas "Yuba Dam!"

TEAS! TEAS!
CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes of adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Ethel, peeping into the room to say "Good night," was scared by their grave faces, and slipped out again, leaving the Doctor and Paul undisturbed. Again and again Paul Knox, made the other tell over the thousand slights and tokens of growing disgust which of late had festered him round like a fiery belt—how the rudest fisher's wife in the village drew her child out of his way—how people who had been near friends and old neighbors passed him by with a nod.

Talking of these things the Doctor grew excited. He walked up and down the room as he spoke, and the colour came back to his face and burned fiercely.

"I tell you, Paul, I don't know how I have borne it; but for Herbert Grant, I don't think I could have been patient. As it is I shall never forget the charge while I live. And they even include Ethel in it. She never says a word as to people's treatment of her but she feels it. She puts it all down to this legacy, which the villagers think she has no right to, and the fancy frets her, and keeps her indoors for days at a time. For long enough now, though, I have known the real reason of it all. It was Dobson who first gave me the hint. He is an honest fellow, but even he has doubts of me, I can see. I wish in my heart I could rise up to-morrow with the reflection that I should never see Thornton, nor Thornton people, while I live."

"Tush, tush!" said practical Paul; "that not like you Dick. Better stay where you are, and fight it out. I've a plan of my own to get things squared, and I've hopes of working it."

"What is your plan?"

"Do not ask. I will not tell you, nor any one else. If it works well, as I expect, facts may speak for themselves; if not you need not care to know anything about it. I'll tell you this much—it is a bold plan and a simple one. Perhaps it's none the worse for that, though."

He would say no more, though the Doctor urged him.

"I will not tell you one word of it," said Paul, sturdily.

When, in the early morning light, they tiptoed through the house with gentle treading feet, he had not broken his promise.

CHAPTER XVII

September had sad memories for all the Thornton Manor-house. For Vivienne, the young queen of the place, it had terrible ones.

Just two years to the month was it since Gilbert Thornton had been carried out of the gates of that old house. She never quite forgot him nor his dead face during any month in the year, but in September, of all months, she was haunted. Sometimes she thought of herself as devoured above all other women; sometimes she was so wretched that she would gladly have been in her grave. Her feelings differed only in degree from those of every man and women among us, whose smiles and tears chase each other like the shadows across an April sky, and whose hearts are never filled or ever empty, be their joy or sadness as it may.

She had intended spending this month away from Thornton; she did not care where, so that it was far enough. And the weeks slipped by, bringing September near, she seemed possessed by a spirit of unrest nothing could lay.

"We will go when you like and where you like," Jocelyn said to her, but first one thing, then another, kept them at home week after week till September had come.

Jocelyn's mother had been very ill, and, being old and rather weakened by sorrow, the effects of her ailments were long in wearing off. She was not fit for travel, and Vivienne did not care to go away and leave her lonely.

The young wife was not selfish in small matters, as so many women are; and this was not the first thing she had done to please the mother of her husband, whom she had learned to love very dearly, chiefly because that husband loved her so well, may be. This woman, who could be so pitiless, was also very pitiful at times. And Jocelyn saw her generosity, and told his own heart what a regal soul he had won in his beautiful Vivienne.

Accompanying Ethel one morning, soon after his arrival, to see Mrs. Thornton and young Mrs. Jocelyn, Paul Knox met with a cordial welcome.

"This is a pleasure long looked forward to, Mr. Knox," Vivienne said, putting her hand into his, and smiling up at him with her great dusky eyes, full of many flashes and soft gleams of light. Paul's heart thrilled at the sight of her. The rare beauty of her face smote him with a keen pain. Had she grown more beautiful since he had seen her last? he asked himself; or had he half forgotten her loveliness, that it came like a shock upon him?

Jocelyn entered when he heard of the arrival of Paul and Ethel, and he too was glad to see the artist, and made much of him in his pleasant, easy way. He made much of Ethel also, and chatted a great deal with her, leaning over her chair, while his wife, from her couch by the great bay window, looked across at them both without a shadow or cloud on her face.

Watching these two, so easy, so cordial, so simply friendly as they were with each other, Paul Knox found it hard to remember that this man had ever loved Ethel—that she had ever loved him, and borne bitter pain for his sake, for long, lasting sadness.

When they arose to go home, Vivienne stepped through the low window, and went with them across the lawn, as far down as the entrance gates. Among the flaming crimsons, the royal purples of the Autumn blooms, she passed in her white dress, fair and stately—a picture to see once and cherish for a lifetime.

Paul walked beside her, wondering in his heart, as others had often wandered before him, at the charm that lay in this woman, other and different from her wealth, her grace or her rare sweet beauty.

Jocelyn followed with Ethel, and the sun passing lazily over the short grass in the ruddy glint of the September sunshine, talked together, and laughed at their own droll speeches, much as if life were a comedy to them all.

Jocelyn Thornton, with his tawny head and bare curls catching and keeping the sunshine, and his gray eyes alight with a great happiness, looked the least guilty of men, Paul could not but think, who have suffered or caused others to suffer; and yet——

That visit to the Manor gave Paul Lov something to think about—to wonder about, too, not a little. He and the Doctor talked it over that evening; and the more they talked, the more their wonder grew.

"How has she borne her life from that day to this?" Paul asked. "Has she no heart, no feelings? Is she only a beautiful devil, without power in her soul to repent? Looking to her face to-day, Dick, no evidence but that of my own eyesight could have had any weight with me. If you had said to me then, That woman smiling there, with her exquisite grace and ease, mixed the draught to kill a man,' I should have laughed at you."

Doctor West sighed. This puzzle, that grew the harder for the studying, was a question of much to him—of life and death, did he but know it; perhaps he did know it and perhaps it was this knowledge that made his face so wan and lined as it had been of late.

"I tell you, Dick, she has nerves tempted steel. She is nothing like what I expected to find her. But thinks can't go on in this manner for ever. We must do something at the same time we must be careful how we do it. A wrong step would be fatal. A blunder on our part might fix the charge on you."

"My dear Paul, discovery is hopeless. The most delicate examination immediately after death would scarcely have found the poison, so subtle is it. To attempt such a thing as an examination now would be worse than useless of course. And what have you to go on? If you were to appear in public and tell the truth of what you had seen that night, who would believe you? People would cry out at once that it was a got-up story, made to shield the real criminal. No jury in the world would convict on it."

That all this was probable Paul did not need to be told. He knew it only too well. But Paul was sanguine, and a builder of castles. He had the foundation of one laid in his quick brain even while Doctor West spoke. The two, walking leisurely by the water's edge, saw the moon rise slowly; and before its disc was clear of its tossing waves, Paul had resolved upon his plan of action—a bold one, and yet perhaps the only one open to him then.

"The truth cannot be hid for ever," he said; "we must do our best to make it clear."

"Our best in vain. Trying will only make defeat the more better. Herbert Grant is right. It is best to wait in patience for what might come in time."

"Herbert Grant it not right," cried Paul, hotly. "He is an old woman. He is always preaching, and I don't believe in it. And if, instead of waiting and waiting, as he is, for what may come to him some day, he would set to like a man, and make Ethel love him, it would benefit him a great deal better."

"You are not serious, Paul? You don't imagine Ethel could ever be made to care for him in that way?"

"Why not?" returned practical Paul, taking out his pipe to empty the ash into the water at their feet. "He is handsome enough, and clever enough. Then he's rich, and well connected. What more does the girl want? And a blind woman might see how he dotes on her."

"Ethel does not I'm sure."

"Are you? That's more than I would care to assert."

"Oh, it's one of your fancies, Paul; you'll find you are mistaken."

"Well, we shall see some day, perhaps."

They walked on over the great rough crags, slippery after high tide, straight towards the little rugged road that led to the village street. As they passed along this, talking and walking slowly, two stately men, handsome both, and full of a certain ease that was a charm in itself, women put their heads out of doorways, and men, lounging at the corners, looked curiously in their faces. Some few saluted the Doctor as he passed; others withdrew as he approached, and waited till he had gone by to look after him.

Coming to the end of the long street, and conscious, both, of the gauntlet of eyes they had gone through, they looked at each other, Doctor West a trifle nervous and angry, Paul Knox calm and dogged.

"You saw those people, Paul?"—"Yes I saw them."

"Do you blame me for wanting to get away from this place?" Doctor West asked, piteously almost, stopping in the shaded lane to wipe the beads of moisture from his face.

"Yes, I do blame you," Paul Knox answered, flushing up under the shade of his Spanish hat. "When did a West run away from his trouble, ay, or his danger even? Only one did it, Dick—the ill bird of the house: and he paid for it heavily."

Looking at the two then, side by side in the misty light, the likeness they bore to each other was strong and clear. Looking at them then, no one could fail to see it; no one could have been blamed for thinking that these men, who loved each other with a great love, were the sons of one mother.

Doctor West smiled, a little pitiful smile, brimful of pain.

"I will be as brave as I know how to be," he said. "I will bear on to the end among them, if you hold that I ought to do so Only, for Ethel's sake, I do think ——"

There Paul stopped him.

"It is for her sake I ask you to stay. Do you imagine that if you left this place to-morrow, the whisper would not follow you? Yes, before a month it would face you in London as it faces you here; and it is for her sake I want you to remain and fight it out."

"And I will remain, Paul," said Doctor West. What it cost him to say it, only his one heart knew.

For days Paul Knox sauntered about, over crags and through the lanes, talking with one here and another there, picking up all sorts of odd scraps of news, that Doctor West could never have picked up, seeing that they concerned himself. These fragments of gossip had one feature in common. A kind of apology for the man ran through the broadest hints of his guilt, that these people let out to Paul in their talks of the Doctor.

"As kind a gentleman as ever lived," said one, "and pleasant and civil; but folks do say the devil was too strong for him that time, for every one of us knows that he was clever enough to save poor Lamed master if he had cared to save; only you see——" And then he would hear all about the fortune Ethel had won by the death of the man who loved her.

"He was poor as poor could be," said another. "All the money ever he made went somehow; and then, you know, when he saw a way how he could get lots of money, it tempted him on like."

Paul sickened over it all. Not one whisper of charity, not one shred of faith. And yet this man they so judged had lived his life among them—a life so simple so busy, so full of good and generous deeds, that women, talking of him and what he had done for them and theirs, were accustomed to sob in their talk, and and bless his very name with wet eyes.

But these days were passed—might never have been, for all the memory of them left, Paul thought, as he went on gathering all he might from those who would talk with him on the subject. His heart seemed to harden within him, and all pity for Vivienne died out of it.

"She shall yet suffer as she has left him to suffer," he cried, fiercely. "And if there is justice in the earth, it shall be measured out to her in time."

* * * * * * *

Early one morning Jocelyn Thornton came to see how it was that Ethel and Paul Knox had not been again to see them as they had promised. Paul was out. The Doctor was out. Ethel, reading, was the only one to receive him.

It was a dreary morning. A high wind that brought dashes of rain with it came sweeping in from the sea. it was cold, too, and Winter seemed weeks nearer than it had the day before, when the sun had shone and the warm breeze had not a touch of Autumn in it.

As he came in with the heavy drops of rain on his coat and among his beard, Jocelyn brought back to Ethel's mind the time once before when he had come through the storm to see her, and when, the marks of it had shown upon him.

With the memory came a sharp pain. How could she help it?

All through our lives, glad circumstances and sorrowful circumstances repeat themselves, faintly and with a difference of course, but still clearly enough to raise memory; and when they do this, do they ever fail to raise also the gladness or the sorrow that once lived about them in our hearts?

"Vivienne wants you to come over next Tuesday—all three of you—to a quiet family dinner with us. No one else will be there but Mr. Grant. I am going to the Rectory now to ask him. You must all come, for Vivienne has set her heart upon having you at the Manor."

"I will promise for Mr. Knox and for myself," said Ethel; "We shall be glad to go: but for my father I cannot."

She stopped, blushing a little. She knew well that it was not likely he would have any other engagement.

Jocelyn knew it too, though he gave no sign of that knowledge to her.

"Then if he can't get to dinner, he must drop in when he can. We shall be glad of him at any time."

"Thank you: I will tell him so," replied Ethel.

"And now about this musical affair at Mrs. Hunter's? Vivienne told me to ask you if you intended going?"

"I have never been asked." Ethel spoke calmly, but her lips trembled, and her eyes fell before his.

"What an oversight! But you will be there of course? If you think of going, we might all go together: it would be pleasanter. It is a most extraordinary thing that you have not had a card before this."

Her cheeks burned as she listened. Through every nerve she felt the pain and humiliation of the situation, but never thought of evading the truth.

"I shall not get one at all," she said, trying to keep the tears out of her eyes. "Mrs. Hunter and I have ceased to know each other."

He looked at her in amazement; then a thought struck him and he began to understand, and, from his heart, he was sorry for her.

"They think that she is like themselves, a manœuvrer, and that she plotted and planned to get this legacy of poor Gilbert." So he thought, growing angry over his fancies. This shadow which had crept round Ethel and her father he had seen for a long time—he could not have failed to see it; but of its real cause he did not even dream. Too much bound in with the story himself to hear a whisper of all these tales that were afloat about the Doctor, he could only guess at the reason of this curious change—this change that made near neighbors and old friends like the Hunters fall away from the Wests. True to his nature, the thought fretted him.

He rose to go.

"Well," he said, "at the best she is a tiresome woman, and no great loss. For my part, I expect to be bored to death at this affair of hers; but Vivienne says we must go."

That was enough for him—Vivienne had said it. So he prepared his love before her—this girl who had been the first to win it in the old days: and all the time he never once thought that these days might be fresh in her heart ever then, as she stood and listened to him, with her white lids half drooped, to hide the tears in her eyes, her cheeks smiling faintly, though they were still hot and red.

"I will tell Vivienne that she may expect you and Mr. Knox on Tuesday, and the Doctor will come also, if possible. I have to be very particular, you know, and not forget anything, or she would say I had been careless."

So he went away, pleasant as ever.

"The strangest thing I ever knew of," he said to himself, thinking over this last bit of news, and switching the raindrops off the leaves with his light cane as he passed under them.

"We must put it down at once. It is quite infamous to blame Ethel for the poor fellow's fancy. We must let these people see what we think of their conduct. I'll speak to Vivienne about it; she'll soon set them right."

He was thinking still of Gilbert's love and Gilbert's legacy, and had no glimmer of anything else in his busy brain, as he went along between the showers, with the keen breeze reddening his cheeks, and sweeping back the thick, golden ripples of his beard.

PEOPLE TORMENTED by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are thin, nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will find it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for bilious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and untimely decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class commends its self so strongly to nervous invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the dangers which threaten the debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which so many so-called tonics simply are. It so regulates the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the "Quinine Wine of Northrop & Nyman." Sold by all druggists

DRESS GOODS!

BLACK CASHMERES:—Among the numerous Dress Fabrics, for which we are indebted to the French, there are none more serviceable or so well adapted for all seasons and all occasions, for either house or street wear, as BLACK CASHMERES. We ask a special visit for our Dress Department.

Our Black Cashmeres have made a name for themselves, and for us, and people who are now wearing them, are delighted with their durability, color, weight and finish.

We have great confidence in setting forth the merits of our stock of this favorite fabric, because we believe them to be good, and having confidence are not afraid to recommend them.

BLACK STUFFS:—In Black Goods, other than Cashmeres, we invite special attention to the values offered, as well as to the range from which to select. Black Brilliantines, Black Persian Cords, Black India Crape Cloths, Black Balmoral Crape Cloths, Black Figured Lastres, Black Taffetas, and Italian Cloths.

COLOURED CASHMERES:—In Plain Dress Goods our Colored Cashmeres have met with a ready sale. We offer them in UNION and ALL WOOL, and in all the shades most in demand. There is a beautiful cloth being worn at present, called the "FOULE CROISE," an All-Wool French Twill, which will take the place of Cashmeres to a considerable extent this season. It makes a rich and effective suit.

FANCY DRESS GOODS: In Fancy Dresses, Checks are being largely worn, although the greater portion of the goods being sold are of a plain character. We have a very stylish line of the checked goods in Fawn, Grey and TEA DRAB grounds, with a neat silk over-check. Plain DeBaiges, Plain Lastres and Cords, Checked and Spotted Sateens, will make up the bulk of the sales during the coming Spring and Summer. Our stock of the above goods is fully up to former seasons in "tone" and value, and of a wider range.

BUNTINGS:—During the warmer months of the Summer, Buntings will again be the prevailing material. We are showing them in Cream, Pale Blue, Drab and Black, in all-wool goods, both plain and checked.

ARRIVED! A handsome line of ROBE DRESS GOODS.

N.B.—It is well to remember that at least half of the "effect" of any material is made by a judicious selection of the trimmings. We have Fringes, Silk Cords, Cord and Tassels, Satins, Silks, Braids and Buttons TO MATCH in every instance.

A TARDY APOLOGY.—The following letter which appears in a recent issue of the Globe speaks for itself. It will be noted that the writer waited from Dec 23 1880, till March 29, 1881, to do a simple act of justice which honor and self-respect demanded to be done promptly.

To the Sporting Editor of the Globe.

"SIR,—Since the publication of the correspondence which recently appeared in your paper between Mr. Edwards and myself, I have been assured by Mr. Edwards that the statement contained in my letter dated 23rd December last, as follows: 'It was only when they (the Peterborough's) were informed that the Argonaut crew had decided not to row that they determined to go to Lachine' was incorrect. I have no hesitation therefore, in withdrawing the same.

Yours, &c.,

Hallett, R. B. Rogers and W. A. Stratton, Committee. A deputation from the Lacrosse Club was heard in regard to renting the ground, which was referred to a subsequent meeting in two weeks.

THE LITTA CONCERT.—This much anticipated event came off on Friday evening last, when a very large audience assembled at Bradburn's Hall. The programme opened by a piano solo by Miss Bangs, executed in a very effective style. Miss McLean followed with an aria, in which she at once gained the favor of the audience. She has a rich and powerful centreralto voice, and interprets her music with much expression. She secured an encore at each appearance. Mr. Skelton's cornet solo was superbly rendered, and at each appearance he was vociferously encored. M'lle Litta was applauded on her appearance, and was introduced with an apology, as she was suffering with ulcerated sore throat. She sang an aria, however, in superb style, and elicited a rapturous encore, to which she merely bowed her acknowledgement. M'lle Zantey's violin performances were very exquisitely rendered. A duet by M'lle Litta and Mr. Cleveland concluded the first part of the programme, and the audience were doubly charmed by the prima donna's execution. Miss Bang's piano solo, "Moise" (Thalberg) was an agreeable surprise, as though she had played very sweetly at the opening, the audience had not been led to anticipate the brilliant execution which the artiste displayed in this piece. Mr. Cleveland's ballad does not call for any favourable remark. M'lle Litta then followed with "Miserere" from the favorite opera Il. Trovatore, with cornet accompaniment by Mr. Skelton. The rendering of this piece excited the greatest enthusiasm, and richly merited the unanimous encore it received, but it was questionable taste which enforced her second appearance, as she was evidently suffering from her efforts to carry out her part, in spite of indisposition. She however responded, but the audience lost thereby the treat of the duet by M'lle Litta and Miss McLean which was to conclude the programme. M'lle Zantey gave another exquisite performance on the violin, and Miss McLain sang "My Life and I" responding to an encore with "Mrs. Lofty and I," both pieces being superbly given. After another cornet solo the concert concluded with God Save the Queen, by M'lle Zantey and Mr. Skelton. Those who exerted themselves to secure the people of Peterborough the rich treat which so many persons enjoyed on this occasion, deserve the thanks of all who were present, the credit, we believe, being due to Mr. W. H. Cluxton.

THE IRISH LAND BILL.

The Land Question Successfully Dealt With by Mr. Gladstone.

A Contented Ireland.

LONDON, April 7.—In the Commons today, on Mr. Gladstone rising to introduce the Land Bill he was greeted with enthusiastic cheering. The House was densely crowded. Mr. Gladstone said it was the most difficult question he had ever to deal with in the course of his political life. He felt satisfaction at exchanging the dreary work of repression for legislation of an improving and reforming character. The grounds which induced the Government to deal with the land question were not that the Irish landlords were bad, not that appeals to the passions of the Irish people had been made by persons whose wild proposals are little removed from schemes of public plunder, but because the Irish land laws contained peculiar provisions which prevented the prosperity of the Irish tenant. According to the report of the Bessborough Commission, the Irish people declared that they did not desire the expropriation of landlords or confiscation of the property of others, but desired to cultivate in security the land of the country, and enjoy the fruits of their labor, paying a fair rent for the land. These being the views of the Irish people, they had a broad basis on which to proceed to found legislation. It was not just to say that the legislation is necessary because of the faults of IRISH LANDLORDS.

They had stood the trial and, as a rule, have been acquitted, though the proceedings of a limited number of them had been arbitrary, harsh and cruel. This was partly, but not solely, the reason for the necessity of the legislation the Government was about to introduce. Mr. Gladstone then referred to the partial failure of the Land Act of 1870, which he attributed mainly, though not wholly, to amendments which the Government has disapproved. He reviewed the reports of the Richmond and Bessborough Commissions, which, notwithstanding the conflicting authorities and recommendations, have been of the greatest service to the Government. The Richmond Commission, with one dissentient, and the Bessborough Commission unanimously, agreed in recommending the establishment of a court to deal with the differences between the landlord and tenant. Regarding the rent, two great questions were to be dealt with—first, the relations between the landlord and tenant in Ireland, and second, the advances from the public exchequer. He declared that never as a Minister had he had he submitted any measure with a greater sense of the

and propositions involved. "Nothing that can be legitimately done," he said, "by a Government for the promotion of legislation shall we hesitate to do to procure the passing of an effective measure to deal with the land question of Ireland." He examined and justified in detail the principles of the measure; beginning with the right of assignment or free sale, which he declared already existed by common law and custom. Before the Act of 1870 the interest which the tenant had to assign was so small as to be worthless. Under that Act tenant right in the shape of compensation for disturbance became something sensible, and considerable. It had been recognized by every member of the Bessborough Commission, the minority of the Richmond Commission acknowledged it, and the majority had not a word to say against it. The present bill does not introduce any unregulated tenant right. Provision is made for preventing it from passing into extravagance, and for protecting the just rights of landlords by bringing into fair competition the tenant's right to assign, and the landlord's right to get what his land is reasonably worth. The salient point and cardinal feature of the bill is the

to take cognizance of rent, and which will not be debarred from taking cognizance of tenure and assignment. There is strong ground for making resort to this court optional instead of compulsory. There may be tenants who do not desire the interference of this court. Every existing tenant might call on the court to fix a judicial rent for fifteen years, during which there could be no change, no eviction, except for breach of certain specified covenants. The Ulster custom remains, as now, at the tenant's option, but the tenant will have the protection of the general provisions of the bill to controlling the augmentation of rent. Power to contract out of the Act is given. Where the rent amounts to £200 yearly the court have the final authority over the land cases. It is to consist of three persons, one of which must be a judge or ex-judge of the Supreme Court. Its proper seat is to be at Dublin, but extra commissioners, and if necessary sub-commissioners, may be appointed under the control of the Central Commission. The civil bill courts will be courts of first instance. It is proposed to assist the tenants to purchase holdings and invest the courts with power to purchase the lands from the landlords desiring to sell, and re-sell them, retaining the title as a guarantee for the repayment and against subdivision. Advances are to be made to owners, tenants and solvent companies formed for the purpose of or for other agricultural improvements, on condition that the advances don't exceed the amount the borrower has laid out on his own behalf. Advances will also be made to assist emigration. They will be under the control of the Land Commission, subject to the consent of the treasury, and will be made either to colonial governments or companies. It is not proposed to place any limit on these advances beyond making them secure. Mr. Gladstone concluded by saying that

JUSTICE IS TO BE THE PRINCIPLE

to guide England in regard to Ireland. (Loud cheers.)

Sir Stafford Northcote and Mr. Shaw stated that they did not intend to discuss the bill now. Mr. Shaw said he believed the latter part of the bill gave general satisfaction. He hoped that this attempt, which he believed was made honestly and sincerely to settle the question, would be accepted in Ireland as having been made in that spirit.

Mr. Parnell said he did not intend to express an opinion on the bill at present, but suggested that the power to emigration was not accompanied by others enabling the Land Commission to favor emigration to lands that might be purchased for that purpose.

Mr. Forster stated that the Government would be prepared to make advances to tenants for the purchase of that being a point which Mr. Gladstone omitted to mention in his speech.

The bill was then read a first time.

The Irish members met after Gladstone's speech, and the general opinion was that if the bill passed there would be little cause left for complaint on the part of Ireland. Fears were expressed that the House of Lords might alter the bill.

Dissensions have arisen in the Cabinet and there is great excitement. The Duke of Argyll, Lord Privy Seal, has resigned, and the opinion prevails that Sir William Harcourt, Secretary of State for the Home Department, will also resign.

A London despatch says that certain provisions of the Land Bill perhaps foreshadow the downfall of the law of entail and settlement.

THE TOWN COUNCIL.

NEW DEPARTURE ON THE LICENSE QUESTION.

A special meeting of the Town Council was held on Monday evening at which there were present His Worship the Mayor and Messrs. Taylor, McNaughton, Paterson, Kelly, Chamberlain, Yelland, Rutherford, Menzies and Hartley.

The Mayor explained that he had been requested to hold the meeting previous to the meeting of the License Commissioners in order to arrange for the issuance of beer and wine licenses under the new law. The Clerk had had a by-law prepared.

The by-law was read a first time and the Council went into committee, Mr. Taylor in the chair.

Mr. Paterson moved the filling in of the blank with $120, as recommended by the Committee.

Mr. Chamberlain thought the amount should be fixed at $100. He did not have much faith in the promotion of temperance by this arrangement, but he thought they should give the measure a chance and meet the Government half way, since they had reduced the Government license.

Mr. McNaughton thought this beer license was simply a method of blindfolding the Devil in the dark. Places where beer licenses would be taken out would be simple hell-holes, and they would take advantage of the partial license to sell whiskey and brandy and everything else.

Mr. Rutherford thought the granting of these licenses would have exactly the opposite effect. He referred to the operations of the lager beer licenses at the Centennial, and the exclusion of alcoholic stimulants. There had been, although the attendance of visitors was enormous, no intoxication during the continuance of that system. He said the same result was observable in all American cities where beer-drinking was encouraged to the exclusion of ardent spirits. He thought the license should be fixed at $120.

Mr. Menzies moved that the license be fixed at $160. He did not believe there was any more insobriety in Canadian than in American cities.

The Mayor thought that $120 was sufficient charge. He thought it was an advantage to encourage the use of beer in preference to that of which and hoped all the licenses would be taken out in that way. He agreed Mr. Rutherford that if at the Centennial under a lager-beer license system, 250,000 to 400,000 people could daily, without any intoxication being observable, it was a strong argument in favor of the adoption of a similar system here.

The blank in the by-law was then filled up with $120, and the by-law was passed through the remaining stages.

The Council then adjourned.

Peterborough Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 14, 1881.

Mr. Blake's Montreal Speech.

The Montreal Spectator is a journal published by Rev. Mr. Bray, of that city, who writes his editorials in the first person, and cannot therefore object to be held personally responsible for the same. The two distinguishing features of the Spectator are the exalted opinion which it entertains of the Rev. Mr. Bray, and the ingenuity with which, while maintaining the semblance of an independent journal, it finds excuses for landing its patron at Ottawa, Sir Charles Tupper. In a recent issue it pretends to review the speech of Mr. Blake, at the Montreal banquet, and in doing so, most grossly misrepresents what the Liberal leader said on the occasion. The Spectator says explicitly that Mr. Blake advocated Independence for Canada. Has the reverend gentleman forgotten the commandment which admonishes him to abstain from bearing false witness against his neighbor? Mr. Blake did not advocate independence, and Mr. Bray knows it; yet he makes the assertion. The inference any one may make for himself. If the Rev. Mr. Bray had the courage to print a report of Mr. Blake's speech in the columns of his journal, he would be heartily welcome to print as many columns of his shallow opinions thereon as he chose, but as he does not presume report the speech which he ventures to criticise, it is hardly fair to deliberately misstate what Mr. Blake did say on the occasion. At all events, it is not to accord with the lofty opinion which the Spectator holds of Mr. Bray, and Mr. Bray ought to call upon the Spectator to apologize.

Bought the Newspaper.

The Hamilton Times says:—"We "never knew a man to accuse a news- "paper of having been 'bought' who "could not be bought himself for one- "tenth the price which he imagines was "paid for the influence of the news- "paper." Hamilton is not the only place where exist men who are ready to pronounce the same judgment on any opinion of the newspaper which may not happen to run with their ideas. These kind of men are frequently met with, and as a general rule they either do not subscribe to the newspaper which they slander, or if they do, they will be found with several years' arrears for subscription against them, and an ultimate intention of swindling the publisher out of the amount. Men of contracted ideas, of no principle, are very prone to apply the standard of their own motives to the opinions of the newspapers on any subject in which they may be interested, and any newspaper which performs it's duty, is pretty sure to encounter a certain amount of this kind of criticism. There is, however, a certain average of common sense with the public, which does more justice to the motive of the journalist, and which sufficiently consoles the newspaper for charges of venality from quarters for which it has the least reason to have any regard. As a rule, of all public servants the newspaper is the least likely to be actuated by selfish or unworthy motives, and however the reader may disagree with the opinions advanced, he may safely rely that they are dictated by an earnest desire to promote the public welfare. No other agency of education and progress works so steadily, so unselfishly or so earnestly for the good and advancement of all as the local newspaper.

Shaking up the Shrievalties.

The developments in connection with the Ottawa shrievalty, followed by the dismissal of the Sheriff for his rascalities, have now been succeeded by the removal of another officer occupying a similar position at Belleville, on account of flagrant abuses connected with the gaol and matters pretaining thereto. We observe our contemporary, the Intelligencer endeavoring to make political capital out of the Sheriff's dismissal, by an utterly fair presentation of, thereof. The fact is simply that the dismissed sheriff was an appointee of the Ontario Government, and his removal by the Government of his own party was necessitated by abuses which he allowed to flourish under his supervision. There was no party politics concerned in the matter, though, had he been a Conservative, it would have been equally the duty of the Government to deal with the case. We are of opinion that the Government would do well to institute an enquiry into all the shrievalties in the Province, with a view to placing them under a proper system of inspection, and attaching proper responsibility to the occupants of such offices. We know what the results of enquiry into the Registry Offices and Division Court Offices were, and it is not at all improbable that there are other shrievalties besides those of Carleton and Hastings, where extraneous have grown up upon which it would be well to exert the pruning knife. In fact it appears to us that, in view of the facts related by Sheriff McKellar some time ago, as to the inequality of the emoluments received by different Sheriffs, the whole question might be profitably taken up and dealt with, with the object of placing these officers, their duties, emoluments and responsibilities upon an entirely new footing. No little dissatisfaction exists in many counties with the manner in which these offices are filled, and the matter should receive the attention of the Government.

The Lindsay Libel Suit.

The case of a member of the Lindsay School Board, against Mr. C. D. Barr, of the Lindsay Post, for an alleged libel, was tried at the Assizes last week, and resulted in a verdict of acquittal. The ground on which the libel was alleged, was that the Post had published the fact that in connection with the question of retaining the services of a teacher, whose offences against soberiety had been so flagrant as to unfit him for the responsibilities which surround a teacher of youth, a majority of the Board, created by the casting vote of the chairman, had decided to condone the teacher's offences, and to continue him in a position for which his improper conduct had disqualified him. This public placing of a premium upon insobriety was felt to be not only a reproachto the town, but a dangerous and immoral precedent, calculated to do an injury to the cause of education, and the interests of the young, not easy to estimate, and Mr. Barr in his newspaper, performed the unpleasant but necessary duty of recording censure upon the trustees, who were responsible for the transaction. Immediately four of the trustees made a simultaneous attack upon Mr. Barr, alleging that his strictures upon their conduct constituted a libel, and demanded each $5,000 from the publisher, as a salve for wounded reputation, and as a slight satisfaction for the wear and tear of their tender and sensitive feelings. Mr. Barr stood his ground, declined to apologise, and showed that for what he had undertaken as a public duty, he was prepared to accept the fullest responsibility. The jury, by their verdict, have endorsed him in this position, and taught a lesson to other municipal bodies that they will do well to heed. Family, social or religious combinations are liable to grow up around bodies of this kind, and where they acquire from uninterrupted away of their own ideas the contempt for public opinion, which found so offensive expression, in the case of the Lindsay School Board insobriety ring, a lesson such as this libel suit is calculated to have a wholesome effect. Mr. Barr's position in this case was not weakened by the fact that a son of the prosecutor, pending the libel suit, wrought personal satisfaction and got it—in the Police Court, and in the contempt and reprobation of every honest man in the Province. Mr. Barr has, in this matter, done the public good service by exposing a dangerous abuse in the first place, and in the second place by asserting the right of free discussion in the public interests. We congratulate him.

The Blind Asylum Investigation.

We are glad to observe that the completion of the investigation of the charges against Prof. Hunter, of the Brantford Blind Asylum, has exonerated that gentleman from the graver accusations brought against him. It would have been a painful consideration, that anything that savored of immorality could be affixed to the character of a gentleman occupying a position of such importance and responsibility, and we are therefore glad to know that nothing has been established to affect Dr. Hunter's integrity. But his unfitness for the position, arising from his peculiar idiosyncracies has been abundantly demonstrated, and the Government has been compelled to remove him to another sphere of labor, in which his abilities will not be lost to the Province, and in which he will not be brought into contact with others, which, it seems, he is not able to endure with credit to himself or comfort to those surrounding him. Mr. A. H. Diamond has been induced to accept the position of Principal of the Blind Asylum, and we are sure all who know him, or know of him, will agree that a better selection could not possibly have been made. A man of great ability, of the most upright character, kindly and generous in his nature, and possessed in a very rare measure of qualities of industry, perseverance and patient determination, which, in that position, will be peculiarly available, Mr. Diamond will, we venture to predict, prove himself a more than ordinarily useful and efficient public officer.

ORANGE FIRE INSURANCE ASSOCIATION.

D. KENNEDY, Esq.,
Agent G. F. I. A.
Otonabee, April, 1881.

SIR,—I have to thank you for the care in the general selection of risks in our company.

And also to congratulate the Directors for careful management by which in four years the Company has been brought to its excellent financial standing. I was one of the first to insure in the Company. To the amount of $1,000, I paid $12.50, and also gave an undertaking which rival agents predicted, would be assessed to the full amount.

The undertaking has been returned to me unassessed, and $1.57 paid back in cash. I have therefore had the best possible insurance of $1,000 for four years for $11.93, or $3.95 for three years, which is scarcely 66 cents in the $100 for three years.

As Warden of St. Mark's Church, Otonabee, I insured it at the same time for $1,000. The undertaking has been returned; also, a cash balance of unexpended premium. The amount per $100 on this risk for three years was only a little over 40 cents.

The Company appears to be working on the true mutual principal. It rarely, if ever, has occurred in Canada, that the insured ever received back any portion of the money paid to Insurance Companies.

Wishing you every success in the future, I am, fraternally,
MARK GRAYSTOCK,
Otonabee. Graystock P.O.

LAND SALT!

TO FARMERS!

The experience of Canadian Farmers during the last few years corroborates almost without exception the benefits to all grain crops by an early and liberal application of LAND SALT. The immediate effects noticeable are the retention of moisture and a marked stiffening of the straw preventing its lodging; thus enabling the kernel more fully to mature.

These effects were fully brought out at the last meeting of the N. and D. Association held in town on the 12th and 13th of January. Many of the most influential members of the Society testified that they had used Land Salt for several years, and always with good results.

In reply to the question as to which kind of Salt was the best, the testimony of all was emphatically in favor of LIVERPOOL SALT. In fact it was stated that one sack of Liverpool Salt was worth from one and a half to two barrels of Goderich Salt.

Liverpool Salt is stronger, it has more vitality, and hence is the most economical to apply. It has been proved to be better than bulk salt, which is the refuse left from refining the finer kinds of barrel salt, also; it is acknowledged to go further and give better results.

PETERBORO' EXAMINER.—Supplement.

The White Rose of Scotland.

A HISTORICAL SKETCH.

"Catharine, we must part. The king this morn contemptuously refused me further aid. Indignant at his want of faith, I retorted in no measured terms, and am enjoined, on penalty of paying my life a forfeit to my disobedience, to quit the kingdom, three days only being allowed me to prepare for my departure. I must return to Flanders, there to seek that support which is denied me here. Toils and dangers await me, to which I cannot consent to thy exposure. That tender form of thine, my love, is not suited to endure the buffet of my stormy fortune."

Such were the words of the husband of the Lady Catharine Gordon, on his return from an unsuccessful interview with James IV. of [illegible].

"And shall Huntly's daughter," replied the lady, "thus consent to desert her husband? Never, my dear Richard. I claim participation in your revenge. Let us leave Scotland; let us together seek our exile, and a kindred fate be ours. Where thou goest will I go, where thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God!"

"Noble-minded woman!—but it must not be!" ejaculated the youth. "Catharine—for I dare no longer wear a mask—prepare to curse thy unworthy husband. Thou deemest me the rightful heir to England's crown, but know me as a base impostor. I won thy love by a lie. Ambitiously aspiring to the heart of one fair and noble as thyself, have I entailed on a great and glorious race ruin and dishonor. Yet, oh! forgive me, and do not execrate my wild ambition."

"Oh, Richard, was this deception generous? Yet hold, my swelling heart, and let my duty as a wife subdue my woman's pride. My husband, avert not from me thus thy tearful eyes. Whoe'er thou art, thou hast been to me all tenderness. It will be now my grateful task to prove to thee that Catharine Gordon's love was unalloyed by interest and ambition. If she adored thee when, 'mid thy gallant train, thou stoodest unmatched, 'twas not the splendor of thy royal name that bade me wish thee mine. Yes, my husband, I loved thee, and still I love thee, for thyself alone. Let us, then, fly these shores; desist from the wild pursuit of what thou hast no claim to, and let us seek a happy, a contented privacy."

"Alas, my beloved! it is impossible. Bound by a solemn oath to pursue, while I have being, the claim I have asserted, no rest, no peace remains to me. Leave me to my woes—leave me to my dishonor. Why—why should both be wretched!"

As the unhappy speaker concluded he folded in his arms his faithful wife, and ineffectually endeavored to subdue her determination to share his fortunes.

The reader will ere this have discovered in the husband of the Lady Catharine the youth who, during the reign of Henry VII., had arrogated to himself the title of Richard, Duke of York, second son of Edward IV., who with his brother had been murdered in the Tower by the inhuman Richard III.

Possessed of every accomplishment that could engage affection, the youth, whose name was Perkin Warbeck, a Fleming, had gained the ready respect and confidence of many persons of rank in England.

After the failure, however, of his endeavors to excite a revolt in that country, which were discovered by the vigilance of the king, and frustrated by the immediate execution of his adherents, he had repaired to Scotland, and solicited the assistance of James IV. to place him on the throne of England.

James, whose credulity was equal to his valor, was easily prevailed on to support his pretensions.

He received him with the highest distinction, and in a short time consented to his union with a relative of his own, the Lady Catharine Gordon, daughter of the Earl of Huntly.

Between the "White Rose of Scotland"—for such was the appellation which the extraordinary beauty of this young lady had gained her—and the adventurer an ardent attachment had existed from the earliest period of his arrival in Scotland.

But finding the English people by no means disposed to join the fictitious prince, the Scottish king gave up the cause as hopeless.

The sun was attaining to his meridian height when the unhappy adventurer and his devoted bride embarked at Leith for Flanders.

"Bless thee, laddie! bestow a bawbee in charity on puir auld witless Mansie."

Such were the words addressed by a wretched-looking figure to the Lady Catharine, as, leaning on her husband's arm, she appeared on the beach.

She threw her a small coin, which the beggar received, ejaculating:

"Mony thanks, leddie; Mansie's prayers shall swell the breeze that wafts thee ower the wide saut wave. But," almost shrieked she, gazing intently on the astonished Catharine, "muckle fear has I ye needna wish a speedy voyage—better a watery grave than a broken heart—better a pillow on the foaming brine than a sleepless bed in a foreign land."

"What meanest thou?" earnestly demanded Catharine, whose curiosity and alarm were strongly excited by the words of the beggar.

"Ah, leddie, dinna ask. Gin ye ever wi' auld Mansie's een, ye wadna leave the land o' yer forebears to roam 'mang rathless foes, a lanely exile. Farewell, farewell, leddie; dinna forget the warnin' o' auld Mansie!"

As she spoke she turned from the disappointed Catharine, who, with her husband, repaired to the boat that was to convey them to the vessel which was about to wait her forever from her native land.

As the boat was [illegible] from the shore, the beggar's discordant [illegible] was heard chanting the following song:

"The White Rose has drooped
Through a brief summer day,
Yet the White Rose is doomed
To a rapid decay.

"The smile may impart
A transitory ruffle,
Yet the worm in thy heart
That shall banish that smile.

"Farewell!—oh, farewell!
'Mid the tempest that blows,
Its mystic rings the knell
Of Scotland's White Rose.

"Swift to bear thee away,
Round thee hoarse billows swell
Once again, an' for aye,
Rose of Scotland, farewell!"

As the last words of the song pealed on the ears of the unfortunate Catharine, she ascended the side of the vessel, and, with eyes tearless from agony, perceived the shores of her native land receding fast from her view.

By an agreement between the English and Flemish courts, all English rebels had been excluded from the Low Countries.

Perkin, though born in England, was a Fleming by extraction, and might therefore have claimed admission into Flanders.

But, as he must have dismissed his English retainers, the brave companions of his dangers, and as he had to apprehend a cold reception from a people who were determined to maintain an amicable footing with the English Court, he resolved not to hazard the experiment, but repaired to Ireland, where he remained for some time in insecure and comfortless exile.

It is not to be expected that we shall follow the historian into detail of his subsequent attempt upon England, of his landing in Cornwall, being joined by the populace, and taking upon himself for the first time the title of Richard IV., King of England.

It was at this period that his too faithful wife, following the fortunes of her unhappy husband, fell into the hands of the enemy.

This was a fatal blow to the adventurer. In all his wanderings she had shared his fortunes.

With all his faults he had still adored his lovely, his ill-fated bride, his fair and spotless "White Rose."

We shall not depict the humiliating scene of his surrender to King Henry—of the exposure of his fictitious claims, of his ignominious treatment and close confinement, of his repeated efforts to escape, and lastly, of his arraignment and condemnation—but pass on to the scene of execution.

. . . . . .

The last morn that ever broke upon the eyes of the unhappy pretender to royalty dawned heavily and slowly.

At an early hour the roads and lanes adjacent to the hill of Tyburn, the place of execution, were thronged with anxious and expecting thousands.

A detachment of soldiers surrounded the sledge on which the culprit and his confessor were placed.

As the procession approached the fatal spot, Perkin threw his eyes upon the gallows that frowned on the hill, and observed to his confessor, with a smile of bitter disappointment:

"Yonder is the throne to which ambition has exalted me."

The father entreated him to dismiss from his thoughts everything that might distract him from the awful duty of preparing to meet his Maker, adding, that through disappointed of an earthly throne, the present place was to be a stepping-stone to an eternal one.

"Were not these arms pinioned," cried the prisoner, "I would embrace the tree; and, since my tongue is not restrained, I thank thee for the blest assurance."

He was now urged to a public confession of his imposture.

"Is not then your master yet satisfied?" said he, adding, "but I consent, and thus proclaim my infamy. Urged on by restless ambition, but more by the ready tool of others' designing, I have disturbed the quiet of these realms, and sought a crown to which I had no claim. Father," he added, lowering his voice, "Heaven is my witness that had I not been bound by oath, I had long discontinued this iniquitous and futile enterprise. My unhappy Catharine! how does my heart bleed at thought of her. She long, long entreated me to resign the ambitious claim. That angel woman, father, in the flower of youth, in beauty's hour of pride, resigned her fate to my keeping; the descendant of a line of princes, she brooked alliance with a wanderer, an outcast.

"She loved me—she wedded me—she clung to my misfortunes—she joined in all my miseries, to prove the fervor of her truth. Oft has she wiped my burning brow, streaming with drops of anguish—oft has she cheered, with sounds of hope, my sinking heart. But now, now, father, she pines in bitter restraint, the captive of your master. Heaven's curse light on him if he give her gentle bosom aught of pain! 'Twas well for both we were spared the misery of a last adieu. I deemed it, in thy king, refinement of hatred to deny a final interview, but my heart now tells me he did it more in mercy than in anger. But no more. I have done with earth—I have done with Catharine."

He knelt, and crossing his hands on his breast, ejaculated a silent prayer.

At that moment a stir was perceived among the crowd, and a female broke through the soldiers that surrounded the drop, and threw herself into the arms of the criminal.

"Not yet! not yet! Spare him a little longer! Tear him not so soon from my arms!" she ejaculated.

"My poor mourner, 'tis too late," replied the condemned.

"Oh, no, no, no!" replied Catharine, "it is never too late for mercy. Take him back to his dungeon—respite him but a few hours. I will again to the king, throw myself at his feet, nor cease till he forgives!"

Nature could do no more.

She sank insensible into the arms of her husband.

"Now is the time," cried he, printing a last kiss on her pale cheek, as he consigned her to his confessor, directing him to remove her from the spot. "The bitterness of death is past," ejaculated he, as he threw on her one lingering look, and calmly submitted to the hands of the executioner.

The motion attending the removal of the Lady Catharine restored animation.

Involuntarily she turned her eyes towards the fatal spot.

What she saw may be conceived from the sequel.

"The fiends have murdered him!" she shrieked.

They were the last words of expiring reason that burst from the lips of the White Rose of Scotland.

The Climax of Medicine.

Burdock Blood Bitters

The Great System Renovator.

The Best Blood Purifier, Liver and Kidney Regulator, and Health Restoring Tonic in the World.

Warranted to cure every form of disease arising from a Torpid Liver, Impure Blood, and disordered Kidneys, and every species of Humor from an ordinary pimple to the worst Scrofula, if taken in time, faithfully adhering to directions. Broken down conditions of the system requiring a prompt and permanent Tonic that will restore and invigorate the flagging vital powers will find the long sought remedy in

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

The discoverer of this marvellous medicine does not claim that it is an infallible cure-all, well knowing that there are certain advanced stages of disease, such as Consumption, Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Cancer, etc., that often baffle all medical science and skill, but it is claimed, demonstrated, and established beyond controversy, that all ordinary diseases of the Blood, Liver and Kidneys, General Debility, Scrofula, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Biliousness, Jaundice, Loss of Appetite, Constipation of the Bowels, Obstructions, Retention of the Urine, Dropsy, Enlargement of the Spleen, Fits, Lowness of the Spirits, Headache, Weakening Discharges, and all forms of Female Weaknesses, whose name is legion; Piles, Heart Disease, Apoplexy, Dyspepsia, Uterine Diseases, &c.

For the purification of the blood and toning of the system no combination known to medical science can equal the life-giving principles of

Burdock Blood Bitters.

Do not exhaust and debilitate the system with drastic cathartics and strong purgatives, when a few doses of so pleasant and palatable a remedy as Burdock Blood Bitters will produce the desired result without harm or inconvenience to the most delicate constitution.

STRICTLY VEGETABLE,

And one of the best medicines in use for regulating the bowels,

Burdock Blood Bitters

Are Tonic, Laxative, Alterative (purifying), Diuretic (acting upon the urinary secretions), gently stimulating and invigorating all the organs of the body to a healthy action.

They act beneficially not alone upon the Liver, but upon the entire glandular system, carrying off impurities and all morbid and offensive accumulations, and regulating the secretions to a proper action; they thus impart a healthy tone and vigor to the whole system. Diseases that have baffled all other treatment speedily yield to their benign influence.

Blood is the vital fluid by which the organs and tissues of the body are nourished; being the source from which we derive all physical and mental vigor, how necessary that it be kept pure. If the blood contain poisonous matter all the organs become impaired. The majority of diseases that afflict the human family arise from an impure or impoverished state of the blood, or an improper action of the Liver.

The Liver is the largest gland of the body, and the only one that is supplied with veinous as well as arterial blood: its office is to secrete bile, which is nature's proper cathartic.

When the Liver is Affected

The bowels are constipated, the skin becomes pale, or else of a dark and sallow hue; the healthy elements of the blood become separated, and it is either loaded with thick and effete matter becoming clogged in the system, or the watery portion may predominate, giving rise to bloating, dropsical swellings, etc., headache, biliousness, pain in the back and shoulders, dyspeptic symptoms, such as distress after eating, pain in the region of the stomach; a languid, tired, exhausted, stupid feeling comes over the sufferers, rendering them depressed in spirits, gloomy and miserable. General weakening and debility of the whole system follows, and the weaker organs of the body take on inflammatory or diseased action; congestion or consumption of the special organs affected is the result.

Burdock Blood Bitters

Are compound entirely of herbal medicines, prominent among which is that well known, valuable plant, Arctium Lappa, or Burdock, that grows so plentifully by our waysides.

This invaluable plant, like many another, has been underrated in value because of its simplicity; yet the best botanical authority ascribes to it golden virtues as a blood purifier, and as such it ranks second to none.

Burdock possesses Alterative, Aperient and strong Diuretic properties, with a marked action upon the skin and secretions; alone it has wonderful power in Dropsies, slow perhaps in action by itself, but when combined, as it is in these bitters, with other choice alteratives and tonics, its action is truly marvellous, so marked and decided in its effects that a sample bottle of three or four doses will readily convince the most sceptical.

Burdock Blood Bitters

Is put up in a neat package, containing a bottle of twelve fluid ounces, and sold everywhere at

ONE DOLLAR PER BOTTLE.

One bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters will do more to break up the most obstinate forms of disease than a half-dozen of any other similar preparation now or ever on the market. Burdock Blood Bitters is the Great Household Panacea,

And a combination covering so many indications and meeting so many requirements, that no family should be without it.

Sickness comes when least expected, and no remedy contains so many valuable properties of Materia Medica as this great blood purifier.

BAILEY BROS., LITTLE'S.

WHAT BECAME OF HER?

In a little village church in a small country place, a small congregation gathered together one Sunday. Every pew held people well known to each other, and who knew each other's business. Nobody there but had heard that Thomas Benton had courted Annie Redwood, and how all was going on well, when the two grandfathers quarrelled about an acre of ground in a stony, unproductive spot, and a family feud commenced, and they were separated.

And there the obstinate old grandfathers sat, not caring a whit for all the trouble they had caused, and never forgiving each other's trespasses, despite the fact that they repeated the Lord's Prayer together every Sunday.

Sometimes in summer there would be strangers from the city in church; but now it was winter, and every one wondered to see a large old woman in a great fur hood come into church, and seat herself in a back pew.

Who she was no one could guess, and why she came to church with such a cold as she seemed to have was a wonder to all. She coughed loud and long, interrupting the sermon and the prayer, and at last was seized with such a fit of choking that every head was turned. She seemed to try to rise, but found herself unable to do so. Then Annie Redwood, leaning towards her mother, whispered:

"It's a shame! People ought to be more Christian-like in their conduct. I'll go and help her out."

Then she arose and went softly down the aisle, and bent over the old lady and whispered something, on which the poor old soul arose and took her arm, and they went out of church together. The coughing was heard outside for a moment or two, but the services went on as before, and no one wondered that Annie Redwood did not return.

The family expected to find her when they reached home, of course; but she was not there. She did not come in to dinner, nor did she come to tea. By evening much alarm was felt, and inquiries were made, but without avail. No one had seen the girl since she left the church doors.

There was a Sunday train to a large city, and a man kept watch at the station all the day. He, seeing fewer passengers on Sunday than at any other time, had noticed them all.

The old woman in the plaid shawl had come to the station, but Miss Redwood was not with her.

A young man had been with the old lady.

The old lady could not be traced after that, and nothing more was heard of Annie Redwood.

Many thought the old woman was some dreadful person in disguise, who had murdered Annie for the handsome watch and ring she wore.

The woods were searched and the ponds dragged, but in vain; and the poor girl was at last given up for lost.

The old people had been very cruel to her about Thomas; now they shed bitter and unavailing tears. How much better would it have been to let Annie marry, and have her still with them!

The old grandfathers shook hands for the first time for years. The families were reconciled; but Annie was gone, and Thomas was gone, and what was the use?

"If only I knew what became of my girl," sighed Mrs. Redwood.

"Ah, yes; and if I knew my boy was alive," said Mrs. Benton.

A year passed, and it was the day that Annie had disappeared; and they had all gone to church as usual, and were going homeward.

Mrs. Redwood was in tears.

"I think of Annie all day to-day," she said. "Oh, it is more than I can bear. Who was that old woman? What did she do to my girl?"

"Oh, mother, there she is!" cried one of the daughters.

All looked. Before them on the road tottered a large figure in a plaid cloak, coughing violently. The same old woman, no doubt. But who supported her? Who—

"Good Heaven! it is a ghost!" screamed Mrs. Redwood. "What is it? Oh! what is it?"

"Annie," screamed the girls together; and screaming, sobbing, regardless of what any might think of them, they surrounded the pair.

It was Annie, alive, and holding fast to the arm of the old woman she had helped out of church just a year before.

"Don't question me on the road," she said. "Let us go home."

And glad and angry, and a little terrified, the Bentons and the Redwoods entered the Redwood homestead, and closed the door.

"We thought you dead, Annie," sobbed the mother. "Oh, you have been cruel!"

"But I see my death has reunited you all," said Annie, returning the embrace. "All are here but Tom."

"Oh, poor Tom!" said his mother. "If he were only here too!"

"But I must have an explanation," cried Mr. Redwood, turning upon the old woman. "Who are you, madam?—And what life has my daughter led with you?"

"A happy one, I hope, sir," said the old woman, tossing off her bonnet and throwing away her cloak; and before them stood a tall young man—Thomas Benton, and no other, who said:

"In this disguise I ran away with Annie a year ago. We changed costumes in the church porch, and so got safely off. Now we are here again, ready for your blessing, if you will give it to us. Are we forgiven?"

It was Annie's mother who said "Yes" first, but the others followed in chorus.

Yellow Oil Testimonial.

TORONTO, Sept. 13, 1880.

Messrs. T. Milburn & Co., City.

DEAR SIRS,—I can honestly recommend HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL as the best reliever of rheumatic pains of all the many specifics offered for sale, and as a sufferer for years, I have tried every known remedy.

I remain, respectfully yours,

HAGYARD'S

Yellow Oil,

THE GREAT PAIN PANACEA.

Magical in its Power over Pain.

The Most Popular and Efficient Remedy known for External and Internal Use.

There is no one remedy offered to suffering humanity whose use is so universally and frequently required as

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL.

It should be found in every house for instant use in accidents and emergencies. For all forms of

Inflammatory Action and Pain, SUCH AS Rheumatism, Neuralgia,
Burns, Scalds, Bruises,
Wounds, Frostbites, Chilblains,
Croup, Sore Throat, Quinsey,
Lame Back, Spinal Affections,
Contractions of the Cords & Muscles

And all manner of Lameness and Soreness in any portion of the body,

Asthma, Congestion and Inflammation of the Lungs,

And, in short, wherever and whenever Lameness, Soreness, Pain or Inflammation exist,

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL

May be safely and beneficially used. No danger of taking cold or any other ill effects occur during its use. Swellings and callous lumps disappear as if by magic.

AS A LINIMENT

For universal application it is unsurpassed, while for internal use in proper doses it is safe and agreeable.

There has never been a preparation like it in the market, and it is beyond the art of medical skill to produce its parallel as a remedy for pain and inflammation.

USED EXTERNALLY,

It stops pain and prevents blistering from a burn; it prevents the swelling and discoloration of a bruise; it relieves the intolerable itching and burning of Frost Bites, destroys Corns and Warts, disperses Tumors, and all swellings and Callosities. Rheumatic pains and stiff joints yield promptly to its influence, even after years of annoyance and resistance against all other treatment.

TAKEN INTERNALLY,

Its effect is none the less wonderful, one or two doses curing Hoarseness and Sore Throat, Asthma, Bronchitis and Swelled Tonsils. In Croup, that dread destroyer of children, the first dose gives magical relief. In Colds and Kidney Complaints its effects are prompt and reliable. No matter from what cause pain and soreness arises, HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL is a certain relief. No other Liniment or external application is required in the household.

The purchaser of HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL incurs no risk, as every bottle is sold under a positive guarantee, and the money in all cases will be cheerfully refunded when satisfaction is not received. Finally, the best recommendation we can give the public of the efficiency of HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL is its greatest popularity where it has been longest used.

COOLEY'S DOG.

Cooley's boy has a liver-colored dog, which he has upon several occasions made the subject of very interesting and instructive experiments. Originally the dog's tail curled up over its back; but Cooley's boy was prejudiced in favor of tails that hang down behind, so after amputating the dog's tail with a hatchet, he spent a whole morning trying to graft a skate-strap on the stump. It was not a courageous dog. It would bark all night when nobody was about, but if a tramp came near the house in the daytime the dog would put the skate-strap between his legs, and go in and lie down behind the stove. Cooley's view was that he would prefer a fighting dog, and one day he read in a paper that a timid dog could be made brave by filling his meat with gunpowder and red pepper. Accordingly he put about a quarter of a pound of pepper and a little powder in some meat, rolled it up in a kind of a ball and tossed it to the dog. The dog swallowed it as quick as a flash.

For a few moments the animal seemed contented. But presently he gave a little start, and then paused and looked around to see if anything had happened. Then he gave another jump and began to assume a very solemn appearance. All of a sudden he uttered a sharp howl, and began to circulate around the garden. He went faster, and faster, and Cooley is willing to swear to at least four hundred revolutions a minute. Over the gooseberry bushes, through the asparagus bed, across the fences, among the bean poles he flew with fury, snapping at Cooley as he passed him, scaring the chickens and setting them to cackling, and smashing the vegetables to ruin. The louder Cooley called to him to stop the faster he went, and at last he got his gun and tried to shoot him. He shot fifteen times, and blew holes into the smoke-house door, killed four chickens, and put half a pound of quail shot in his Dorking pig's tail; but the dog still revolved, and went so fast that he looked like a single streak of dog reaching all the way around the garden.

At last the animal ran against the pump, and, being switched off of his course, bounded through the kitchen door, knocked down the stove-pipe, whirled into the dining-room, across the table, smashing two dozen wrath of stoneware, burst through the open door to the parlor, and brought up against the mirror, which he shivered to atoms. Then he fell on the hearth-rug, had spasms around over the floor for an hour or two, and finally expired with his hind legs in the grate, and his head on a forty-dollar rug which was covered with beef and red pepper. They buried him at the roots of the Isabella grapevine, and Cooley's boy, after recovering from the thrashing his father gave him with a fence paling, finally came to the conclusion that as a matter of practical fact, red pepper will not make a dog anxious for war.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

The handkerchief with which Maximilian wiped his face just before being shot at Queretaro has been recently sold for $1,501. We are inclined to suspect that the purchaser was, too.

MESSRS. T. MILBURN & CO.

GENTLEMEN,—About the first of November last I contracted a very heavy cold, which settled on my lungs, and through it I was so hoarse for about two months that I could hardly speak. I used a number of different dollar bottles without any good effect. One day, reading your almanac, I noticed that HAGYARD'S PECTORAL BALSAM was recommended. I resolved to try it, and after using three 25 cent bottles, was entirely well.

"THE CANADA OF OURS."

(Written for the EXAMINER.)

Heav'n favored land, thy praise is sung.
By loving hand, by gentle tongue,
Yet over from thy priceless mine
Of beauty, grace, and virtue, shine
Bright rays to lend thy name along—
To gird thee with immortal song—
To sweep the sounding chords remain.
And louder swell the joyous strain.

Thy wood-crowned hills and lovely plains,
Where Nature speaks while beauty reigns,
Have oft inspired the heavenly lyre.
And thrilled it with celestial fire,
Till all who listened to the sound.
Enraptured, spread thy fame around,
And now the flowers which deck thy page
Will sweetly bloom through every age.

No recreant fear nor falter knew
The dauntless, loo-hearted few—
Our honored sires, the men who gave
To us this home across the wave;
They nobly faced the roughest gales
To open up these blooming vales,
And with their keen and telling stroke,
The forest's iron fetters broke.

Their hands unlocked our teeming fields
That such a golden harvest yield;
To their immortal deeds belong
The key notes of our Nation's song.
While verdure blooms, and water runs,
Canadian hearts—Canadian tongues
Shall join in one glad song to raise
Unfeigning tribute to their praise.

Beside the fairest of the fair
Thy peerless daughters can compare;
Where can you match such forms divine?
Their laughing eyes how bright they shine—
Enchanting is the lustrous flash
That beams from out their silken lash;
How beautiful their tender glance—
Well may such charms the soul entrance.

How sweet their smile, how pure their love,
Reflected from the realms above;
They "Knit our ravelled sleeve of care"
And both our joys and sorrows share.
They point the manor to the sky.
And dry the weary sufferer's eye;
With healing balm the sick they soothe,
And tell of God's undying love.

Brave are thy sons! Fair Queenston's height
Bears witness to their giant might—
Their sturdy stroke, their fiery sheek.
When led by the immortal Brock.
"Push on stout hearts, there is the foe!"—
And straight like dart from bended bow
They strike upon the quiv'ring rank,
And flound'ring, to the earth it sank.

The mighty loins from which we came,
And Britain's ever honored name,
In bright perennial verdure dwell
On mem'ry's shrine. Potent the spell
That firmly binds in chains of love
Our hearts to thee! Where'er we rove,
One glorious boast—our darling pride—
Our fathers' land beyond the tide!

Dear is our loved Canadian home!
Stout hands and hearts, Ho! hither come!
For stalwart limb and willing hand
Will find a welcome o'er our land.
Our's of no mean or small estate
And land and wave; but empire great!
Star more resplendent ne'er was set
In regal crown or coronet.

This vast domain the oceans bound—
It's waters at the Pole are found;
If unborn centuries will but mould
It's massive form—and so unfold
It's hidden wealth, as those last seen
Since Cartier to its shore has been;
The greatness of the present hour
Feebly pourtrays it's future power.

Nature to our broad land is kind—
Majestic views enchain the mind—
'Tis brimful of the beauteous scenes
We sometimes see in fairy dreams.
The wandering pilgrim drops a tear
To leave the spot he finds so dear,
And oft' returns with joy, to gaze
In admiration and amaze.

Oh, you that fain would feast your eyes,
Up, view the prospect fair that lies
'Neath "Royal Mount!" and well I ween
You'll not forget that charming scene.
Victoria Bridge, that giant span—
One of the noblest works of man—
Alone the traveller would repay
For toiling up the lofty way.

Hark! where the rolling thunder note
Swells from Niagara's lusty throat;
Behold the mighty current sweep,
Volume on volume, o'er the steep!
All who would see it's charms aright,
Oh, see it in the soft moonlight;
And as you silent gaze, you'll seem
Spell bound, as if in magic dream.

The presence of the Infinite
Is here displayed in boundless might,
And the gigantic token stands
Stupendous—from Eternal hands.
Hewn out by that Almighty Power,
Which guards the tiniest struggling flower,
And keeps in fixed, allotted bound,
Vast suns with systems circling round.

One twenty millions cubic feet
Of water this enormous sheet
Each minute thunders down the steep
In frantic and impetuous leap.
Twice eighty raging feet this falls,
Adown the lofty jagged walls,
Giving such sounds eternal birth
As ever shook the heart of earth.

There is a lone and lovely spot,—
Traveller, let it not be forgot;
'Twill glad the heart, and please the eye,
The Falls of famed Montmorenci!
With more than fifty fathoms bound,
The waters lash the spray around;
In snowy wreaths it fills the air
With beauteous forms—surpassing fair.

Grand is the awe inspiring way
Adown the rock-bound Saguenay;
Huge cliffs on either side arise
One thousand feet into the skies.
One thousand feet you must unwind
Before the bottom you can find;
The waters carved the solid rock
With constant touch and ceaseless knock.

Majestic on thy lakes and streams
Stand noble towns. Lo! each one teems
With bustling trade and busy life,
Sure emblem of the peaceful strife.
A short time since where forest stood,
And stubborn brake and tangled wood,
Now happy homesteads stud the plains
Where gay, soul-stirring laughter reigns.

Unfailing may the heavenly light
Dispel each fear and cloud—the might
Of Heaven encircle thee and thine—
The blessed Gospel's radiance shine
In every heart and home—be peace
Thy heritage—good will increase,
And love and kindness ever find
A place in every heart enshrined.

Thy brow may lovelier wreathe adorn
Of kind and noble actions born
Thy path be ever straight and clear,
And strong the hands thy helm that steer.
Guiding thee always, fair and true,
With duty's compass full in view,
And Heaven a shield and buckler stand
For us and our Canadian Land!

THE BEST REMEDY

FOR

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency, and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is of acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it. The test of half a century has proven its certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

The Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad Company

Now offer for Sale over 1,250,000 Acres of the Choicest FARMING and TIMBERED LANDS in the Northern Peninsula of Michigan.

Destined to be the best wheat-producing region in the world. These lands are situated in the counties of Chippewa, Mackinac, Schoolcraft, and Marquette, and embrace many thousands of acres of the best agricultural lands in the State of Michigan.

Among these in the counties of Chippewa and Mackinac are tracts of what are known as the "burnt or cleared" lands. These lands offer many advantages over the prairie lands of the West, as the timber lands adjoining insure a supply of fuel at little cost. The soil being a rich clay loam of great depth. The timber remaining upon the land being generally sufficient for the settlers' use in building and fencing.

These partially cleared lands are now offered at the low price of from $4 to $4.50 per acre, one-fourth cash, and the remainder at purchaser's option, at any time within nine years, with interest payable annually at seven per cent.

Roads are being opened through these lands, and no better opportunity has ever been offered to men of small means to secure a good farm, and intending purchasers will be wise by availing themselves of this chance before prices advance, as the lands are being rapidly taken and settled upon.

The lands more immediately on the line of the Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad, from Straits of Mackinac to Marquette, are more heavily timbered, and are almost universally good agricultural lands, leaving splendid farms when the timber is removed.

The iron and lumber interests of the upper peninsula are of such magnitude as to call for all the charcoal and lumber that the timber and wood upon the lands will produce—this will enable the settler to make good wages while clearing the land.

Lumber Mills and Charcoal Kilns will be built at various points along the line, and Furnaces are now being erected along the line of the road at Point St. Ignace.

The great demand and good prices for labor, both in winter and summer, make these lands particularly desirable as homes for the poor man. The lands adjacent the Railroad are offered at prices from $5 upwards, according to location, value of timber, etc. The lands are at your very door, and are being rapidly settled by Canadians.

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 14, 1881.

THE SCHOOL BOARD.

Final Settlement of the School Difficulties.

A special meeting of the School Board, to consider the report from the Committee on Appointments, to which the resignation of Mr. Jeffers, the late Principal, was referred, was held on Tuesday evening.

There was present the Chairman, Jas. Stevenson, Esq., and Messrs. McClelland, Denne, Robinson, Stratton, Rutherford, Dumble, Sawers, Wrighton, Best and Burnham.

After the reading of the minutes, the Chairman stated the object of the meeting, as above.

Mr. Dumble, Chairman of the Committee on Appointments, read the report of the Committee, but said that he did not wholly agree with it, and would move an amendment when the 6th clause came up for consideration:

The Committee on appointments beg leave to report.

1. That the resignation of Mr. Jeffers be accepted.
2. That Mr. Dixon be appointed Principal of the Collegiate Institute, at a salary of eleven hundred dollars per annum.
3. That Mr. John Braden be appointed Head Master of the public schools at a salary of seven hundred dollars per annum.
4. That eight hundred dollars per annum be appropriated as the salary of a teacher who may instruct in modern languages, and in such other branches as the Principal may assign him.
5. That inasmuch as it is proposed to carry on the Collegiate Institute with five teachers, it is expedient to commence with the new arrangement of classes at once, a course that will make it unnecessary to retain one of the teachers now employed.

Your Committee therefore recommend that Miss Panton be paid her salary to the first of September next, and that she be given leave to retire from active duties as soon as the Principal has completed the making of all the classes.

Your committee after conferring with Mr. Dixon as to the re-arrangement of classes, said that he is prepared to have all the classes taught by five teachers. Miss Panton stands so high in the estimation of the board as a teacher, and for her many virtues, and withal, so highly esteemed by pupils and by the people of the town, that it is with the greatest reluctance your committee reconcile themselves to the necessity of parting with her, and it is only recommended because it is hoped that with the aid of a teacher of modern languages the whole curriculum of the Institute can be carried out with five teachers instead of six, as at present.

With a view to bringing the public schools to the highest standard of efficiency, it is recommended that the Inspector of public schools be required to give to the inspection of the schools as much time as the best interests of the schools require, and to enable him to do so, that his salary be increased proportionate to the increased labors imposed on him.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
D. W. DUMBLE.

Mr. McClelland moved, seconded by Mr. Toole,—That the report be received and adopted.

Mr. Dumble moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Rutherford,—That it is inexpedient to dispense with a lady teacher in the Collegiate Institute, and inasmuch as Miss Panton is an excellent teacher and fully competent to teach any classes which may be assigned to Mr. McKee, it is resolved that Miss Panton be retained on the staff of teachers, and that Mr. McKee be paid up to September 1st, and that his services be dispensed with as soon as the Principal can complete his re-arrangement of the classes.

Mr. Dumble said that he had reason to believe that Miss Panton was a superior teacher to Mr. McKee, and thought it would be a mistake if they lost her services. He believed they should retain at least one lady teacher in the Institute, as the absence of female teachers from an institution of this kind was apt to encourage private schools, which, of course, were detrimental to the schools of the town.

Mr. McClelland considered that they should be guided by the advice of Mr. Dixon, who would be held responsible for the schools in future, as they had in the past by Mr. Jeffers.

Mr. Rutherford was in favor of retaining Miss Panton. He thought she had done the schools good service, and as she was an old teacher, and the only lady teacher in the Institute, it was not desirable to dismiss her.

Mr. Sawers also argued the retention of Miss Panton, as he believed her better qualified in every respect than Mr. McKee.

Mr. Stratton said that he regretted to see that the report recommended the dispensing with Miss Panton's services, but as the whole question had been committed to the Committee on Appointments, comprising the oldest and most experienced members of the Board, and as he presumed they had given the matter their careful and anxious consideration, and as the report as a whole presented the conclusions at which they had arrived as being in the best interests of the schools, he felt that the report should be adopted and the responsibility placed on the Committee. He would like to know if the new Principal concurred in the recommendation of the Committee, as to Miss Panton.

Mr. McClelland said the Committee had had Mr. Dixon before them and discussed the future working of the school with him. Mr. Dixon had submitted his plan of organization to the Committee, and stated positively that the only way in which he could carry out the object of the Board, of conducting the Institute with only five teachers, was by relieving Miss Panton of her connection with the school, to enable the Board to procure a modern language teacher.

Mr. Stratton said then the responsibility for the success or otherwise of the new arrangements would rest with the Committee on Appointments, and the Principal upon whose advice they had acted. He would be guided by the report, and trusted that the results would prove that the Committee had acted wisely.

The report was then taken up clause by clause.

On the clause regarding Miss Panton, Mr. Rutherford objected, and intimated that the course pursued towards Miss Panton was cowardly. He moved that the matter be laid over.

On the amendment the vote stood, Yeas.—Messrs. Dumble, Rutherford, Sawers and Robinson. Nays.—Messrs. Best, Stratton, Toole, Wrighton, Burnham, McClelland and Denne.

Mr. Toole gave notice of a motion, on the ground that as there was to be more work imposed on fewer teachers their pay should be increased. He believed the salaries of Messrs. McKee and Earl should be raised.

The Chairman said the question might be put now, and on the vote being taken, the motion was lost, only Messrs. McClelland, Best, Denne and Toole voting for it.

Mr. Stratton called attention to the wretched character of the stationery supplied for the accommodation of the Board.

Mr. Dumble spoke in a similar tone, and the Chairman also expressed himself feelingly on the subject, and hoped the same kind of pens were not inflicted on the pupils.

Moved by Mr. Dumble, seconded by Mr. McClelland,—That inasmuch as Christianity is recognized by and is a fundamental principle and ground work of all the laws and institutions of our country, and whereas the teachings and doctrines of Christianity form a rule of human conduct, which conduces to the highest enjoyment of civilized life, and the greatest happiness of the people. Be it therefore resolved that this Board will expect the respectful recognition of the fundamental principles and teachings of Christianity in all instructions imparted in the schools of the town, and, while nothing like sectarian teachings will be tolerated, any influences from any quarter, which would lead to lessen respect for the good teachings of the Bible, will meet with prompt disapprobation, and action from this Board.

Moved by Mr. Dumble, seconded by Mr. McClelland,—That the Board of the United High and Public Schools of the Town of Peterborough, deeply regret that Mr. Jeffers has declined to accept the salary which this Board has appropriated for the Principal's salary, and has in consequence resigned the Principalship of the Collegiate Institute.

This Board desires to put on its minutes an expression of their highest estimation of the ability of Mr. Jeffers. Under his administration the standard of our schools has steadily advanced, until they have attained a first place amongst the Educational Institutions of the Country. Mr. Jeffers possesses high organizing and administrative ability, and is ever courteous and genial with his staff and with his pupils, so that he is highly esteemed and beloved by all.

The refusal of Mr. Jeffers to accept a salary which was increased with a view to retaining him, was the sole reason for his leaving the service of the Board.

The Board while deeply regretting to loose Mr. Jeffers, desire to express their good will towards him and hope that his life a portion of which has been so happily and profitably spent with us, may continue ever bright and happy to the end.—Carried.

The Board then adjourned.

Peterborough Markets.

[Supplied by W. H. Wrighton, Grain and Produce Dealer, and General Grocer, George Street.]

April 13th, 1881.

Very little doing in grain—receipts small. Wheat has been selling at $1.13 to $1.14; outside markets show a declining tendency. Peas have advanced, selling at 70c. to 71c., but these prices are above their value to ship and are not likely to be maintained. Oats are steady at 34c. Nothing doing in barley or rye—none offering. The market on Saturday was a large one; nearly all commodities sold firmly. Fresh butter was in demand at 22c. to 23c. Eggs were very plentiful and sold quickly at 11c., and in some cases 12c. were obtained. Fresh meats were scarce and in good request. Veal sold at 5c. to 6c.; mutton, 7c. to 8c.; pork by the quarter 8c. to 10c.; chickens, 45c. to 50c. per pair. Apples not so plentiful and in fair demand—65c. to 75c. for bags, and about $2.00 for choice in barrels. Maple syrup selling in a retail way at 25c. to 30c. per quart. Potatoes plentiful and in good demand for shipping, at 45c. to 48c. per bag for Early Rose; mixed lots slow sale at a less price.

Ten tramps enjoyed civic hospitality in the month of March.

Are now fully prepared with their Spring supply of newly imported

Field, Garden and Flower Seeds

Purchasers of Seeds must now be convinced of the disappointment experienced in buying seeds from boxes or packets already put up and placed in stores on commission, and in many instances transferred from place to place for years, before being sold; the disappointment experienced, not only from their non-vegetative power, but from the small quantity contained in each paper. To prevent these disappointments, Messrs. Ormond & Walsh sell the whole of their Seeds by weight, at a fair and moderate price, with a guarantee of their Freshness & Vegetative Power.

Special care has been bestowed in the selection of Flower Seeds. Stocks, Asters, Balsams, Phlox Drummondi, Larkspurs and Portulacca, have been received in the original packages, as imported. Other kinds in great variety.

MR. KINGSTON'S LETTERS TO HIS BOYS.

Mr. W. H. G. Kingston, who wrote so many beautiful tales for boys, a few days before his death wrote this touching letter :—

STORMONT LODGE, WILLESDEN,
Aug. 2nd, 1880.

MY DEAR BOYS,—I have been engaged, as you know, for a very large portion of my life in writing books for you. This occupation has been a source of the greatest pleasure and satisfaction to me, and, I am willing to believe, to you also. Our connection with each other in this world must, however, shortly cease. I have for some time been suffering from serious illness, and have been informed by the highest medical authorities that my days are numbered. Of the truth of this I am convinced by the rapid progress the disease is making. It is my desire, therefore, to wish you all a sincere and happy farewell! I want you to know that I am leaving this life in unspeakable happiness, because I rest my soul on my Saviour, trusting only and entirely to the merits of the great Atonement, by which my sins (and yours) have been put away forever. Dear boys, I ask you to give your hearts to Christ, and earnestly pray that all of you may meet me in heaven.

AN EXPLANATION.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER :

DEAR SIR,—Will you kindly give the following a place in your columns :—

To the Electors of No. One Ward :

GENTLEMEN,—On the occasion of my first election as School Trustee to represent your ward, I pledged myself not to vote for an increase of salaries in the schools. On the occasion of my second election no pledges were given or required, but I held myself bound in honor by the pledge previously given to you upon the subject. At the last meeting of the Board, the first at which I was present, the questions of salaries came up in the shape of a report of a committee of the whole Board, (myself not having been a member of the Board at the time the Committee met,) recommending an increase of salaries to the extent of $585. As it was quite evident that the majority of the Board were resolved upon carrying out these increases, when the motion of Mr. Strattons' came up, cutting down the proposed increase by $320, and at the same time putting the Board in such a position that no further increase of salaries could be made except by a two-thirds vote of the whole Board, till the services of a teacher each in the Central and Ward Schools were dispensed with, I safely felt that I was voting, unsolicited by any one, on the side of economy in assisting to carry that motion through, without which I am assured the whole of the proposed increase of $585 would have been carried out. I understand that some of my constituents, probably under a misapprehension of the circumstances, have been disposed to blame me for the course I took on this occasion ; but, if with these facts in view, I am given reason to believe that any considerable portion of those who voted for me disapprove of my course, I shall be ready to return to their hands the trust committed to me. I can only say that my vote was cast in accordance with my intention to support the best method that presented itself of blocking the wholesale increase of salaries proposed by the whole Board in committee.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,

Your Obedient Servant,
T. W. ROBINSON.

April 7th, 1881.

AN EXPLANATION.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER :

SIR,—My attention has been drawn to the report in the Review, of a few remarks I made at the late sitting of the Presbytery, relative to the Rev. Mr. Beattie's "overture" on Evangelistic work. I think the report might convey a wrong impression of what I said, which was to the following effect :—

I remarked that I re-echoed much of what had been said by previous speakers relative to special religious effort, and I expressed my gladness that a move had been made in that direction, as contemplated by the "overture;" that if I had any objection to it, it was owing to its too rigidly prohibitory character. I thought that the "Sessions" of the church should be treated with somewhat more confidence, than by the overture, was extended to them. That they should not be deprived of all discretionary power in the matter, for assuredly circumstances might arise, where, for the interests and integrity of the church, it would be desirable to go beyond the limits sought to be rigidly fixed by the provisions of the "overture."

I also expressed the opinion that in the remarks that had been made, but scant justice had been done to the many eminent servants of God, whose lives had been devoted to evangelistic labors, and whose work had been marvellously owned and blessed of God, to the salvation of myriads of our fellow men. The very overture adopted by the Presbytery was only one of the happy consequences that had followed their success.

I expressed the strong hope that in the interests of the Presbyterian church, and of the salvation of men, the General Assembly, whilst adopting and recommending the general principles enunciated, would never embody them in rules so rigid, nor confine their action within the limits contemplated by the overture.

Had the time of the Presbytery permitted it, the above remarks might well have been amplified, as well as illustrated and supported by scripture and experience.

You will oblige me by inserting the above,

Yours truly,
F. W. HAULTAIN.

CHURCH CHOIRS.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

SIR,—In the Daily Evening Review of 11th inst, a correspondent wants to know, "What the leader in a certain church choir—in Peterborough, has against the last verse of that beautiful and familiar hymn, 'Nearer my God to Thee,' that he should clap on the spurs, as he did last night, and gallop it to death through the first three lines, leaving it absolutely exhausted and gasping by the time the last line was reached?" Assuming that the correspondent asks the question with an honest desire for information, if you will allow me space enough in your valuable paper, I will endeavour to place before him or her, fundamental principles which guide me in musical expressions, that he or she, seemingly are entirely ignorant of, or such an exaggerated and untruthful criticism would never have appeared. The regulation of the force of voice with which whole passages are delivered, forms a most important element of musical expression. It is one of the most effective, and most neglected of all the contrivances of music. In general, singers employ either an uniform weak drawl or an equally uniform shout. They have never cultivated a medium force of voice, and they can never give that light and shade of sound, which, like the varied distances and light in a painting, throw such a charm over the musical picture. We know that when we are excited our pulse moves more quickly, and that when we are calm and meditative our pulse moves more gently and slowly. This is the general principle that ought to govern our speed of movement in singing. It should be regulated by the character of the emotion we are expressing. I may also notice that the same state of our feelings, which naturally suggests that we should speak quickly, generally leads us at the same time to speak aloud, and the same emotion which leads us to speak slowly, commonly, also, suggests that we should speak softly. Hence the connection between speed and force. Passages should be sung softly and somewhat slowly when any peculiarly solemn, awe-inspiring or depressing thought is expressed. Joyful desire, ardent gratitude, high resolve or any stirring emotion, such passages should be sung with full power of voice, and generally with quickened movement. These principles which I have enumerated, no one, I think, of musical culture, will gainsay, and are, I trust, a sufficient answer to Review correspondent, who will now perceive why the last verse of the hymn spoken of should be sung a little quicker than the former verses. The congregation which I lead could not be astonished at the quickened movement, being accustomed to hearing it so sung for many years. There might have been more strangers in church, and strangers to emotional feelings and cultivated taste in singing, present that night besides the correspondent, who, being taken unawares, may have fallen behind. But if they be teachable, they will soon learn to enjoy singing with the heart, and with the understanding also. If Review correspondent be truly "an anxious enquirer" after knowledge, he will not be above taking advice. I would therefore advise him the next time he wants to know, to state his reasons for so asking, if possible, in the language of a gentleman, be truthful in his statements, avoid exaggeration, even although it should appear funny—and refrain from using the slang terms peculiar to the race-course and saw-dust tramps, when speaking or describing any part of God's worship. By inserting this, Mr. Editor, you will much oblige,

Yours truly,
LEADER OF PSALMODY IN A CERTAIN CHURCH.

N.B.—No doubt the other leaders are quite qualified to answer the correspondent for themselves.

Lakefield, April 9th, 1881.

DIED.—At Lakefield, March 30th, Francis Edward, youngest son of James Wood, Esq., aged 5 months and 12 days.

Sleep little Frankie! sleep !
Not in thy cradle bed,
Not on thy mother's breast,
Henceforth shall be thy rest,
But with the quiet dead.

Flee, little tender nurseling !
Flee to thy grassy nest—
There the first flowers shall blow.
The first pure flake of snow
Shall fall upon thy breast.

Peace! peace ! the little bosom
Labors with short ning breath ;
Peace ! peace ! that trembious sigh
Speaks his departure nigh—
Those are the damps of death.

Thine upturned eyes glazed o'er
Like harebells wet with dew
Already veil'd and hid
By the convulsed lid,
Their pupils darkly blue.

The little mouth half open.
The soft lip quivering.
As if, like summer air,
Buffling the rose leaves, there
Thy soul were fluttering.

I look around, and see
The evil ways of men,
And oh, beloved child !
I'm more than reconciled
To thy departure then.

God took thee in His mercy,
A lamb untasked—untried—
He fought the fight for thee,
He won the victory—
And thou art sanctified.

And when the hour arrives
From flesh that sets me free,
Thy spirit may await
The first at Heaven's gate,
To meet and welcome me.

A man named John Smith, committed suicide in a hotel on Saturday night, by leaving the gas turned on in his bedroom.

WARNER'S BLOOD PURIFIER.

The season is at hand when most people require to take such medicine as will cleanse the liver and stomach of the impurities which are not generally discharged by nature alone, but which must be removed, in order that those organs may perform their functions thoroughly. The most successful agents in such work are often the simplest, and in Warner's Blood Purifier are combined the three qualities of Simplicity, Safety and Success. A course of this valuable medicine just at this time of the year, has the desirable and certain effect of gradually but thoroughly purving and afterward regulating the stomach, liver and bowels and of cleansing the blood, and in this lies the grand secret of the enjoyment of health.

Warner's Blood Purifier is sold by THOS. RUSTON, Druggist. Price 50 cents per bottle. 15-4t

A Great Cause of Human Misery

Is the Loss of

MANHOOD

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price in a sealed envelope, only 6c. or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife : pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

FARM, GARDEN, AND HOUSEHOLD.

Testing Seeds.

We have noticed on former occasions the very useful experiments of Prof. Beal of the Michigan Agricultural College, in testing various garden and farm seeds, and thus determining beforehand their germinating quality. The disappointment and positive loss in planting bad seeds and losing a crop for a whole season, grievously exceeds the labor of testing. A counted number may be placed in pots properly filled with fine mellow earth; or they may be put between several folds of spongy brown paper. In either cases put them in a warm place and keep damp by daily sprinkling. Good seeds will not be many days in showing their true quality. A writer in the Practical Farmer says he tests his seeds with little trouble in large pots in a small greenhouse, and has thus tested in the past two month upwards of 300 samples of vegetable seeds, and he wonders why farmers omit so easy an experiment on their farm seeds.

As to Clover.

A great deal of trouble is borrowed with regard to how clover gets its nitrogen. We know it gets a good deal somewhere; some think from the atmosphere; but we have no reason to entertain that idea, because there is plenty of proof to the contrary. Whence then does it get its nitrogen? From the soil, where else? Then it must exhaust the soil. By no means. The soil is inexhaustible in the way in which clover gets its nitrogen. It takes it from sources where it lies in a nascent and inert state. The fact is, the soil is a vast manufactory of nitrates, when it is supplied with organic matter as a raw material, and nitrogen in some form is always accumulating in it. Then clover is able to get hold of this nitrogen better than any other crop, perhaps assisted by the lime of the plaster which is so helpful for clover. We are gradually getting more light on many heretofore dark matters, and this is one of them.

Care of Cattle.

If cattle are left to hunt their own drink from pools that are ice-cold and scant at best, or are compelled when the weather is severely cold to travel long distances for water, they will at times go without their necessary drink rather than be placed at so much discomfort to obtain it. Running daily in the stock fields and eating freely of dry stuff, is very hazardous to life, unless they have sufficient drink to soften the entire mass. No digestion can take place until the food is thoroughly moistened and they should receive daily attention and water plentifully provided for their use, and if possible such as is not ice-cold.

Sufficient Farm Help.

If we start out in the spring to till a farm of a certain number acres without sufficient help to put a part of the necessary labor under by help-time or the work only partially accomplished. Then is when the farmer has too much to do and gets behind with his work; neglect disturbs method and all things are soon out of balance. Many farmers say they cannot afford to hire much help. It is as necessary to have sufficient help to carry on a farm successfully as it is to have any help. If help cannot be had then let some farmer have a part of the farm to work, for the extra amount of land which cannot be properly tilled is so much land lying idle. Thus writes a correspondent of the Husbandman. He goes on to state his own method: "I will give the method which I have followed for years, and I cannot say that I have had too much to do, and at no time have been behind with my work. The first thing that I do is to provide the best teams for all kinds of work and sufficient team power to use them. I employ the best help I can get, as I have learned skilled labor is the cheapest. Hiring cheap labor to save a few dollars does not pay; loss in damage to teams and tools more than offsetting any saving so made. It takes but a few hours for an inexperienced or a careless hand to do much damage. It is my method to keep as much help as a farm requires. I am well aware that many farmers will say, as has been said before, that they cannot afford to hire so much; but all I have to say to such is, start next spring with more help and till your land as it should be tilled, and put the farm in proper shape, and when the year comes round figure up the difference, and see if money has been lost."

Breeding Sows.

At this season of the year require special attention. It has been found that the great majority farrow 112 days from the time of service; some few will go a few days longer and some will farrow a few days sooner, but these are exceptional cases.

A week before a sow is expected to pig put her in a comfortable pen and supply her with a moderate amount of finely cut straw; if she is given long straw, which does not become broken up before she farrows, the probabilities are she will lose more or less of her pigs by laying on them or from their becoming entangled in the straw while very young. We have found it profitable to arrange a pen specially for breeding sows. Arrange so that the bedding would be in a corner of the pen; we then take a two inch plank, 12 inches wide and from 6 to 8 feet long, and nailed it on the wall, about 8 inches from the floor, thus making a shelf projecting from the wall 12 inches; one end of this shelf will fit tightly against the wall, which runs at right angles with the one on which the plank is nailed; this plank must be securely fastened to the wall, and made firm by nailing blocks under each end. All these preparations should be made before the sow is put in the pen. The object of the shelf is to form protection for the pigs, which will prevent the sow from stepping or laying on them, which so frequently occurs when heavy sows farrow in inclosures For ten days before farrowing and as long after, a sow should have sloppy food, which should be nutritious but not heating. At this time of the year feed boiled roots, with a little bran or shorts. Ten days after farrowing danger from inflammation is past, and the quality of the feed may be improved; but should never be of a very heating nature. Raw grains or meal should not be fed to a sow while carrying or suckling offspring. Boiled grain and roots should be given in such quantities as to produce rapid growth in her offspring, and at the same time, if possible, keep the dam in good condition. Charcoal and wood ashes should be given all pigs which are kept in an enclosure at least once a week.

The Feeding Value of Bran.

The late Alexander Hyde, a well-known agricultural writer, had a high opinion of the feeding quality of bran. Experience of stock-feeders has confirmed the opinion long held by men of Science that in some essential elements of food it is much richer even than the pure kernel that it encloses. Mr. Hyde says:—

The conclusion is irresistible that bran has not been sufficiently appreciated as food for stock in past times, and that Dr. Graham was right when he recommended unbolted flour as the best for bread-making. Graham flour is specially adapted for children, as it furnishes the material for making bones and developing teeth. Some objection is made to the use of bran by farmers, as it has a laxative tendency. This is due to mechanical, not chemical, influences, the coarse particles, when fed alone, often irritating the intestines, especially at the first feedings, if given in large quantities. This may be obviated by feeding bran gradually at first, and in connection with hay. A slightly laxative condition of the bowels is far healthier than constipation; and if children are troubled with the latter, Graham bread is just what they need.

One great recommendation of bran is that it makes the manure pile so rich. A large proportion of the inorganic matter (ash) in bran is composed of the various phosphates, just what most old soils need, those salts having been carried off in the milk and sold. We have seen wonderful changes produced on old farms by liberal feeding of cows with wheat bran. The pastures in a few years have renewed their age. Rye-bran is not quite so rich in ash as wheat, but it makes an excellent food for producing milk, as it contains over ten per cent. protein compounds, the thing for cheese-making, and over two per cent. of fats. Indeed dairy farmers generally give the preference to rye bran, and one reason is that it is finer, and does not induce such a laxative condition.

Turkey Rearing.

"A Constant Reader" asks a dozen questions regarding turkey rearing; he wishes to go into the busines on a large scale; would like to raise a thousand annually, and not knowing much about the business wishes to glean some knowledge on the subject. Before going into details we quote from the London Field the following:—"The idea of rearing poultry in very large number has a great attraction for persons who have had but little practical experience in poultry breeding, and in consequence, every few years some project is started for the establishment of a poultry farm. A few years since a Mr. Castelo started a poultry establishment near Chesnick, and, although he had the advantage of great experience and one of the best artificial incubators ever designed, the whole concern came to an untimely end. The Americans, who are our equals in poultry breeding, have tried the plan repeatedly and each time it has failed, and not long since it was tried in connection with the Astor Hotel, and the usual termination ensued. One reason that is known to us is, that where large numbers of fowls are kept together the place becomes tainted with decaying manure and disease and failure is sure to follow."

Our correspondent asks, "how many turkeys do I require to lay eggs to hatch out a thousand young turkeys?" This will depend a great deal on the time you occupy for incubation, or how late in the season you would set the eggs for that purpose. A good hen turkey, if well fed and attended, will average about fifty eggs. You had better sit twice the number of eggs that you wish to raise. If you are successful in rearing 50 per cent. of the eggs set you will do well. 3. One cock with ten hens is the proper proportion. 4. Large coops are the best to sit in; the nest should be on the ground floor with some chaff or cut straw beneath the eggs. 5. Houses may be made of double boarded frame, well matched, and may be filled between the boards or not; but must be well ventilated from the top so that no direct draft may come on the fowls at any time; one square yard of house room to each bird is the required size. 6. It would injure their health to run together in large numbers. 7. About April is the time they may be expected to lay. 8. See June number, 1880, of Farmer's Advocate for cut of house and chicken coup. 9. When first hatched the food should be eggs beaten up with milk, of equal quantities, and baked into custard; this alternated with crumbed bread and milk, to which oatmeal is added in a gradually increasing proportion; quite as important as any part of the diet of young turkeys is the supply of green food, such as nettles, lettuce, onions and dandelion, of which they seem to be very fond. The most critical time of rearing the young is just when they are shooting the red. At this time the quantity and quality of their food must be increased and rendered more nutritious by adding corn meal cooked, or bruised hemp seed, and their yard kept scrupulously clean. 10. The best time to market turkeys is at Christmas. 11. The average price per pound, one year with another, is about ten cents in Toronto, which is the best market we have in Ontario—next to Peterborough.

Game Fowls.

Some persons have a very mistaken idea of game fowls, and consider them as bred only for sporting purposes, and all who breed them as cock fighters. While this may be true in some cases, it is far from being general, and there are scores of breeders who breed the different varieties of Games for practical purposes, as well as for pleasure. In point of symmetry, graceful carriage and proud bearing, they have no equals amongst the feathered tribe, and all who admire these qualities cannot but be pleased with the noble Games.

There is no breed which possesses more stamina than do the Games, and it is difficult to find weakly, puny chicks amongst them, if they have been accorded proper attention and given plenty of suitable food. As layers, they are excellent, and the rich flavor of their eggs commend them to all who have an epicurean taste for good things of this life. While we have seen some flocks which were good winter layers, under the most favorable circumstances, the good qualities of the blood of the game fowl in this respect is most observable in judicious crosses on other fowls, as for instance, on the larger bodied Light Brahmas. We have in mind now several flocks of cross-breed birds of this kind, which seemed to be the long sought for kind of winter layers, for they shelled out the eggs just when eggs were the scarcest and highest priced, and took their vacation when eggs were plentiful.

These birds did not do this on a few scattered grains daily, and when using trees or open sheds as their roosting quarters, for they were too sensible for that, if some breeders and farmers are not; but they repaid kind treatment, plenty of suitable food and comfortable sheltering by a generous and timely supply of "hen fruit." Those who expect that all depends on the hens and nothing on the breeders, will be apt to be as disappointed with these as with any other breed they may attempt the rather expensive experiment with.

The general favorites seem to be the Black Breasted Reds, though nearly every variety on the long list of games has its particular admirers and advocates.—[Poultry Monitor.

Useful Receipts.

To Remove Ink Stains from Printed Books.—Procure a pennyworth of oxalic acid, when dissolved in a small quantity of warm water; then slightly wet the stain with it, when it will disappear, leaving the leaf uninjured.

Wine Jelly.—Soak a box of gelatine in cold water. Add a quarter of a pound of sugar, and pour over it three pints of boiling watter, stirring well. When the mixture cools a little, add a pint of wine and the juice of a large lemon. Pour into moulds.

Gingerbread.—One cup of syrup, two tablespoonfuls melted butter, one teaspoonful of ginger; mix thoroughly together; one teaspoonful saleratus in one cup of boiling water; let it cool a few moments, then put all together and stir in lightly three cups of flour.

Snow Pudding.—Take five eggs; beat whites to a stiff froth; place one quart of milk on the range; when at a boiling point add sugar to taste, one vanilla bean or one stick of cinnamon; sweeten the whites with one tablespoonful of powdered sugar, and drop them into the hot milk; leave in long enough to scald them while you wish them into small flakes; take a skimmer and take out the flakes and let them cool on a dish; add yolks to milk with a teaspoonful of corn starch dissolved in water; when cool add flakes and serve.

Dessert Pud[illegible].—Here is a delicious pudding for d[illegible]: One pint of nice bread crumbs (not crumbs of stale bread unfit for the table) one quart of milk, one cup of sugar, and the well beaten yolks of four eggs, the grated rind of on lemon, and a piece of butter the size of an egg. Bake until done. Whip the whites of four eggs and beat in a cup of pulverized sugar in which you have put the juice of the lemon. Spread over the pudding a layer of jelly or raspberry jam, or any sweetmeat you prefer, then pour over it the whites of the eggs. Set in the oven to brown slightly. Serve with cold cream. This is an excellent dessert for an elaborate dinner, as it may be made early in the morning, and so be out of the way.

Differences of opinion regarding the popular internal and external remedy, Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil—do not, so far as known, exist. The testimony is positive and concurrent that the article relieves physical pain, cures lameness, checks a cough, is an excellent remedy for pains and rheumatic complaints, and it has no nauseating or other unpleasant effect when taken internally.

GIVEN UP BY DOCTORS.—"Is it possible that Mr. Codfrey is up and at work, and cured by so simple a remedy?"

"I assure it is true that he is entirely cured, and with nothing but Hop Bitters; and only ten days ago his doctors gave him up and said he must die!"

"Well-a-day! That is remarkable! I will go this day and get some for my poor George—I know hops are good."—Salem Post. 15-3t.

NOT THE SLIGHTEST AFFINITY exists between the numberless cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct, itself, and nothing else. It embodies the best results of pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive, decisive results, effectually relieving coughs when the lungs are not tuberculous or hopelessly affected) colds, larnygitis and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure Consumption it is the most reliable means of defence against that dreaded scourge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing emollient action of the cod liver oil upon the inflamed lung melrane. The phosphorus, lime and soda, in combination with it are all natural components in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of those elements. These the hypophosphites supply, increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tottering human structure with a degree of promptitude as astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both time and experience have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. Prepared by NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto and sold by all druggists.

One of the Most Important Discoveries of this Age.

We make the startling announcement that KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE will cure Bone Spavin and completely remove the enlargement, so that the best horseman cannot tell that the horse ever had a spavin. We make this statement, and give below testimonials from persons who have used it, to prove our statements. It is excellent for removing unnatural enlargements of any kind. It does not blister nor cause any sore. It has no equal, to our knowledge, for spavin, ring-bone, curb, callous, sprain, swellings, galls, lameness from whatever cause, and all enlargements of the joints, or any part of the body or limbs, and is also good for cuts, scratches, wounds, etc.

For man, it is a complete remedy, for Corns, Frost-Bites, or any bruise, Cut or Lameness.

Vivienne's Crime;

OR, FOR LOVE OF HIM.

Author of "Claribel's Marvel," "Mrs. Gardner's Assistant," &c., &c.

CHAPTER XVIII.—

"How do I look to-night, Jocelyn?"

Vivienne, in her sweeping dinner dress, stood before her husband, smiling up into his face, with the old tender light in her eyes which once haunted him.

"Perfect," he said; "you could not look more lovely, if you tried."

"Of course I tried, you foolish man. Don't women always try to look their best?"

"I don't know, I'm sure, but if they do, none of them succeed like you."

She laughed at his remark, and passed with her light step into conservatory to gather a rose for her hair. Jocelyn followed her.

This fancy of his wife for roses was one of the things he had grown used to. Always, in the thoughts of her afterwards, her beauty came back to him entangled with the beauty and perfume of those flowers which she loved.

Often, when he had only his memory left him, he thought of her as she stood that night in the mellow light of the coloured lamps which she had caused to hang here and there among the curtain and figures, her dress of rich purple making a shine about her, her tempting ripeness of her lips tender, the delicate flushes coming and going in her cheeks as she talked with him, and the roses, the regal, red-hearted roses, in her hands and at her bosom, and nestled in among the spikes of her shining hair.

"Now," she said, when she had gathered all she wanted, "are they not prettier than all the stiff jewels I could wear? Do they not become me better?"

She knew how he wondered, and sometimes grumbled, at her utter dislike of jewelery of all kinds about her dress.

Stooping, he kissed the lips upturned towards him, the little hands that dropped their roses to meet his.

"You could grow vainer than you are, if I told you how well they become you—how well everything becomes your beauty," said Jocelyn.

"And that, I do not need to be told, you think?"

"Think" he repeated, smiling down on her as she leaned against him.

"Am I not sure of it?"

Looking up at him, she read the love in his eyes.

"Ah, but you know I am vain of your admiration. You believe, too, Jocelyn, do you not, that I care for nothing in this world but your love?"

Yes, he believed her, and he was glad of her love, and proud of it too, this handsome Jocelyn, to him, giving pleasure was a pleasure in itself.

The time was yet before him when believing in her love quite as much as he did that night, realizing it even better, his heart should die within him for sorrow that ever it had been so.

Paul Knox came, as Ethel had promised; so did the Doctor, and Mr. Grant. But Ethel herself was not able to accompany them—not willing either, but no one guessed that. She had been delicate for so long, delicate and needing tender care, that no one wondered at these sudden little weaknesses that came upon her oftener and oftener as the weeks went by.

The dinner party was a success in its way. Vivienne was radiant. Jocelyn Thornton, always a charming host, surpassed himself. Perhaps the only face upon which care was seen to sit was Paul Knox's. His heart was heavy within him, angry and disturbed also. His brain was hot. His thoughts hopelessly entangled themselves, so that one moment he felt a kind of remorse at the purpose he was nursing, and the next he glorified in it.

After dinner Vivienne sang; and the gentlemen listened in pleased silence.

"Such a charming evening," said Herbert Grant, going away, "I have seldom spent."

Paul Knox went home with the Doctor, but before he went he had risked on one bold throw the success of this secret plan of his of which he was so jealous.

And he had won.

Vivienne Thornton, standing by her husband's side, saw him go with eyes that neither drooped nor flinched in their calm light. She heard his parting words with a smile on her lips and a faraway look in her eyes, wherein was no shadow of pain or fear.

Jocelyn went with the guests into the hall, and when he came back, this queenly figure, standing in the full shine of the lamplight, with her purple train sweeping over the white rug, and the red roses drooping in her hair, struck him there in the empty room with the splendour of a picture.

Hearing his step, she turned quickly, and with a cry of pain, shrill and bitter, she flung herself into his arms.

He held her tight, while his lips grew pale and dry with the shock.

"My darling," he cried, "what has happened? Are you ill? What is it? What can it be?"

But she had no power to answer him. With her head on his breast she sobbed and trembled, clinging to him with cold hands—hands like those of a corpse.

For once in his life this stalwart Jocelyn was frightened. He drew her gently to a chair, and knelt before her, holding her head against his breast, clasping her little hands tenderly, whispering to her fond words that came brokenly through lips that still quivered.

Slowly, with long sobs and gasps for breath, she grew calmer. The colour came back to her lips, and she ceased to tremble so violently.

"I am better now," she said, hiding her face among his curls, and slipping both arms round his neck as he knelt there at her feet, still pale and nervous about her. "I think it was fatigue; and just then I felt so ill, I was frightened."

She was frightened still, if the pale look in her face might be called fear—a look which he had never seen in it before, and which made his heart ache to see then. But he soothed and petted her, much as if she had been a spoiled child, and said no word of the wonder that grew strong in his heart at noticing the change in her.

Sitting there, some time afterwards, she asked him the question she had often asked before, and at which he had long ceased to be surprised—"Do you love me very much, Jocelyn?"

He could not see her face, for she had turned it from him, but something in her voice told him, eager and quick to read her every mood, that she was more in earnest than she had ever been.

"As much as I know how to love—far more than I could ever have loved any other woman, if I had never seen your face. You brought new life and a new love to my heart, Vivienne, and it is all your own now."

"Yes—now. But will it always be so? If we were never to meet again, or if I were to do something awfully wicked, could you forgive me, and go on loving me just the same?"

He laughed to hear her speak so gravely.

"What a dreamer you have grown! And such wild dreams as you have! As if my own beautiful little Vivienne ever could, or ever would, do anything awfully wicked!"

"But if, Jocelyn, I really did do——"

"But then you really never will."

With her head leaning on her hand, she sat looking into the red coals for a while; and Jocelyn, tired, and somewhat sleepy, yet not liking to disturb her, yawned under shelter of his broad palm, and stretched his arms to keep himself awake a little longer.

When she looked up again, her face was still grave.

"I think, Jocelyn," she said, "that you are like my own father, and that rather than find any whom you loved very much not worthy of your love, you would loose them for ever out of your life."

Without closely studying her words, seeing in them nothing but mere idle conjectures and fancies that, being sleepy, he had no taste for, he answered, "Yes."

Rising slowly, she shook out the heavy folds of her dress, and bent a little to warm her hands, for the fire had got low, and the great empty room began to feel chilly.

There were tears in her eyes as she stood there, and such dire anguish on her face that even those who had most cause to hate her might have pitied her then.

In a brief while afterwards she turned round, to find Jocelyn nodding in his chair, and then every shadow of pain was gone from her features.

* * * * * * * *

Paul Knox had not been far wrong when he said of this dainty Vivienne that she had nerves of tempered steel.

Walking home through the quiet lanes that night, Paul and Doctor West talked earnestly. Of course it was about Vivienne—about Vivienne, and that other with whom henceforth her name lived, fatally linked, in their minds—Gilbert Thornton.

It was a still night—no wind out, to toss the branches of the old trees that skirted the long, winding lane, and overmost at times, making a living arch of green above the road—not a cloud to fleck the pale blue of the sky, where the stars shone faint and far off. Only the night tide coming in sent thrills of sound, musical liquid murmurings and splashings, to break the country calm.

"Do you know, Paul," said Doctor West, "a feeling came over me this evening, at dinner, that we must be wrong—at fault somewhere—and that Mrs. Jocelyn cannot be what we have taken her to be."

"One came over me too, very strongly. Looking in her face, I had hard work to keep my brain clear. Watching her all through the evening, laughing, talking, singing—an exquisite foreign child she seemed to me, scarcely grave enough for womanhood, the fancy grew strong upon me that that past night was a dream, and our present hope a chimera."

He spoke low and moodily. His hat was off, and the moonlight fell on his dark face, set and stern and sad within.

"I began to think with you, Dick, that we were wrong somewhere. And I did what you never could have done—I put my fancies to the test."

Doctor West looked at him curiously. He did not understand in the least.

"How! What do you mean? Do speak plainly, Paul; I'm in no mood for guessing."

"There was but one way that I could think of. I told her of them."

"You did!"

The two men stood still to look at each other—Paul resolute, Doctor West pale and trembling, pressing his hand to his heart, to still its wild irregular throbbings. A man not equal to a shock like this he looked then—a man who had got to the limit almost of his powers of endurance, and who was beginning to feel the strain telling on him seriously.

"Understand me," said Paul. "I did not put it to her as a thing about which I was uncertain. I spoke boldly. In a few words I let her learn that I knew the cause of Gilbert Thornton's sudden death. She had been playing, and we two stood by the piano, away from you all. Perhaps I did not act quite fair with her, for I gave her reason to imagine that I could prove these suspicions of mine to be true. I had nerved myself, thinking of all you and Ethel had suffered through her sin, of all you must still suffer, and I had no great pity in my heart for her, the cause of it. She saw it too."

"What did she say to you?" asked the the Doctor.

"Not much. For a second she looked at me as haughtily as a queen could have looked. I read in her eyes the terror that possessed her. Except that she gave no sign, and that was gone in a moment. She said I was rather late in bringing forward my suspicions and stating my curious facts. Had I any particular reason for doing so at this time? That nettled me, and I said bluntly, 'Yes, I had a good reason for it—to clear an honourable gentleman from an ugly stain of murder, and with Heaven's help I had no doubt I should succeed.' She looked very pale and fierce then, but she said nothing, only bit her lip till it bled, and pressed one hand hard over the other, just for all the world as if she were crushing the life out of something. I saw then how dangerous this woman was how pitiless she could look—how cruel she was for all her beauty. Just for that minute or two, every line in her face seemed changed; then she recovered herself and sat down to play again. It was that piece from Martha you all admired so much, and she never once faltered or missed a note. I tell you, Dick, standing by her, knowing what I knew, that perfect playing drove me half-wild. I began to feel a chill, almost a fear, creeping over me."

Doctor West drew a long deep breath; a fear was over him too, and a kind of vague foreboding also. "She is no common woman, Paul. She will defy us openly, and what shall we do then?"

"The best we can," answered Paul.

"Never lose heart now; it is too late for that, Dick. We are in for it. She'll put us to the extent of our knowledge before we have done with her—of that I feel sure; to-night from the first, I could see in her eyes a determination to do battle."

They had got out of the last lane now, and were on the broad country road that ran before the Doctor's house. They had gone through byways, and across meadows to save time, but they had lost it again by walking slowly.

As they turned in at the gate, the bells of Thornton Church tolled twelve o'clock. Paul Knox, stopping to listen, shivered.

"I never hear those bells, Dick, on a still night like this, but I think of the night Joe Lomax was shot down, like a dog, on the top of the Monk's Head, carrying home his brandy kegs and contraband laces. It was just such a night as this, I remember—not a breath out."

"And I often think of it too," observed the Doctor. "But for the events of that night, how different both our lives might have been, Paul!"

"Who can tell? Perhaps I did the best think I could have done—perhaps I acted the fool then, as I have so often since," responded Paul Knox, leaning his back against the closed gate, and looking up at the crags towering over the house and garden in the still night, jagged, sombre, ghostly.

"I was not a yard from him when he went down, but my head was light with the wine I had drunk with Smollet, and I could not have helped him much. Poor fellow! There were five of them about him. Perhaps after all it was the best thing I could have done, to lie down on my face and keep quiet. It was cowardly of me, I know; but I never dreamed the man was hurt. I was too drunk, I think, to understand what was going on about me. But when a couple of hours afterwards, I woke up and saw his dead face, with a bullet hole in the forehead, looking up with wide eyes in the moonlight, I was soon sobered. I had but one thought in my head then, to get out of sight of it. As he lay there was a pool of blood about him, and some of it had trickled through the spare grass to where I had been lying. There were blood-stains on my boots and on my arm—horrible to look at in the shifting, misty moonlight on that bare Monk's Mead. Then I knew that I must get out of Thornton altogether, lest the crime should come to be fastened on me. Dear me how plainly it all comes back to me, hearing those bells! I can see again the lonely hill-top, and that white face stark in its blood. Often and often it has haunted me since, and reproached me in its dumb way; and none the less do I feel because I was the first of my name who was a coward. If I had only faced out the trouble then, Dick, it might have saved me many a sin, and you many a care. But it was not to be."

Paul gave a great sigh as he leaned there, his hat under his arm, his handsome face clouded.

Presently Ethel heard their voices, and came out into the porch, calling to them. In the house Doctor West saw how pale and ill she was looking, and he blamed her for setting up so late.

"I was better up," she said "I do not feel at all tired, and then you are home earlier than I expected you would be. How did Mrs. Jocelyn look, Paul?"

"Better than ever I seen her, and dressed perfectly."

"Oh, she is always that," said Ethel. She would have gone on with her questions, but he told her he was in no mood for gossiping. He was tired, if she was not, and he was going to bed.

Doctor West, too, seemed tired—excited a little also; but no more inclined to talk than was Paul himself.

"Then you must tell me all about it to-morrow," said Ethal, "and how everybody looked. It is the least you can do when I was not there to see for myself."

"Oh, I'll do that with pleasure," replied Paul: "but there's not much to tell. Herbert Grant was there, and he looked a shade less stiff and starched, I fancied. Once or twice he even tried to be jovial in his way," he added, innocently, with grave face and serious air, stopping at the door to give Ethel the bit of news. "That he enjoyed the evening, I have no doubt he will be in some time to-morrow to tell you himself."

Ethel, with her back to him, listened in silence. She was blushing hotly, and frowning slightly—but it was a fleeting frown, that had died away long before the pink stains had left her cheeks and ears, and even her slender white throat. She had lately found out that Paul Knox had his own reasons for laughing at the quiet Rector and telling her of his failings, as he had so often.

CHAPTER XIX.

The day after the dinner at the Manor-house was a sunny one, with a high wind blowing the dust and sand about in clouds.

Doctor West went out earlier than usual. Paul Knox stayed indoors, reading and writing letters, but thinking more, till after the late dinner. Then he took to smoking up and down the house, almost everywhere within it—it helped to clear his brain, he told Ethel; and being so much in female society as he had lately was very trying to it, trying to his nervous system altogether. He would not be able to go on much longer without a change.

At seven a groom rode down from the Manor-house.

"A note for Mr. Knox," he said. "Must be given into his own hand."

But Mr. Knox was not in then. He had gone out not many moments before the man came. Ethel could not say whither.

The man had been long in the service of the Thorntons and knew Ethel well. He did not like to carry the letter home again, on the chance of having to ride back with it later on.

"I think I will leave it with you, Miss Ethel; it will be just the same. You will please not forget to give it to the gentleman when he does come in. Mrs. Jocelyn was very particular. She was anxious that he should get it safe."

"No, I will not forget to give it to him," said Ethel. "He shall have it as soon as ever he comes back."

So it was from Mrs. Jocelyn. She could not but wonder at that. A thick letter rather than a note she noticed it was, as she carried it herself into the sitting-room, lying it for greater safety near her on the little table.

Doctor West had not been home to dinner, and when he did come in he was tired and jaded. Attending to him, Ethel forgot all about the letter lying there under the shadow of the fern leaves.

As soon as he had dined he went into his study to write letters, he told Ethel—to brood, would have been nearer the truth.

All that day a fear had haunted him of what Vivienne, driven to bay, might not attempt of what she might be able to carry out against them both—himself and Paul.

At ten o'clock Paul Knox came in, and then Ethel, seeing him, remembered the letter.

"A servant from the Manor brought this for you a little while after you had gone out. He said it was from Mrs. Jocelyn."

She handed it to him, and wondered that he did not answer her. When he turned out of the room and went into the study, banging the door behind him, she wondered still more.

Doctor West, startled by the abrupt entrance, began to think that his fears were coming true, the more so as Paul looked pale and nervous.

Paul saw the fear on his face, and, tender of him as ever, tried to allay it by calmness on his part.

"We shall know the worst now," he said. "This letter looks to me like negotiation. That won't do."

He was mistaken. Negotiation had been very far from the mind of the desperate woman who had written to him.

"You have come to hunt me down," she wrote, the clear, delicate penmanship making the words easy and plain to read. "I do not blame you for that. In your place, I might do the same. But I hate you for killing my joy, for robbing me—without my gain to yourself too—of my home, my husband, my all in life. Only for him, I would defy you. To lose his love, his faith, to see the shade of suspicion in his face would kill me with a crueller pang than any you could inflict. I am going away from this, away from England, sooner than suffer the fate which would be mine even if I baffled you. All I ask is, clear Doctor West as wholly as you can, but spare me, for my husband's sake; I would not ask you to do this for mine. Never let him know the price I paid for his love; it would kill him as surely as the loss of him would kill me.—VIVIENNE."

Reading the letter, so hopeless, so defiant, so pitiful, withal, in its truth, tears gathered in the Doctor's kindly eyes.

"Poor thing!" he said, very softly, as he folded it and laid it down—"it was a heavy price to pay. What will the future be to her? Homeless! She does not yet know what she is venturing upon."

Paul Knox, with knitted brows, sat and thought deeply.

"This is not what we want," he said. "This is solving our puzzle in one direction, only to deepen it in another. I don't see my way. How are we to clear you, without in some manner implicating her?"

"I don't see that, as yet, myself," the Doctor answered, gravely. "Poor Jocelyn!—how this will crush him!"

"I never saw any one like you, Dick—never in all my life!" cried Paul, testily pulling at his heavy whiskers with no gentle hand. "When any other man in the world would be hot for justice, you sit there and express nothing but pity. 'Poor Jocelyn,' indeed! This same 'poor Jocelyn' had very little pity for other people, as far as I can hear, when it suited his convenience not to have it."

The Doctor winced. He understood what was meant, and the memory of what Jocelyn's pity had been was not pleasant.

"I think on the whole I would rather she had stayed and braved it out in a rational way, than run off like this in a mad fashion, never heard of before off the stage. I don't see what we are to do next I am sure."

"Nor do I, said Doctor West; "but it seemes to me that the worst is over. I can trust to time to bring the truth to light, as I never have been able to trust as yet."

"And I," observed Paul, "would just like to see my way clear to helping on old Time with his work a bit."

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes of adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

DRESS GOODS!

BLACK CASHMERES:—Among the numerous Dress Fabrics, for which we are indebted to the French, there are none more serviceable or so well adapted for all seasons and all occasions, for either house or street wear, as BLACK CASHMERES. We ask a special visit for our Dress Department.

Our Black Cashmeres have made a name for themselves, and for us, and people who are now wearing them are delighted with their durability, color, weight and finish.

We have great confidence in setting forth the merits of our stock of this favorite fabric, because we believe them to be good, and having confidence are not afraid to recommend them.

BLACK STUFFS:—In Black Goods, other than Cashmeres, we invite special attention to the values offered, as well as to the range from which to select. Black Brilliantines, Black Persian Cords, Black India Crape Cloths, Black Balmoral Crape Cloths, Black Figured Lustres, Black Taffetas, and Italian Cloths.

COLOURED CASHMERES:—In Plain Dress Goods our Colored Cashmeres have met with a ready sale. We offer them in UNION and ALL WOOL, and in all the shades most in demand. There is a beautiful cloth being worn at present, called the "POULE CROISE," an All-Wool French Twill, which will take the place of Cashmeres to a considerable extent this season. It makes a rich and effective suit.

FANCY DRESS GOODS: In Fancy Dresses, Checks are being largely worn, although the greater portion of the goods being sold are of a plain character. We have a very stylish line of the checked goods in Fawn, Grey and TEA DRAB grounds, with a neat silk over-check. Plain DeBeiges, Plain Lustres and Cords, Checked and Spotted Batistes, will make up the bulk of the sales during the coming Spring and Summer. Our stock of the above goods is fully up to former seasons in "tone" and value, and of a wider range.

BUNTINGS:—During the warmer months of the Summer, Buntings will again be the prevailing material. We are showing them in Cream, Pale Blue, Drab and Black, in all-wool goods, both plain and checked.

ARRIVED:—A handsome line of ROSE DRESS GOODS.

N.B.—It is well to remember that at least half of the "effect" of any material is made by a judicious selection of the trimmings. We have Fringes, Silk Cords, Cord and Tassels, Satins, Silks, Braids and Buttons TO MATCH in every instance.

It is, we believe, becoming very popular as a spring medicine, and we would advise all who are in need of such a remedy to try it, as it has the name of being a thoroughly safe and efficient blood cleanser. 15-1t

DR. VINCENT'S LECTURE.—By the thoughtful kindness of Mr. Geo. A. Cox, who not only made an exceptionally low fare for the occasion, but kept the return train at Port Hope, for the excursionists, a large number of Peterborough people were enabled to enjoy the treat of listening to the lecture of Rev. Dr. Vincent, on "That Boy." The lecture was certainly a most pleasant and profitable one, and the visitors to the number of 100 unanimously vote Mr. Cox a vote of thanks.

TEMPERANCE ENTERTAINMENT.—The entertainment given by Carswell Temple a few evenings ago was a very pleasant and enjoyable affair. The chair was filled by Mr. A. E. Lyons, who presided over the large audience with credit to himself and satisfaction to all. A very agreeable programme of songs and recitations was varied by an address by Rev. Mr. Stobo in his usual genial and interesting style. These entertainments have now established themselves in the favor of the public, and as long as they are maintained at the existing standard their success may be assured.

VENNOR'S APRIL WEATHER.—Mr. Vennor predicts as follows for the month of April: The St. Lawrence will be open about the 9th or 11th, and the first steamship will probably arrive about the 17th or 19th. The weather will be very stormy in the Lower Province about the 30th, with very high water prevailing, but in the West will be a dry month. There will be warm weather just following the 20th, ending in thunder-storms on the 24th and 25th. Snowstorms are probable in the far west on the 25th and 26th, and snow-falls are not unlikely to occur in England at the close of the month. The month will end wet and cold, but, on the whole, will be like a May month.

A MUSICAL EVENT.—The energetic members of St. Luke's Church are about to favor lovers of music with another treat in the shape of an organ recital, to take place on the evening of Tuesday, the 19th instant. In order to ensure the success of the affair the Committee have secured the services of Miss Emma Martin, of whom the Chicago Musical World speaks as follows:—"Another new and thoroughly cultivated vocalist has appeared on the local musical firmament in the person of Miss Emma Martin. She has a wonderfully strong, clear voice, of great compass and wide range, and fully understands how to use it. A brilliant future is in store for her, either in concert or opera." As the recital is free to all, a liberal collection is expected, to defray the heavy expenses undertaken by the Committee.

P. S. M. C.—A meeting of the directors of the Peterborough Storage and Malting Company was held on Monday afternoon in the law office of Messrs Hatton, Hatton & Beck, and elected R. A. Morrow, President, and G. H. Hatton Secretary. The Company hope to be in a position to do business in a short time.

ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY.—At a meeting to consider the celebration of St. George's Day, it was resolved to have a supper on St. George's eve, Friday, April 22nd. The supper will take place at 8 o'clock at the Caisse House. Members of the St. George's Society and other Englishmen can obtain tickets (50 cents) from the Secretary, Mr. Bithray, or the other members of the committee.

UNFOUNDED.—We are requested to state that the account given in a contemporary of alleged rowdyism at the entertainment given by Carswell Lodge, on Thursday night last, was totally unfounded. The encores succeeding the various pieces was more enthusiastic than in good taste, but the alleged outrages described in the Review will be a surprise to those who were there.

THE SUNDAY MAGAZINE.—The May number of this excellent periodical contains, as usual an abundance of interesting and edifying reading matter. There are 128 quarto pages in each number, and nearly 100 illustrations. Price of single copy, 25 cents; annual subscription $3, postpaid. Address, Frank Leslie's Publishing House, 53. 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

THE PROTESTANT POOR HOME.—We are requested to announce that the annual meeting of the P. P. Home will be held (D.V.) on Tuesday 19th inst. in the Board Room at 3 p.m. The lady managers earnestly desire the attendance of all friends who feel interested in the cause, and we trust that the meeting will be such as will encourage them for their christian and unselfish devotion to a work which has other reward than that they may reap in their own consciences.

NOT TO BE CLOSED UP.—A good many seem to be under the impression that on account of the improvements at Cluxton's corner Darcy's Hotel is to be extinguished. This is not the case. The new building will necessitate some temporary changes in connection with the hotel, but the business will be carried on as usual, and when the improvements are completed the hotel will be equal, in point of accommodation, to any in the town, an additional storey being among the contemplated changes.

MUSIC V. LITERATURE.—The entertainment by the Institute pupils on Friday afternoon of last week was very largely attended and passed off with great success. At the conclusion of the entertainment, a debate was participated in by the students as to whether it would be wiser and more profitable to invest the money in the hands of the Association in a library or in piano. The literary men carried the day, but the musical advocates are not despondent notwithstanding, and still hope to carry out their long-cherished dream.

A DESERVED TRIBUTE.—On Friday evening last Mr. F. W. Millar, the Bandmaster, was presented by the Mayor, on behalf of the subscribers, with an elegant and valuable silver cornet. This presentation was in recognition, in some degree, of the valuable service which Mr. Millar has rendered to the town, as instructor of the Band which has done so much to reflect credit on the town of Peterborough. Mr. R. J. Chowen was mainly instrumental in getting up the testimonial, which was heartily met by everybody approached in connection with the same.

UMBRELLA FLIRTATION.—"To place your umbrella in a rack indicates that it is about to change owners. An umbrella carried over the woman, the man getting nothing but the drippings of rain, signifies courtship. When the man has the umbrella and the woman the drippings it indicates marriage. To carry it at right angles under your arm signifies that an eye is to be lost by the man who follows you. To put a cotton umbrella by the side of a nice silk one signifies "exchange is no robbery." To lend an umbrella indicates "I am a fool." To carry an umbrella just high enough to tear out men's eyes and knock off men's hats signifies "I am a woman."

THE SPRING TRADE.—I am now prepared to show a nice assortment of fresh new goods suitable for Spring and Summer use. New Dress goods in blacks and colors, prints, cottons, table linens, towels, sheetings, cretonnes, white and coloured quilts, lace curtains and smallares, new tweeds, worsteds, broad cloths, ducks, derries, flannels, collars and union shirtings. New ready-made clothing, rubber coats, shirts, collars, scarfs, ties, braces, handkerchiefs, new felt and straw hats, caps, new boots and shoes for men women and children. Fresh new teas, coffees, spices, sugars, syrups, tobaccos, bacon, lard, new crockery and glassware. Inspection invited by everyone. W. J. WALLACE, Lakefield. 14-tf

THE PETERBOROUGH CRICKET CLUB is now organized for the coming season, and intends to show that, in spite of last year's condition, it is not "dead" yet. Its work this year will be carried out on a different plan; and it is hoped that the public will appreciate some of the changes that have been made. The Club intends to cater a little for the amusement of the people, and a series of matches for the season, is now being arranged. Arrangements are being made with the following Clubs viz: Whitby, Belleville, Port Hope, Trinity College school and Cobourg. Other matches will be played between various teams chosen among the members of the Club. In all cases the ground will be thrown open to the general public during Cricket matches.

OUR BOAT CLUB.—The Boat Club at the adjourned meeting elected the following officers for the ensuing season: President, F. J. Lewis; Vice-President, Rev. Vincent Clementi; Secretary, A. H. McDougall; Treasurer, W. H. Budden; Captain, E. B. Edwards; Committee—Messrs. G. C Rogers; A. Elliott, F. H Dobbin and R. M. Orr. A special committee was appointed to act conjointly with a committee of the Cricket Club, as to the celebration of the 24th of May. It will be seen that the Boat Club has a strong organization, and we trust the success which has so far attended its efforts will be this summer more conspicuous than ever.

Y. M. C. A.—An adjourned meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association was held on Tuesday evening last, in the Orange Hall, when the following officers were elected:—J. F. Jeffors, President; W. Gilbert, 1st Vice-President; E. W. Cox, 2nd Vice-President; Geo. H. Johnston, Secretary; H. Nesbitt, Assistant Secretary; A. E. Davis, Treasurer. Directors—R. Hall, R. Chowen, W. G. Yelland, A. Russell, — Turnbull, J. Collins, Rossiter, Minors and D. H. Moss. The meeting was well attended, and considerable interest is being manifested by the members to make the Association a success. The Directors will meet this evening to make definite arrangements for rooms. The Association commences with a membership of about one hundred.

LACROSSE CLUB REORGANIZATION.—The annual meeting of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club was held on Wednesday evening of last week, the President, Mr. H. LeBrun, in the Chair. The financial position of the society was reported to be first-class, and fifteen new members were added to the list. The election of officers took place with the following result:—President, H. LeBrun; Vice-President, Mr. John Hackett; Captain, M. W. Sanderson; Secretary-Treasurer, P. Rudkins; Committee, Messrs. H. Phelan, J. C. Robertson and T. McBain. We wish the Club a prosperous season's sport.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.—The following motion passed by the Cobourg Town Council, carries its own moral with it:—"Moved by Councillor Guillet, seconded by Councillor Powell,—That whereas complaints have been made that at various points on the principal streets, and chiefly on Saturday and Sunday nights, groups of idlers loiter and obstruct the sidewalk, and that offensive language is used by them and addressed to persons passing by, and whereas such conduct is a public nuisance and contrary to the By-laws of the town, and the statute in such case provided; and whereas the penalties imposed by said By-laws and Statutes for any infriction of the same, are in the discretion of the magistrates from one to fifty dollars. Therefore be it resolved that the Police Magistrate be requested to inflict a severe penalty upon any person or persons found guilty of such misconduct. Carried."

ATHLETIC.—On Monday a couple of sports from the shanty while recalling their earlier exploits in fighting line, became excited and challenged one another to a trial at arms. They adjourned to a stable at corner of Hunter and Water streets, but finding the space insufficient backed into the shed, after stripping, proceedings commenced, the fight being supposed to be carried on in the Greaco-Roman style and both parties looking pale and troubled. The first round was copiously saturated with swearing, both parties vieing with one another neither choice of expletives, yet neither appearing to gain any advantage. In the second the spectators held their breath, the combatants having exhausted their supply and both were evidently getting "riled." A rough and tumble fight would have been the issue, had not our worthy Chief of Police stepped into the arena and by the majesty of his appearance awed the now satisfied fighters into their coats and hats.

THE MIDLAND RAILWAY.

Annual Meeting of the Bond and Stockholders.

The annual meeting of the Bond and Shareholders of the Midland Railway Company took place at the Company's offices, at Port Hope, on Tuesday last, the President, Mr. Geo. A. Cox, in the chair. Among the representatives present were R. Jaffray, J. R. Dundas, F. C. Taylor, Mayor of Lindsay, Henry Covert, P. Randall, Mayor of Port Hope, C. Stewart, H. Helm, Walter Renwick, John Wright, W. B. Ferguson, E. S. Vinden, C. L. Thompson, W. R. Wadsworth and others.

Mr. Geo. A. Cox seconded by Mr. R. Jaffray, moved the adoption of the annual report which was as follows:

REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT AND DIRECTORS.

To the Proprietors of the Midland Railway of Canada:

PORT HOPE, 19th April, 1881.

In submitting their report for the year ending 31st December, 1880, with the customary accounts attached thereto, the Directors have pleasure in stating that their expectations regarding the

for the year have been fully realised, and exhibit a very satisfactory increase over the previous year.

The total traffic receipts for the year amounted to the sum of $334,084.55 or (68,417l. 10s. 2d.) as against $259,226.77 or (53,265l. 15s. 6d.) for 1879, showing an increase of $74,857.78 or (15,281l. 14s. 9d.) or within a fraction of twenty-nine per cent. increase over 1879.

EXPENDITURE.

The working expenses for the year have been $186,530.41 (38,328l. 3s. 3d.) 55.83 per cent. on the gross receipts, as against $227,685.67 (45,551l. 17s. 0d.) for 1879, being a decrease of $35,155.26 (7,223l. 13s. 8d.)

REVENUE ACCOUNT.

The net revenue for the year amounted to $147,554.14, (30,319l. 6s. 11d.) This after payment of municipal liens and interest on the 1st of November, 1880, and after reserving $54,750.00, (£11,300) for payment of coupons due on the 1st of May, 1881, was appropriated as per Statement No. 3a.

It afforded your Directors no inconsiderable amount of pleasure to commence the application of net revenue to its legitimate purpose, the payment of Dividends, and to do so, not only feeling assured that they would be able to continue that course, but with every confidence that the net earnings of the Company for the future will be quite sufficient to meet all its interest obligations.

At a special general meeting of the Proprietors held in London in December last, at which the President and Mr. Jaffray had the pleasure of being present, a proposal was cordially agreed to by the Bondholders to exchange the overdue Coupons, amounting to 6¼ per cent., for deferred interest certificates, payable on the 31st December, 1885, with interest in the meantime at 5 per cent. per annum, payable half yearly. This, with the payment of interest that was made on the 1st of November last, conceals all arrears of interest up to that date. The total amount of deferred interest certificates issued for the purpose is only 28,038l. 15s. The Company reserves the right to retire them at any time during the five years, and fully anticipates being able to do so from surplus net revenue after payment of all interest as it matures.

The 2½ per cent. Coupon due on the 1st proximo was provided for by a deposit on the 1st instant with Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co., of the necessary funds to meet the full amount due, and no fears are entertained of being able in future to promptly meet our liabilities as they mature.

Reference was made in a previous report to the fact that our predecessors in office, by their efforts to complete the extension of the line out of revenue instead of providing additional capital for that purpose, had allowed the Bonds of the Company to become in default; had accumulated a large floating debt, which was being carried at exorbitant rates of interest and commission, and had permitted the line and its equipment to become very much out of repair. This not only largely increased the working expenses, but from want of confidence upon the part of shippers in the ability of the Company to move their products, had prevented the extension and development of business along the line. During the past year these difficulties have happily been removed. The necessary legislation was obtained in February, and a special general meeting of the Bond and Shareholders, held in London in May, 1880, consented to the issue of £150,000 of Preference Bonds.

An advance obtained at a low rate of interest by the hypothecation of these Bonds has enabled your Directors to effect a most satisfactory consolidation of the floating debt, with which they found the operations of the Company seriously retarded upon their acceptance of office.

It has also enabled them to effect most important improvements upon the line and its equipment. $129, 134. 92 (26,534l. 11s. 5d) has been expended upon capital account during the year in the purchase of Steel Rails and another improvements upon the permanent way, and $133,100.98. (27,349l. 10s. 3d.) in the acquisition of new rolling stock, making a total expenditure of $262.235.90, (53,884l. 1s. 9d. under these heads.

By reference to the Engineer's Report it will be seen that during the year 21¾ miles of the line have been ballasted, 54 miles have been entirely relaid with new sleepers, 31½ miles of new steel rails have been laid, 4 new station buildings, 3¾ miles of additional siding accommodation, and 18¼ miles of new fencing have been constructed, besides many other less important improvements.

The Superintendent's Report shows an addition to our rolling stock of one new locomotive, 107 platform cars, 63 box cars, 2 passenger coaches, and 2 smoking, mail and express cars.

Notwithstanding the extensive improvements that have been carried out during the last two years; the low state of repair into which the line had previously drifted, combined with the increased and constantly increasing business of the Company, still urgently demand very considerable expenditure upon the improvement of the roadway and the acquisition of additional rolling stock. Steps have been taken to meet these requirements by entering into contracts for the purchase of 4 new locomotives, 80 new platform cars, and 28 miles of steel rails, besides extensive preparations for ballasting and otherwise improving the line.

It is satisfactory to be able to state that the £75,000 of Consolidated, and the £150,000 of Preference Bonds, still held by the Company, will not only pay the amount for which they have been hypothecated, but will provide for the improvements and additional rolling stock referred to in the foregoing paragraph, and still leave a very considerable sum available for capital expenditure.

By reference to the General Traffic Agent's Report it will be seen that we continue to maintain the most friendly relations with all connecting lines, and that we enter upon the year 1881 with the most hopeful anticipations of a large increase over the very satisfactory business of last year.

Your Directors have kept carefully before them the importance of our route as the shortest line from the west to the east, and work has steadily progressed with the object of establishing a through trade. At Port Hope a substantial elevator, having a capacity of 120,000 bushels, and completed with all the latest improvements, has been erected, and is now being used for local trade, in which respect alone it is of very valuable assistance to this company. We have also made considerable progress towards the erection of an Elevator, together with the necessary wharves, at Midland, but the large amount of work that had to be done at this point, together with the size of the Elevator being erected, viz., 250,000 bushels capacity,, has taken up a considerable amount of time, and it is doubtful whether we shall be prepared to go thoroughly into the through business before next spring. We are pleased, however, to be able to report that by that time, if not this fall, our facilities for through trade will not be excelled by any line in the country, and negotiations which we have held with vessel owners are of such a nature that we expect to be able to bring to our service lines of steam barges and vessels of both the upper and lower lakes without any immediate outlay of capital or subsidy, the vessel owners being apparently quite willing to form the connecting links in our through route on the ordinary basis of division of rates.

A very satisfactory arrangement was made with a Joint Stock Company for the erection of the Port Hope Elevator, thus leaving more capital available for the additional equipment that will be required to meet the demands of our increasing traffic, and the propriety of having the same Company assume the Midland Elevator is having the careful and earnest consideration of your Directors.

During the past year the Grand Junction Railway has been completed form Belleville (the head of river navigation) to Peterborough. This, and the not improbable construction at an early date of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, which will also pass through Peterborough, placing it on a direct line between the Provincial and Dominion capitals, rendered it advisable to obtain the necessary power, to build from there direct to Omemee, a point on our main line distant 14 miles. The Company's Act, passed at the recent session of the Ontario Legislature, confers this power and also authorizes the issue of £100,000 of preference stock, subject to the approval of the present stockholders. It is not proposed at present, however, to take the special vote necessary to utilize these powers.

The Canadian Directors have great pleasure in acknowledging the hearty and zealous support and co-operation of their co-directors in London, and of the officers and employees of the Company, in promoting the general prosperity of the line, and in congratulating the proprietors not only upon the largely increased earnings, but also upon the greatly improved position of their property, and its very encouraging future.

Respectfully submitted.
GEO: A. COX,
President.

Mr. Cox in moving the adopti on of the report spoke as follows:

I have pleasure in moving the adoption of the report that has just been read. Such a satisfactory statement could not, I think, at any time be otherwise than satisfactory to the proprietors of the Company, but when contrasted with the first report which the present Directors were obliged to present at the close of 1878, it must, I think, be particularly satisfactory to them. At that time the difficulties with which we had to contend appeared almost insurmountable, while the report presented to-day indicates substantial improvement to the property, increased revenue, general prosperity, and a very encouraging future. The large increase in the receipts of $74,857.78 over those of last year, and the still larger increase that we anticipate this year, arises entirely from the improvement and extension of business along the line. We have not yet participated in any of the through grain trade, and shall not, I fear, be able to do so to any extent this year. Large expenditures have been made in the erection of elevators and other terminal facilities at Port Hope and Midland, in preparation for this business, but the nature and extent of those improvements are such that we shall not have them fully completed before August or September, too late for this summer's trade. More strennous efforts would have been made to have them completed earlier, but it is already quite evident that our local trade will tax our rolling stock to its utmost capacity, notwithstanding the large additions that have been and are being made to it. By another year, however, we shall add still further to our equipment, so as to meet not only the increasing local traffic, but also to meet the requirements of the through trade, the importance of which is daily becoming more apparent, and with the large lumber business developed in the Georgian Bay District, shows very conclusively that our predecessors were quite correct in locating the terminus of the road where they did. There does not appear to be any reason to doubt the ability of the Company, from the local trade alone, to earn sufficient net revenue to pay the interest on all its debentures, while our hopes as to the through grain trade appear to be well grounded, and if even partially realized, will place that beyond any question. In December last Mr. Jaffray and myself had the pleasure of attending a meeting of the proprietors in London, England. The cordial manner in which they consented to the consolidation of the over-due coupons; their evident appreciation of the improved position of the property; and their confidence in its future, was very gratifying to ourselves, and to our co-Directors. This, with the zealous and cheerful support of our officers and employees, and the general prosperity of business, have all combined to make the year under review an exceedingly satisfactory one. Under these very encouraging circumstances I have pleasure in moving the adoption of the report.

Mr. Jaffray, in seconding the report, fully endorsed the remarks made by Mr. Cox as to the present position and future prospects of the road. He dwelt upon the great service which Mr. Cox had done to the Company since he had been entrusted with the management of its affairs. He had drawn to himself the confidence of the public, the confidence of the employees and all connected with the road. He referred in enthusiastic terms to the results which must inevitably follow the building of the elevators at Port Hope and Midland. He predicted that this would become in a short time the highway of traffic between the west and the eastern seaboard.

Moved by Mr. Dundas, seconded by Mr. Ross, and Resolved,—That the thanks of the Shareholders and Bondholders, are due to the several officers of the Company for their zeal and assiduity in the discharge of the duties attached to their several offices, and the Shareholders and Bondholders hereby express their just appreciation of their efforts.—Carried.

Mr. Dundas, in moving the resolution referred to the former condition of the road, and drew attention to the fact that business could now be transacted as safely and well over the Midland as any road in Canada. He spoke in high terms of the officers of the road, especially of those at the head offices, and considered that a large share of the success of the road was due to the harmonious relations which existed between all connected with it.

Mr. Ross, in seconding the motion, quite concurred in what had fallen from the previous speaker, and spoke strongly of the labor by which the present President had brought the affairs of the Company to the present satisfactory condition.

Moved by Mr. Ross, seconded by Mr. Dundas,—As individual members of this Board, we desire to express our pleasure at the eminently satisfactory result of the recent visit to England of the President, accompanied by our co-director, Mr. Jaffray, to attend a meeting of the bondholders, and with the cordial manner with which they were received, and we hereby tender them our hearty thanks for their valuable services on that occasion. We would further express our appreciation of the valuable services and untiring efforts of the President on all occasions, to which is mainly attributable the greatly enhanced value of both the old and new bonds of the Company, and the present satisfactory state of the road, and the development of its business, as also the bright prospects for the future, under his able management.—Carried.

On motion, Mr. W. R. Wadsworth and Mr. C. L. Thompson were appointed scrutineers, and the balloting for Directors for the ensuing year followed with the following results:—Directors elected:—Geo. A. Cox, R. Jaffray, H. P. Dwight, J. R Dundas, and Messrs. E. J. Halsey, H. Grissell and U. R. Burke, no other ballots having been cast.

Mr. Hugel moved, seconded by Mr. Vinden,—That the President do now leave the chair, and that Mr. Henry Covert take the chair.

In moving a vote of thanks to the President, as chairman, Mr. Hugel referred to the gratifying evidences of progress in the Midland Railway, of which he had formerly been the manager. He did not consider that there had been any change in the general idea of carrying on the Company's affairs, as Mr. Cox had carried out and completed the ideas which he (Mr. Hugel) had entered upon. Mr. Cox, however, seemed to be possessed of the magic wand, and as he felt deeply and sincerely interested in the welfare of the road, he was glad to see the position which Mr. Cox had advanced the road to.

Mr. Jaffray, in alluding to the affairs of the Company, also spoke very highly of the services of Mr. Cox, and alluded to the good work done by all the officers of the road, referring in an eulogistic manner, to the successful labors of the officers to whom, next to Mr. Cox, the principal credit was due.

The meeting then adjourned.

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 21, 1881.

The Law Regarding Libel.

It is becoming every year more and more evident that the interests of solvent and responsible publishers, at least, would be consulted by some changes in the laws respecting libel. At the late Assizes at Lindsay and Cobourg there were no less than three libel suits, one against Mr. C. D. Barr, of the Lindsay Post, one against Mr. George Wilson, of the Port Hope Guide, and a third against Mr. J. B. Trayes, of the Port Hope Times. In the first place a Lindsay school trustee, whose public conduct Mr. Barr in the public interest had found it necessary to expose and condemn, wanted $5,000 and costs. In that case the jury took the ground that a public journalist in the discharge of his duty must be protected, and they returned a verdict in Mr. Barr's favor. In the case of Mr. Wilson, he had ventured to personally direct the attention of a neighbor to the character of a newly-arrived citizen of Port Hope, as pourtrayed in a newspaper at his former place of abode, and he, too, is required by the lawyers to pay over $5,000 and costs for the benefit of the litigous person who pretended to have been injured thereby. In the case of Mr. Trayes there was a similar modest demand for cash and consolation for having ventured to allude to the same article concerning the plaintiff, Mr Preston. Mr. Wilson secured a verdict in his case, and the costs, if the case remains there, rests upon the plaintiff or some one interested with him. In the case of Mr. Trayes, the jury agreed that the plaintiff's character would cost twenty cents for repairs, and mulct the publisher in that sum, each party bearing their own costs. What we wish to point out is, that whether cases of these kind be won or lost, they are always attended by a heavy burden of expense to the responsible publisher. No matter how false or frivolous the alleged libel may be, nor how evident that it has been taken up as a speculation, or to gratify malice, or to harass and annoy, the publisher is always placed under a heavy burden of expense, feeing lawyers, paying witnesses, etc., all of which is in the end simply so much money out of which he has been legally robbed, without benefitting any one. Such libel suits as we refer to will neither rehabilitate a ragged reputation, nor affect the publisher who suffers by it in the esteem of the public. Nobody gains anything but the lawyers, and we do not agree that they are entitled to any pickings from such hard-worked and under-paid public servants as the journalists. And as the law stands, any one, any adventurer who is ready to take his chances of being awarded damages, and can get any one by false persuasions or common conspiracy to go security for costs, can put a publisher to all the trouble, expense and annoyance attached to the defence of a libel-case, and it is quite apparent that there are men who are ready to resort to this means of having "satisfaction," and that they are making use, with more and more frequency, of the unfair and unjust disadvantage at which any solvent and responsible journal is placed under the law as it stands. A precedent has been set, too, in these Port Hope cases, of journalists seeking the courts to settle differences that have arisen in the columns of their papers. This conduct is utterly unprofessional and unworthy of any respectable journalist. People do not always place as much value upon the personal opinions of editors towards each other, as some may imagine, and if one exceeds the bounds of propriety or justice in personally alluding to another—which in itself is the best proof that the journalist is so only in name—there is really very little harm done. A man of good reputation can afford to contemn a personal attack; one of poor, indifferent or bad repute cannot gain a character in a law court, and as a general rule their real object is money and not reputation. We are convinced that if the present state of the law continues to be abused with increasing frequency as of late, journalists throughout the country will find themselves liable at any time to be the victims of unjust legal persecution, for having carried out their duties to the public. Journalists throughout the country should unite to secure a change in a system which is liable to cripple and impair the usefulness of the press, for the sole possible benefit of no one, save lawyers and sharpers.

Seven Dollars a Year.

Those of our readers who subscribe to the daily papers will have observed, to their chagrin, no doubt, that the N. P. has at last produced its legitimate effect upon our news literature. The increase in price of every kind of printer's machinery, type and appliances, as well as the rise in paper created by a high rate of duty, has at last forced the publishers of daily journals to the reluctant conviction that they can no longer afford to continue to supply their readers at old standard of a $6 subscription rate. Indeed, considering the high standard of excellence of the Canadian dailies, and the expense gone to by publishers to maintain and increase it, as compared with the comparatively limited constituencies to whose patronage they have access, the old subscription was quite inadequate, and the new one is far below the standard prevailing in the United States, for even inferior classes of journals. The same influences which operate with the daily, proportionately affect the weekly newspapers. Increased prices for everything, and especially for paper, which is an article of constant consumption, make the subscription rate of $1.50 for a paper like the EXAMINER much lower than in former times. And as the profits—or assumed profits, for there is actually no profit whatever on newspaper subscription—are thus cut off by increased expenses, the demands upon the publisher's purse are constantly increased—as it were, burning the candle at both ends. Formerly, fifty-one editions of a paper constituted the year's subscription, while the lower standard of the journals made much less labor necessary then than now. Now we have been issuing at the rate of 55 numbers in the year, to say nothing of frequent enlargements of the paper from eight to ten pages, and a constant issue of large supplements. Nevertheless, the price of the EXAMINER will be maintained at the old rate of $1.50 a year, and we trust those who are in arrears for subscription will, in view of these facts, come promptly in and settle up, as they must see that unless subscriptions are paid strictly in advance, the money is only an aggravation to the publisher when it comes. A person who owes four years' subscription should remember that the publisher has paid for the paper and labor consumed, two years before, and where there is no actual profit on the transaction, the publisher is losing the interest of his money, and running risk of losing the principal. We have endeavored to treat our subscribers generously in the value returned to them for their subscriptions, and we would like to see a more general recognition of this in observing the rule of advance payments in all cases.

Peterborough Rifle Association.

Annual Meeting and Election of Officers.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Rifle Association took place at the orderly room at the Drill Shed on Wednesday evening last week. The chair was occupied by the President, Lieut.-Col. H. C. Rogers.

Major R. W. Bell, Secretary-Treasurer, read the financial statement for 1880, which showed no liabilities to meet and a surplus of $61. 47 on hand, besides 1, 140 rounds of ammunition. The receipts during the year were $273. 62, and the expenditure, $212. 45. The total value of prizes given at the annual matches last year was $327, besides the Ontario medal. The statement was referred to Major Grover and Captain Dean to audit, the auditors reporting everything correct.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year;—President, Lieut.-Col. H. C. Rogers; 1st Vice-President, Rev. V. Clementi; 2nd Vice-President, Lieut.-Colonel J. Z. Rogers; Secretary-Treasurer, Major R. W. Bell; Committee, Captains Edwards and Dean and Mr. Fred Hall.

Moved by Mr. F. Hall, seconded by Trooper Scollie,—That in order to encourage regular practice by the members of this Association, prizes in ammunition, not to exceed 500 rounds per month, be awarded; the same to be competed for on the last regular practice day of each month. Other details to be decided by the Council. Firing regulations, those of the Ontario Rifle Association.—Carried.

Moved by Captain Edwards seconded by Major Grover,—That the May match, 900 yards, and that 400 rounds of ammunition be appropriated for prizes as follows:—1st prize, 100 rounds; 2nd, 80; 3rd, 60; 4th, 50: 5th, 40: 6th, 30: 7th, 20: 8th, 10, and 9th, 10.—Carried.

Moved by Major R. W. Bell, seconded by Mr. R. H. Smith, That this association affiliate with the Ontario Rifle Association, and that the O. R. A. badge for this year be awarded to the member making the highest aggregate score in any three of the monthly matches held in May, June, July and August.—Carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

P. M. Markell, West Jeddore, N. S. writes:—"I wish to inform you of the wonderful qualities of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I had a horse so lame that he could scarcely walk; the trouble was in his knee; and two or three applications completely cured him."

Rathbun & Son, have 30,000,000 feet of lumber on hand, and 5,000,000 feet of manufactured cedar.

The dwelling house of Mr. John Armstrong, a short distance back of Mr. L. Dudley's, Cramahe, was with all the contents, consumed by fire one day last week.

Messrs. A. Knox and Geo. Gould shipped 34 head of cattle from the Oshawa station on Friday last, for the Montreal market. They were a fine lot of animals and not surpassed by any on the market. —Oshawa Reformer.

Mr. Appleyard, was engaged last week, over on the Big Island, in rolling logs. By some means his hold gave way, and a large log rolled over him, breaking three ribs, and otherwise injuring him. He is in a fair way to recover.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

Mrs. Wm. Rich, of Newtonville, died very suddenly on Friday. She has been ailing for some time; but lately she appeared to be on the mend. On Friday she ate her breakfast and dinner as usual, and about two o'clock she expired without a struggle.

Our readers will regret to hear of the death of Mrs. Howard, the esteemed wife of the Rev. I. B. Howard, Methodist Minister, of Millbrook. The event took place at the latter village quite suddenly. The deceased was a sister of Dr. Beatty, of Cobourg.

The Independent's Minden correspondent says:—We are sorry to announce the death of Mr. John Long, one of the oldest settlers, from the effect of a fall from a waggon some time since. Mr. Long will be deeply missed in this section of the country.

Immediately after an explosion of a blast at the Campbellford woollen mills buildings, a piece of stone was hurled a distance of over one hundred feet, and found a stopping place on the head of Frank Caddy, son of Mr. C. F. Caddy. A wound was produced which required dressing.

On Thursday of last week, Joseph Maroney, of Darlington, was arraigned before His Honor Judge Boswell on a charge of larceney of a silver watch and $70 in money, from the house of his father, P. Maroney, on the 16th of March last. He pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to the Central Prison for eighteen months.

The Lindsay Post says that the little daughter of Mr. H. Silver, drowned whilst coasting at McDonnell's hill last November, was recovered on Friday last by her father about three and a half miles down the river, near Hepburn's landing. The body was floating on the surface, only a small portion of it visible.

The Campbellford Herald is informed that Mr. Joseph Bawden, of the 7th concession of Cramahe, is in possession of a Berkshire sow three years old, that lately gave birth to 21 pigs. Thirteen of these made their appearance on the 1st inst., seven on the evening of the following day, and one two days afterwards, making in all a litter of 21.

As she was walking over a log that spanned a creek near her home, on her return from a visit to her daughter, Mrs. T. Shannon, Mrg. Miller, who resides in Seymour, near this village, lost her equilibrium, and fell into the water. The water was deep, and had it not been for the assistance rendered her by her granddaughter it is very possible she would have been drowned.

The Picton Times says:—A man named James Miller, lumber piler, left Deseronto for Ferry Point last Thursday on the ice, and not having turned up on Saturday it was feared he had been drowned, especially as cries as if for help had been heard opposite Belleville on Thursday night. On Saturday evening he turned up all right, having been on a visit to friends in Prince Edward County. He was surprised to find what a fuss his absence had caused.

Last Friday about noon, Mrs. Mackenzie, aunt by marriage of Dr. Stewart, of Belleville, slipped and fell on the floor, breaking the left femora or thigh bone near the socket. In attempting to save herself from the fall, she placed her left arm with considerable force on the floor, and fractured the bones of the forearm. Dr. Eakins was sent for, and on his arrival did what he could for the old lady; but, seeing that she is 84 years of age, and her injuries are of a very serious nature, it is hardly possible that she will recover.

The Bobcaygeon Independent, writing on lumbering operations in Minden, says: "The feature of the season has been the large quantity of forest produce taken out other than pine logs and squared timber. The Victoria Railway will not carry less than a hundred thousand railway ties, twenty thousand telegraph poles, and so many posts and so much cordwood that no estimate can yet be accurately made. The ties bring 14 cents each, the poles about 30 cents each. Thus $14,000 will go to the settlers for ties and $6,000 for poles. This $20,000 goes into the pockets of the settlers and will be just so much gained as a result of the railway being opened. The ties in another year or two will attain a value of 20 cents each and then it will be a good business.

HOW TO GET RICH.—The great secret of obtaining riches, is first to practice economy, and as good old "Deacon Snyder" says, "It used to worry the life out of me to pay enormous doctor's bills, but now I have 'struck it rich.' Health and happiness reign supreme in our little household, and simply because we use no other medicine but Electric Bitters and only costs fifty cents a bottle." Sold by all druggists.

THE SECRET OF HAPPINESS.—How often have we longed for perfect enjoyment and how seldom found it. Misfortune has come, or ill health overtakes us. Perhaps a cough has come upon us which threatens that dreaded of all diseases, consumption, and we feel that death is near. With what joy should we be filled then, when such a remedy as DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY for Consumption is placed within our reach. It has cured thousands who were nearer the grave than ourselves and made their lives peaceful and happy. Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Loss of voice, difficulty of breathing, or any affection of the Throat and Lungs are positively cured by this Wonderful Discovery. Now to give you satisfactory proof that DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY will cure, if you will call at any of the Drug Stores you can get a trial bottle for ten cents or a regular size bottle for $1.00. LAND SALT!

TO FARMERS!

The experience of Canadian Farmers during the last few years corroborates almost without exception the benefits to all grain crops by an early and liberal application of LAND SALT. The immediate effects noticeable are the retention of moisture and a marked stiffening of the straw preventing its lodging; thus enabling the kernel more fully to mature.

These effects were fully brought out at the last meeting of the N. and D. Association held in town on the 12th and 13th of January. Many of the most influential members of the Society testified that they had used Land Salt for several years, and always with good results.

In reply to the question as to which kind of Salt was the best, the testimony of all was emphatically in favor of LIVERPOOL SALT. In fact it was stated that one sack of Liverpool Salt was worth from one and a half to two barrels of Goderich Salt.

Liverpool Salt is stronger, it has more vitality, and hence is the most economical to apply. It has been proved to be better than bulk salt, which is the refuse left from refining the finer kinds of barrel salt, also; it is acknowledged to go further and give better results.

The Easter Market.

A MAGNIFICENT DISPLAY.

Our Butchers Excell Themselves.

As might have been gathered from occasional notices in the papers, of transactions between the butchers and leading breeders, the display of meat for the Easter feast was not likely to be anything to indicate the probability of a famine, but excellent as these shows have always been, none yet has equalled in extent, or in the excellency of the quality of the meat displayed in holiday garb at the market, making that dismal old architectural monstrosity for once the most attractive spot in town. All the butchers had their meats skillfully dressed, and adorned with rosettes, ribbons, flowers, etc., the combined effect, with the bunting tastefully arranged in front of Messrs. Winch and Howden's stalls, being exceedingly handsome.

MR. H. C. WINCH'S STALL

was a marvel of ingenious and tasteful arrangement of all kinds of elegantly decorated meats, bunting hanging in festoons above adding to the very fine display and artistic appearance. But there was something about it more important than appearance. It comprised as fine a lot of meats—beef, mutton, veal, pork, etc.,—as could be secured in any butcher's stall in America. Among the most noticeable pieces were to be observed choice cuts from cows, steers, and heifers from the herds of Jas. Campbell, North Monaghan; Wm. Armstrong, of Otonabee; William Graham, of Smith; J. T. Grieves, of Lakefield, and John Livick, of Smith. All this beef was thoroughbred, and presented an appearance that might have suggested an appetite within the ribs of an Egyptian mummy. As Harry said, it was "beef among the roses." There was also an extensive and magnificent display of mutton and spring lambs, fed by Messrs. R. Moloney, Douro; W. Armstrong, Otonabee; Jas. Campbell, North Monaghan; T. Jackson, Otonabee, and T. Hoskins, Dpuro. A striking object of attention was a calf, of three weeks and the weight of a young cow, which had been specially fed for the occasion by Mr. Edward Sutton, of Cavan. The cuts of veal ticketed as it were the envy of those who had not been early enough to secure a piece. It was pronounced by connoisseurs to be the best veal they had ever seen. Looking at the vast quantity of meat on display at Mr. Winch's stalls, one would have wondered what could ever become of it, but an hour's stay showed that Harry was wise to provide liberally for the occasion. Equally busy across the hall was who also had a huge display of most exquisite meats, elegantly decorated, and artistically cut. Among those that particularly struck attention were an exceptionally fine Devon heifer, fed for the occasion by Capt. Wallis. The joints and stocks looked exceedingly tempting, and the names of so many leading citizens who had already appropriated the choice morsels proved that our citizens appreciate the enterprise which provides for them so bountifully. The same was to be said of a Devon heifer stall-fed for Easter by Mr. Howden himself, who has a high reputation as a skillful and successful breeder and feeder. In veal a calf was offered, fed by the well-known veteran breeder, John Calvert, of Ops. Another fine piece of Easter veal was contributed to Mr. Howden's fine display by Wm. Taylor, of Douro. Mr. Howden had fine mutton fed at his own farm, and some extra choice spring lambs by Mr. Douglas, of North Monaghan. These were the principal animals, but not all that was displayed. No one after looking at this beef, cut up, as it presented itself there with its fine bone, rich tender flesh, and tempting sirloins, could question that the consumer is interested in seeing thoroughbred stock-raising extended. In this respect we may observe that all these very superior animals are from the county of Peterborough and vicinity, and these stalls would have no reason to fear competition with the best in the large cities, either as to extent, taste or quality of the display.

Mr. HEATHER and Mr. LAPLANTE also contributed a handsome display to the general effect and the general excellence. But the credit for superior show did not belong wholly to the market, as there were one or two side shows of almost as good dimensions as the original circus.

R. WAINRIGHT,

at his shop, opposite the Post Office, had as fine a display of first-class meats as could be desired to delight the eye or please the palate. The piece de resistance of the very extensive exhibition was, of course, the Mammoth Calf, of 720 lbs. weight and only eight months old. It was an object of general admiration, and deservedly so, as it is rarely that so fine an animal is seen in any butcher's stall. The animal was fed by Mr. Hugh Bertram, who may well feel proud of the prodigee, and of growing an animal, that, as we noticed by the tickets on the "mammoth," has achieved an entrance to the houses of the first society in Peterborough. Mr. Wainright showed a very handsome lot of sheep and spring lambs, from Creighton Matchett, of Otonabee, Jas. Taylor, and Geo. Harvey, of Smith, and John Ludgate. We omitted to mention that his fine assortment of cattle were specially fed for him for the Easter market, by the following:—One thoroughbred Durham Steer, weight 1,250 lbs., fed by H. Bertram. Two heifers, weight 1,400 lbs. and 1,200 lbs., fed by Sylvanus Davis, of Smith. One heifer, 1,200 lbs., fed by Mr. T. G. Hazlitt. One Steer, 1,500 lbs., fed by Samuel Sargeant, of Otonabee. Three Prime Steers, fed by John Garbutt, of Smith. One Choice Cow, fed by George Moncrieff, of Emily. One Steer, fed by George Elliott, of Smith. One Cow, fed by J. Williamson, of Cavan. Two Fine Cattle, from Evan Ingram's herd, Otonabee. Taking it all together, Mr. Wainright's display was creditable to him and to the town. In conclusion, we must not forget to mention the very excellent display made by at his shop, corner of Hunter and Aylmer streets. Mr. Denoon's show of Easter meats was fully up to the standard of the leading butchers. His shop was tastefully decorated and the beef, etc., dressed and displayed to the best advantage. His Short Horn Steers, bred by Mr. Telford, of Smith, and G. M. Roger, Esq., cut up some very superior meat. A splendid calf was conspicuous—fed by Mr. Edward Sutton, of Cavan, also one fed by Mr. George Lee, of Smithtown. His spring lambs, fed for his Easter market by Whitfield Bros., of Cavan, presented an appearance that recommended them to the approval of visitors. He offered also a very fine lot of young pork, and other butchers' commodities suitable to the season.

We were glad to see that all the butchers we have named, had all the business they could attend to on Saturday and since, and though the butchers usually calculate to have some display meat left on their hands, this season, we fancy, they were pretty well sold out.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mr. Chas. K. Grigg, of Tyrone, has gone to Ottawa Normal School. He is succeeded by Mr. E. H. Dewart, of Peterborough, who recently passed the examination at the Toronto Normal School.

The semi-annual meeting of Northumberland County Teachers' Association is called to meet in the High School building, Colborne, on the 12th and 13th of May.

The Minister of Education has made some changes in the Central Committee, which will hereafter be known under the name of the Advisory Board. Four of the old members are retained, viz., Prof. Young, and Inspectors Buchan, Marling, and Glashan. The retiring members are Mr. G. W. Ross, M. P., Mr. Hughes, and Dr. McLellan; and to take their place the appointments are, Dr. Haanel, of Victoria University; Prof. Watson, of Queen's; and Mr. Baker, the Registrar of the University of Toronto. Dr. Haanel will prepare papers in the department of Science. The Advisory Board, as newly constituted, is a strong organization, and will prove to be very efficient.

AVENGING THE CZAR.

TRIAL AND CONVICTION OF THE RUSSIAN ASSASSINS.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 11.—Jeliaboff, in his speech at the trial of the Nihilists on Saturday, asked that his last speech might be published word for word. Sophie Pieoffsky asked that she might be dealt with regardless of her sex. The prisoners received the sentence with perfect calmness and indifference.

The Court has gone to Gatschina. The period granted the Nihilists for appeal will expire at five o'clock on Tuesday afternoon. All the prisoners except Jeliaboff asked for copies of the judgment with a view to appeal for mitigation of the sentence.

It is probable that the Nihilist, Sophie Pieoffsky, will be spared hanging for the part she took in the assassination of the Czar. For more than fifty years no execution of a woman has taken place in Russia. Jessie Helfman will also probably escape the extreme penalty of the law.

The Czar still receives threatening letters form the Nihilists, and efforts to trace them have thus far been futile. The foreign embassadors who have been received by the Emperor express themselves as favourably impressed by His Majesty's determination regarding his foreign policy.

The sentence of death was finally read to-day in the presence of the prisoners. They were allowed twenty-four hours to appeal. Professor Solovieff caused some excitement among the students of the University of St. Petersburg on Saturday by condemning capital punishment and expressing the hope that the Czar would show mercy to the prisoners.

A MUSICAL CURIOSITY.—We have received from Messrs. Abbot & Co., of Montreal, a very neat musical instrument, called a "Mechanical Orguinette." A Candahar despatch says General Hume has published the order for the evacuation of Candahar, which, subject to the approval of the Commander-in-Chief, commences on the 13th inst, the final evacuation taking place on the 22nd inst. Shamsuddin Khan, Deputy of the Government, who has been here for the last few days, is arranging for taking over civil administration. The rumour of Ayoob Khan's desperate position at Herat is not confirmed. It is now reported that the rumour was invented by Ayoob Khan himself to hasten our departure, and that he has ordered the Governor of Ferat to advance on Candahar as soon as the British evacuate, and will himself follow with a large force. It is, therefore, possible that the neighbourhood of Candahar may within the next few weeks be the scene of a fierce struggle between the Ameer, Abdurrahman Khan, and Ayoob Khan. CLEAN UP.—It will shortly be in order for the town authorities to commence the work of street cleaning, and it is desirable for citizens to supplement the efforts made. ELECTRICAL HUMBUG.

We have been requested to publish the following from the American Agriculturist, for the benefit of the farmers of this county. It speaks for itself:

"We have already had batteries of many sorts, but never before have we had the "Miniature Battery." A long circular in very fine print, tells all about it. The pictures are only three, but telling. One is a man, or the upper part of him, heavy as to beard, and nothing as to clothes, with one of these batteries right over his breast-bone, and he don't seem to mind it a bit. The second is a picture of the earth; that respectable old planet is being badly struck by just the crookedest kind of lightning. The third is a picture of the Battery, "of the exact size," which is that of half a dollar. The "Professor" who has this miniature Battery, is down upon all Electric Chains, Belts, and Bands —and we should think he would be—for they give down only common, plain electricity, old-fashioned lightning as it were, but this Battery is up to the times with a new sort, the real genuine pointed lightning; This, absurd as it may seem, is an actual claim; we are told that the Professor said: "That the various blocks of metal were so placed, that when the electricity was formed, it would be formed in gimlet shape," and he said it would "enter the system in that form, and pass on twisting, until it spent its force. Yes, the lightning is not only "gimlet pointed," but it goes on a "twistin." On the whole, we prefer the old style. Yet people will read nonsense like this, and believe it. Boyd, you are the worst electrical humbug yet."

HORRIBLE TRAGEDY.

A NEW BORN INFANT DEVOURED BY PIGS.

QUEBEC, April 18.—A correspondent of L'Evenement, writing from Notre Dame de Lake St. John, sends the following particulars of a horrible tragedy, of which that parish has been the theatre. On Friday, the 8th April, the miller at Thomas mills, leaving his house early in the morning to attend to two customers, was horrified to observe several pigs in the act of devouring a child about fifteen days old. The legs had entirely disappeared, and the voracious animals had commenced to devour the trunk of the little body. The news spread with startling rapidity, and as no family had lost a child suspicion fell upon a young girl, the daughter of respectable parents, who was supposed to have been the mother of the new-born infant. An inquest was held, at which fifteen witnesses were examined. The result was the arrest of the unfortunate young girl referred to, who has been lodged in gaol at Chicoutimi to await her trial at the ensuing term of the Criminal Court. The medical men declare that the child was born alive. This tragic event has created considerable consternation in the neighborhood of Pointe Bleue."

Trent Valley Navigation.

The Montreal "Gazette" brought into Line.

We clip the following letter, and additional comment thereon, from the Montreal Gazette. It will be observed that the writer of the letter, who we believe is Mr. D. G. Hatton, has done this important project essential service by plotting so strongly a favourable opinion from so influential a journal as the Gazette:

Upon this letter the Gazette writes editorially as follows:

"The letter which we published yesterday from Peterborough is written by a gentleman of undoubted influence, who has always taken a keen interest in public affairs. There is no doubt that he speaks the sentiment of the people along the route of the proposed Trent Valley Canal, and under these circumstances we regret very much to see that there is a disposition to blame Montreal for its want of interest in that project. Montreal is not open to this charge. When a deputation from Peterborough visited this city, both the Council and Board of Trade passed resolutions favorable to the project. Deputations from the Board of Trade and the City Council visited the districts, and their reports were eminently favorable. It is, therefore, scarcely fair to charge this city with want of interest in the project. The carrying out of it would undoubtedly prove an immense advantage to the trade of Montreal. There is undoubtedly some difference of opinion as to the value of the work as proposed by its advocates. As we understand it, their suggestion is that a canal with from five to six feet on the water sills, passing barges drawing from four to five feet of water, would be amply sufficient to secure a very large proportion of the carrying trade of the West by that route. The tendency recently in transportation has been towards larger barges, and the only objection, therefore, which we have heard urged to this scheme is that in the face of that tendency, it would be unwise to undertake a work which would be insufficient for the object for which it was undertaken. We are quite aware of the argument upon the other side, and it undoubtedly has very great weight. Apart from this feeling, there is no question in the minds of the people of Montreal as to the value of direct inland communication from the Georgian Bay by the Trent to the Bay of Quinte, or from the Georgian Bay down the Ottawa to Montreal, as a means of competing more successfully with the American routes for the transport of the grain of the great North-West."

To the Editor of the Gazette.

DEAR SIR,—I am induced to write you with the view of enlisting the influence of Montreal and your paper in aid of the struggling trade of the Northwest, and the development of the Peninsula of Ontario, lying between the Georgian Bay and the waters of the Bay of Quinte and the St. Lawrence. As a Canadian, and interested in the chief city of Canada—Montreal—I cannot understand the seeming indifference with which your city looks at the efforts being made by New York to concentrate in that city the whole of the North-west business. It has been often showed beyond question that the true and natural outlet for the grain of the Northwest to the sea is by way of the Georgian Bay and the St. Lawrence to Montreal that I do not stop to argue that view of the case. All admit that that route is the true natural outlet. There are various opinions as to the best mode of utilizing the natural position of the country. Some say railways have so far superseded canals; that the construction of the canal would be money thrown away. Now, I have given the subject of transportation and the capabilities of this route from the west, as compared with all other routes, a very great deal of consideration, and have had the best opportunities within the past year of hearing the opinions of western shippers and learning their views and disinterested opinions, and I know that the whole West is alive to the importance of getting a means of access to the sea by a Canadian route, or routes. They see in the projected Trent Valley canal scheme, a powerful regulator, for all time, of the rates on freight eastward. I have met and conversed with the leading men in every city from Chicago to Duluth, and back along the east coast of the State of Michigan, on Lake Huron, and all join in expressing a sincere desire to be relieved from the delays, tolls and losses they suffer under and are put to by shipping via Buffalo and New York. The following extract from the Milwaukee Sentinel is a faint expression of the opinions expressed to me during the past summer, and in a more recent trip through Illinois and Wisconsin this winter:—

"ERIE CANAL TOLLS.—The subject of the taxes on the cargoes of grain which pass through the Erie canal in New York State has from time to time engaged considerable attention. Governor Seymour, in a recent interview on the subject, said:—'Experience in reducing canal tolls goes to show that the good results may be only feebly seen the first year. It may take more time to develop them. In forty years our population will reach 100,000,000. We cannot possibly calculate the magnitude of our domestic commerce at that date; but it is clear to all that the existing routes for trade will not be able to meet its demand. Railroads carry things which have reached their ultimate value, and canals carry things in first stages. I thoroughly agree with Vanderbilt that one of the principal features of the value of canals to the State of New York is their influence in regulating railroad charges. I would enlarge this influence by maintaining and developing the canals." The New York legislature has been engaged the past winter in investigating the matter, but has as yet reached no conclusion. The matter is one that interests shippers of the Northwest in particular, as much of the grain from this locality reaches the seaboard through this route. Mr. Horace C. Smith, a canal-boat owner, and President of the Boat-Owners' Protective Association, at Buffalo, was before the committee, and said that the tax on a load of grain (8,000 bushels) from Buffalo to New York is $92 for tolls, $25 for commissions, $25 to $40 for insurance, $2 to $6 for towing to Albany, besides $3 for towing from Troy to Albany, and $25 down the Hudson to New York, where the wharfage dues of 50 cents per day and the harbourmaster's fee of $1.50 are the last straws on the camel's back. Should most of these items be abolished it will enable shippers of wheat from this port to send grain to foreign ports at rates lower than they now can, and thus open up the way for increased consignments."

It is now, and on many previous occasions heretofore it has been, stated that Montreal is endeavoring to build herself up at the expense of the upper province, Ontario; that her policy is to "grab" all, for the direct improvement of the city, by the expenditure of public monies in Montreal, and that the general good of the country is not suffered to be even considered, let alone thought of as material, when the interests of the rulers of Montreal politics can assert their sway; and that is not confined to one political party. It is not many years since I, with others of the same political feelings, were abused as being under Lower Canada domination, and ruled by Montreal. Now we are left severely alone by Montreal. Will this apathy of Montreal as to her direct interests, which I contend depend on the securing of the grain trade of the West, have a tendency to alienate Upper Canadians or not? The more attractive Montreal is made as a business centre, so much the more will the interests of the business men of the West concentrate there. The possession of large capital, if it is controlled by lazy apathy, will not make Montreal a large city. Montreal banks are taking their capital to Chicago, Boston and New York as well as to other Western cities, and there employing it in developing the business of those cities and assisting the Grand Trunk and Great Western Railways, and the Chicago, St. Paul & Manitoba Railway. They find capital in Canada through British agents to invest to the extent of millions at the rate of five per cent. per annum, while our Government and the great city of Montreal lets a national industry like the Trent Valley Canal lie dead. I say no other country in the world would allow such a great national highway to be passed over from pure want of energy. And if Montreal does not see what she is losing, her short-sightedness can only be equalled by her desire to keep a fifth or sixth rate position among the cities of America.

H.

Peterborough, April 5, 1881.

There has not been very much said upon the subject, for the simple reason that the work is already in good hands. A preliminary survey of the route has been made by Mr. Starke under instructions from the Government, and this year a vote of Parliament has been taken in order to secure a more careful survey of the route and report as to its capabilities. Until that report is made nothing of course can be done. We shall be very glad to give to our friends along the line of the canal, if they think it important to arouse public sentiments more thoroughly as to the importance of the enterprise, the use of our columns for that object. We can assure them that so far as this city is concerned there can be no hesitancy in giving to the project all the aid that the influence of the city can give to it. It is a matter of the greatest consequence to Montreal, becoming more so year after year, that every available route which will shorten the distance and lessen the charges of transportation between the West and the ocean vessel at this port or at Quebec should be opened up. We would undoubtedly be very short-sighted if we treated such an enterprise with indifference far more so if we ventured to throw obstacles in their way. Let our friends along the line of this canal disabuse themselves of the idea that there is want of sympathy in the project in this great commercial metropolis. They can depend, we think, upon the most active assistance when that assistance is really required; but in the meantime, and in view of the fact that the government has already assumed the responsibility of the more thorough explorations, they should remember that there is not much to be done until that report has been made.

CHAFF.

"How did you catch your cough?" asked the doctor of a young man who had applied to him for a remedy.

"Easy enough," was the jubilant answer; "I kissed a gal with a cold in her head."

A Nevada miner with a termagant wife has this to say; "I used to believe that the further I got down into the bowels of the earth the nearer I was to the infernal regions, but now it's just the reverse of that belief, for the nearer to home I come the hotter it is for me."

"You are looking much better than when I saw you last," observed a friend to a Cincinnati man.

"I dare say," was the rejoinder: "I've been feeling better ever since the price of lager here was reduced to three cents a glass."

Nothing is more tantalizing to a gentleman who is paying his addresses to a lady than to see her kissing a pet dog and hear her calling it darling.

"You never treated me so," observed a youth to his beloved.

"No," she replied; "you ain't that sort of a puppy."

They were sitting around the table giving their opinions as to the best time to die. Some said they preferred to die in springtime, others in summer, some in the fall and others in winter, when little Tommy, who had been munching cake and just recovered from stooping to gather some crumbs that had fallen on the floor, interrupted the conversation with the remark: "I want to die when I can get no more pound cake."

The eccentric Grand Duke Constantine, the late Czar's eldest brother, while residing at Warsaw, gave a splendid banquet to a number of the great Polish nobles, to each of whom, at the conclusion of the feast, an ordinary tallow candle was served on a plate. The Grand Duke, who had given orders that an imitation candle, admirably executed in marchpane, should be placed upon his plate, then rose and exclaimed, "Gentlemen, let us eat, to the honor of Russia, the favourite national comestible of my country. Look at me. This is the way to do it." So saying, he threw back his head, opened his mouth wide, and inserted the candle. As he closed his teeth, however, the expression of his countenance suffered an extraordinary change. One of the noblemen sitting in his immediate vicinity had contrived to substitute his own genuine tallow candle for the marchpane imitation set before the Grand Duke, who, not choosing to betray himself to his guests, found himself condemned to chew at least one copious mouthful of good Russian tallow, as an example to all the victims of his jest. The dexterous appropriator of the marchpane candle, while devouring that toothsome article, baffled suspicion by the most hideous visual contortions, expressive of loathing and nausea.

A cough is usually the effort of Nature to expel some morbid matter irritating the air passages of the lungs. It may, however, proceed from an inflamed or irritable condition of the throat, a slight rash or humor often being perceptible. Let the cause be what it may, the remedy should be Hagyards Pectoral Balsam. A purely vegetable Balsamic throat and lung healer. For sale by all dealers in medicine, at 25 cents per bottle. 15-2t

Henery Clement, Almonte, writes:—For a long time I was troubled with Chronic Rheumatism, at times wholly disabled; I tried anything and everything recommended, but failed to get any benefit until a gentleman who was cured of Rheumatism by Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil told me about it. I began using it both internally and externally, and before two bottles were used I was radically cured. We find it a housenold medicine. and for croup, burns, cuts and bruises, it has no equal."

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced a remedy so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates the vital functions, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

The Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad Company

Now offer for Sale over 1,350,000 Acres of the Choicest FARMING and TIMBERED LANDS in the Northern Peninsula of Michigan.

Destined to be the best wheat-producing region in the world. These lands are situated in the counties of Chippewa, Mackinac, Schoolcraft, and Marquette, and embrace many thousands of acres of the best agricultural lands in the State of Michigan.

Among those in the counties of Chippewa and Mackinac are tracts of what are known as the "burnt or cleared" lands. These lands offer many advantages over the prairie lands of the West, as the timber lands adjoining insure a supply of fuel at little cost. The soil being a rich clay loam of great depth. The timber remaining upon the land being generally sufficient for the settlers' use in building and fencing.

These partially cleared lands are now offered at the low price of from $4 to $4.50 per acre, one-fourth cash, and the remainder at purchaser's option, at any time within nine years, with interest payable annually at seven per cent.

Roads are being opened through these lands, and no better opportunity has ever been offered to men of small means to secure a good farm, and intending purchasers will be wise by availing themselves of this chance before prices advance, as the lands are being rapidly taken and settled upon.

The lands more immediately on the line of the Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad, from Straits of Mackinac to Marquette, are more heavily timbered, and are almost universally good agricultural lands, leaving splendid farms when the timber is removed.

The iron and lumber interests of the upper peninsula are of such magnitude as to call for all the charcoal and lumber that the timber and wood upon the lands will produce—this will enable the settler to make good wages while clearing the land.

Lumber Mills and Charcoal Kilns will be built at various points along the line, and Furnaces are now being erected along the line of the road at Point St. Ignace.

The great demand and good prices for labor, both in winter and summer, make these lands particularly desirable as homes for the poor man. The lands adjacent the Railroad are offered at prices from $5 upwards, according to location, value of timber, etc. The lands are at your very door, and are being rapidly settled by Canadians.

Peterborough Examiner

PETEBBOROUGH, APRIL 21, 1881.

THE MIDLAND RAILWAY.

In other column will be found the report of the proceedings at the annual meeting of the bond and shareholders of the Midland Railway Company. It must be gratifying indeed to the President of the road - and we are more than pleased that the President is one of our own foremost citizens—to hear such expressions of confidence as came from all the representative men along the line of the road, but still more to be able to report practical and actual results as to the business of the road, such as were presented in the report read to the meeting. Everybody who reads the EXAMINER knows that when Mr. Cox took charge of the Midland's affairs, he was regarded as leading a forlorn hope. It was conceded that some economy might be introduced, but the most sanguine did not dream of the substantial progress which the road has made, not only pecuniarily, but as a commercial enterprise, since Mr. Cox entered upon its management. Mr. Cox seems to have used a magic wand. It might, perhaps, not be strictly fair to institute comparisons, but it is fresh in the memory of most of our readers, the condition of the Midland Railway as to passengers and freight traffic previous to Mr. Cox's management. It was in public distrust, in bad report and repute, it had no credit, and was looked upon as a bankrupt institution, hastening towards the inevitable results of bankruptcy. With Mr. Cox's assumption of the control of the road, a remarkable change occurred. Matters were placed on an entirely new footing; the credit of the Company was established; the rolling stock was increased; the conveniences for passenger and freight traffic were multiplied to an extent and at an expense which would not appear to promise a surplus for the years operations, and yet, Mr. Cox had the good fortune to come out at the end of his first year with a surplus, which he has succeeded in maintaining and increasing in his subsequent annual reports. The report of this year, as compared with even the last year's favourable report, shows how great are the results which have followed a persistent industry, an indomitable energy, a strong will, and a determination to succeed, all of which forces Mr. Cox brought to bear on the work of the company. The citizens of Peterboro' should feel proud of the possession of such a citizen, and those who are interested in the Railway as bond, stock or shareholders must feel amply satisfied with a statement of their affairs which bears so strongly in their favor. There may be nothing in what is called "luck," but certainly, good luck has followed Mr. Cox in a marvellous manner, in his connection with the Midland Railway Company. It is but just to those associated with Mr. Cox in the management of the road to say that he has been ably assisted by all his officers, and in an especial manner by Mr. White the General Traffic Agent, to whose zeal and industry in the interest of the road no little share of its success is due.

The Changes in the Schools.

The changes in the schools, consequent upon the recent action of the Board of Education, have now gone into effect, and have been so arranged, we understand, as to interefere as little as possible—in fact practically not at all—with the excellent system established by Mr. Jeffers, the late Principal, and we believe there is no reason to doubt that the same excellent results will continue to be attained in the future of the schools. We can only trust that the decision arrived at as to the classification of salaries, according to the work devolving upon the teachers will be made rigidly permanent, and that any future application for increase of salary on the part of a teacher in view of the resolution of the Board will be understood to be equivalent to a resignation. The disturbing effect of such an unsettled condition of affairs as has existed in connection with the schools for a considerable time past cannot but tend to impair the efficiency and retard the progress of the cause of education, and to have demoralizing and undesirable consequences. Permanency of all the arrangements in connection with school government and administration is of most essential importance to the welfare of the schools. We believe the new Principal and the whole staff are determined to work harmoniously together, and to do their utmost to work out the results which those who are responsible for these changes believe can be attained at the reduced standard of expenditure, and we have every confidence that they will succeed.

It is but fair to the retiring Principal, as well as to Miss Panton, to state, that the resolutions of the Board, recognizing the eminent services which they have rendered to the schools will be fully concurred in by all who have been in a position to know anything of the working of the schools during the past few years, and all by valuable services and meritorious conduct, and as for Mr. Jeffers, we are sure, should we retain him as a citizen, in which capacity he has established an enviable reputation, the schools will still continue to receive the benefit of his sympathy and if necessary of his advice.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

TO MR. JEFFERS AND MISS PANTON.

On Tuesday afternoon the Opera House was comfortably filled with the pupils of the school, their parents and friends, on the occasion of a presentation which was to be made to the two retiring teachers. Mr. Stevenson, Chairman of the Board of Education, occupied the chair, and on calling the meeting to order, invited Revs. Messrs. Stobo, Torrance, Starr and Radcliffe, and Mr. Jas. Stratton, I.P.S. to the platform. During his remarks he explained the action of the School Board in their desire to cut down expenses and practise economy, and expressed his satisfaction at the large number present.

Mr. A. B. Ventress and Mr. E. W. Cox, and the Misses Ludgate and Elsworth then, on behalf of the scholars, presented Mr. Jeffers with a beautiful gold watch and Mrs. Jeffers with a silver water cooler, accompanied by the following address:—

J. FRITH JEFFERS, Esq., M.A.

Dear Friend and Fellow Teacher,—Our gathering to-day is associated with an event that brings pain to the heart of all interested.

For the onerous duties you were called upon to perform as Principal of our Schools, we feel persuaded that you were singularly well adapted, and that your work was at all times accomplished with a singleness of aim, perseverance, and oft-times self-sacrifice.

Both the Institute and Public Schools stand at present a monument of your energy, ability, and power of organization, showing in every department that at their head stood a gentleman in the truest and best sense of the term, alike in both official and friendly relations. Your integrity, urbanity, and uniform kindness of manner, have bound you very closely to us. Our sorrow at the thought of separation is profound—for we feel that in you we loose a most reliable and estimable friend, a conscientious fellow-worker, and a pains-taking, devoted teacher.

Your friends, fellow-teachers and pupils desire you to accept these token of regard for yourself and Mrs. Jeffers, who has become endeared to all of us who can claim a personal acquaintance with her. Be assured that our united and hearty good wishes will follow you both in whatever sphere Providence may call upon you to fill.

Signed on behalf of the contributors,
A. B. VENTRESS,
E. W. COX.

Mr. Jeffers, in reply, returned a hearty expression of thanks to the pupils and friends, for the testimonials. He recalled the five years of his residence, the kind words, the cheery smiles and cheerful good-mornings which he had met. To his late pupils he gave them some kindly advice, and wished them to remember their creator in the days of their youth, that God might bless them. He was yet uncertain whether he was going to leave Peterborough. After again thanking them, he sat down.

The presentation of a valuable gold watch, broach and locket to Miss Panton, by the Misses Perry and Davis, and Master J. Douglas, then took place:—

DEAR MISS PANTON,—

It is with deep regret that your pupils and friends in Peterborough, hear of your departure from our midst. As pupils, we shall ever remember with loving gratitude, the constant kindness and Christian forbearance which have marked your intercourse with us, and while we ask your acceptance of these tangible expressions of our esteem, we feel assured that nothing could afford you such genuine gratification as to know that the seeds of mental and moral culture, which you have sown, are bringing forth the grand harvest of true living.

As friends, we shall miss the many pleasant social hours from which was gathered fresh impetus for nobler action, the wise counsel and practical helpfulness always ready for the time of need, in short—the intense admiration of all things which are lovely and of good report, with an ever active interest in the promotion of the same.

Into whatever new field of usefulness you may be called, be assured you take with you our hearty sympathies and sincere desire for your success and happiness.

Signed on behalf of the pupils and friends,
EVA LUDGATE, A. PERRY,
H. JOHNSTON, E. KEELE,
N. MOSCRIP.

Miss. Panton read the following very appropriate reply:—

Dear Friends, Fellow-Teachers and Pupils:

Accept my most sincere and hearty thanks for the very generous way in which you have at this time shown your regard for me.

Seven years ago, I came amongst you an entire stranger, somewhat timorous as to my ability to discharge the duties that I had assumed in your Institute. My official connection with you is now severed—but the friendship I have formed will remain as a tie that shall ever find me in affectionate regard for Peterborough and its best interests. My experience has been varied sometimes all sunshine, sometimes all shade. Both within and without the walls of the school-room pleasant memories are associated.

To our late worthy Principal and my former fellow-teachers, I bid a regretful farewell, for much harmony has prevailed amongst us. My thanks are due to the members of the Board of School Trustees for whatever of courtesy and kindly dealing they have bestowed upon me. I also desire the friends who are not associated with my school-room life, to receive my heart-felt gratitude for the hospitalities and sympathy they have conferred upon me at all times.

Last, but by no means least, for they are dearest to me, do I bid an affectionate farewell to you, my esteemed pupils and ex-pupils. In working amongst you I have always tried to recommend to you that which is pure, lovely; and of good report, and have striven to perform my duties as in the sight of God and not in the sight of men, ever keeping in mind that my influence upon you, direct and indirect, was moulding you for eternity. In many instances I found in you not only studious, patient pupils, but constant, loving friends. Permit me to thank you heartily for all that you have been to me in those seven years of service; for oftimes your sympathy and kindly help have sustained me when otherwise I might have succumbed beneath the burden of daily duty.

I trust as years roll on I shall see you, one after another, filling honorable positions in society, as workmen that need not be ashamed. May your course daily be onward and upward, till at last, each and all of you, receive the heavenly encomium, "Well done thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Mr. Stobo, on being called upon by the Chairman, said he scarcely knew why he had been called upon on this occasion, that his acquaintance with school affairs had been of short duration, and that there were others who had a fuller knowledge of them. As regarded Principal Jeffers, from observation and hearing, he had learned that he had good organization, high moral influence over our youth, and was a good teacher, and naturally thus conducted the school had a high standing. He had no doubt that Principal Jeffers would leave his mark. As regarded Miss Panton, he had learned she was a very worthy person, a woman of fine intellectual powers, and one who exercised fine Christian care over the scholars committed to her. He would impress on trustees and parents and on pupils as future parents, three things, which would beneficially effect all parties, viz.: more considerate treatment of teachers, adequate remuneration, and permenancy of situation. He concluded with kind wishes to the retiring teachers.

Mr. Torrance, in a very short speech, paid a high tribute, both to Mr. Jeffers and Miss Panton.

Mr. Starr then made a humorous speech, touching on the action of the School Board, &c., when the proceedings adjourned with three cheers for the late Principal.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH VESTRY MEETING.—The annual vestry meeting of St. John's Church was held in the chapel of the church on Monday evening last. There was a good attendance of the members of the congregation. The Rector, Rev. J. W. R. Beck, occupied the chair. The following were elected delegates to the Synod:—Dr. George Burnham, jr., A. P. Pousette, Esq., and J. E. Belcher, Esq. Messrs. A. P. Pousette and W. Eastland were elected the People's Warden and the Rector's Warden, respectively. The financial statement of the receipts and expenditure was submitted and referred to the Auditors, Dr. Geo. Burnham and Mr. R. E. Wood, to report at the adjourned meeting, to be held in two weeks.

THE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD.

Although known to be seriously ill and in danger of suffering a fatal relapse at any time. Lord Beaconsfield's slight improvement within the last few days had given rise to the hope that his life would be prolonged at least for a short period. His disease, however, has taken too deep a hold upon him, and was not to be resisted. Since Sunday evening the despatches concerning his condition have been less hopeful, and at 4 a. m. on Tuesday morning the news was sent that the great statesman was no more. During the night the fatal relapse set in, and carried him off within a few hours. His end was peaceful, and he remained conscious till the last.

The Right Honourable Benjamin Disraeli, afterwards Earl of Beaconsfield, was born in London in 1805. His grandfather, Benjamin Disraeli, came to England from Italy in 1748 or 1749. He entered into business in London, and amassed a fortune which enabled him to retire, while yet in middle life, to Enfield, where he laied out an Italian garden, and passed his days in elegant and luxurious ease, until his death in 1817. His grandson, not probably without some "consciousness of inherited qualities and "aptitudes," described him as a man of ardent character, sanguine, courageous, speculative, and fortunate; with a temper which no disappointment could disturb and a brain amid reverses full of resource." His grandmother, on the other hand, is described as a Jewess who hated her race, and detested the very name which her marriage had given her. Her grandson says that she was "so mortified by her social position that she lived until eighty without indulging a tender expression." This was, of course, in the days when Jews were politically ostracised, and only tolerated socially. Their son Isaac, the father of the deceased statesman, was born at Enfield in 1765, and educated at Amsterdam, Leyden. He was a distinguished littrateur and author. Unlike his father, he rather shunned society, and buried himself in his books and literary projects. Unlike his son, he knew little, and cared less, about the politics of the day. He commenced his literary career as a poet and novelist, but afterwards found his forte in literary and antiquarian research, the fruits of which are preserved in many interesting works, of which the best known is probably "Curiosities of Literature." For his last work, "Amenities of Literature," he received from Oxford the degree of D. C. L.

Lord Beaconsfield is one of the exceptional instances in which great literary and political eminence have been attained without the aid of a public school and University course. Like the late John Stuart Mill, his education was private, and carefully superintended by his father. At an age when most other men who have made their mark in public life in Britain were at a University he was with a solicitor seeking preparation for a Government office which his father had obtained for him. He did not take kindly, however, to the drudgery of a desk in a lawyer's office, and soon forsook it for more congenial pursuits.

With Lord Beaconsfield's death the Empire is bereft of one of its two greatest political leaders and statesmen. While he was ever—to his honor be it spoken—a true-hearted friend, and defender of his race and people, he was also one of the most loyal of Englishmen. Any unfavourable judgment in regard to his political morality would be harsh and unjust did it fail to take into account the history of his race, in their long experience of wrong and cruelty at the hands of Christian people. For the present the whole nation must mourn the loss of a great genius and a brilliant politician, leaving it for the historian of the future to assign him his true place on the roll of patriots and statesmen.

HYGIENIC!

Pure Water Essential to Health!

To Insure an Abundant Supply of Nature's Beverage, Pure and Unpolluted, Provide Yourselves with one of

HENRY OWENS'

Boom or Model Pumps.

As the Spring advances, and the Frost-King has to relax his frigid grasp beneath the effulgent rays of his august rival, it is the imperative duty of every householder to thoroughly investigate the sanitary condition of his domestic waterworks.

There is no more fruitful source of disease than impure water, and there are few who give the subject a thought until the doctor's presence in the family brings it painfully home to them. When one takes into consideration the fact that the city of Toronto is, at the present moment, paying out of the civic purse, the sum of $48,000 for improving their water supply, the momentous nature of the question will be more aptly estimated.

To all those who have reason to suppose their water to be unwholesome, we would say:—"Have your Wells CLEANED AND DEEPENED, and preserve your health." To those who may have pumps that work defectively, we would say:—"HAVE A NEW ONE, on the latest improved pattern, and save yourselves from violent out-bursts of temper." To all who may require new pumps, whether from choice or necessity, we would say:—

Buy them Good! Buy them Well Made! Buy them from Reliable Persons! Buy them from the Best Manufacturer! Buy them where you are Sure to get the Best Value for your Money! Buy them from those with whom it will be a Pleasure to do Business! Buy them from Henry Owens!

AND WHY FROM HENRY OWENS? READ AND LEARN!

The result of the recent proceedings in Chancery, testing the validity of the patent for the Cone Pump, is now generally known, but as a few may have been influenced by the garbled reports and puerile misrepresentations of unprincipled hucksters, a proper exposition of the case is indispensable.

Ever since commencing business in Peterborobgh, I have spared neither time nor money, in order to place the very best article in my line at the disposal of my customers. As a proof of my success in this direction I have only to say that EVERY OTHER MAKER IN THE DISTRICT HAS IMITATED ME IN EVERY PARTICULAR, to the best of his ability.

Over eight years ago a patent was issed for the Cone Pump, and I bought from the patentee, at considerable expense to my myself, the sole right for its manufacture and sale in the the Counties of Peterborough and Victoria. Not less than six years ago, several makers commenced, first by stealth, and afterwards openly, to infringe upon my privileges, and during that time I have had as much opposition as if no patent existed, with the additional disadvantage of having to pay out large sums for that privilege.

It is here worthy of remark, that in spite of the difficulties I had to encounter, I have always sold a BETTER ARTICLE AT AS LOW A FIGURE, as any manufacturer in the trade. Mere statements are worth nothing without FACTS to substantiate them, and to corroborate the assertion that I have always manufactured a better article, it is simply necessary to remind the public that I HAVE NEVER FAILED TO CARRY OFF FIRST HONORS wherever I have shown my Pumps, EVEN IN COMPETITION WITH INFRINGEMENTS OF MY OWN PATENT.

The proceedings just closed were instituted by the patentee, in my name, and unless an appeal to the higher courts should reverse the judgement of the one which has just given its decision, there must be something decidedly rotten in the patent laws. It might be interesting to many to know the kind of testimony upon which that decision was arrived at, but the subject is held too utterly in contempt for a thought to be wasted upon it. Suffice itto say that most of those who gave evidence against the patent, were themselves violators of it. One in particular made bimself remarkably conspicuous for his retentive memory, and his minute observation of mechanical improvements at that period of his existence, in which he was doubtlessly "obtaining his sustenance from Nature's founts." As the case now stands, I AM IN A BETTER POSITION THAN EVER BEFORE to supply the public with a first-class article at the very bottom prices. HITHERTO I have successfully and profitably withstood all underhand encroachments and illicit competition; NOW that I am unencumbered with the payment of heavy sums for patent rights, is it not reasonable to suppose that I am more likely than ever to outstrip all competitors?

This progressive age, however, has amply demonstrated the fact that nothing can be so complete in every detail as to preclude the possibility of something better. In this respect the Cone Pump has proved no exception, for as the antiquated Draw-Well was supersceded by the Rope and Windlass; the Rope and Windlass by the Common Pump; the Common Pump by the Swing; and the Swing by the Cone; so now it has in its turn to make way for a more favoured rival, and bow in homage to the superior merits of the

BOOM and MODEL PUMPS

From their introduction until the present time the Cone Pumps have never failed to take first prizes; now the Boom and Model Pumps have stripped them of their laurels, and wherever they have been exhibited have swept everything before them.

THE ABOVE CUT REPRESENTS THE

CONE LIFT PUMP NO. 1,

(LARGE BORE.)

And is warranted to fill a pail with three strokes in shallow wells. This Pump can be so adjusted as to work with ease in wells of any depth, the size of the bore being in proportion to the depth of the well. For wells of more than ordinary depth there is no better, provided that is properly fitted with an Enammeled Iron Cylinder. ☞Can be easily worked with one hand.

This Cut is an apt representation of

NO. 1 FORCE PUMP,

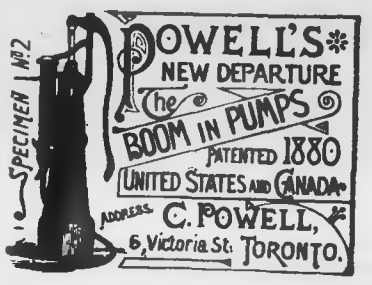
And is capable of filling a pail of water in five strokes, and of throwing a pail of water in the same number of strokes a distance of seventy-five or eighty feet, or fifty feet perpendicularly.

It is adapted to all the uses to which an ordinary pump may be applied, besides being an always-ready Fire Engine. It is allowed to be worth its cost for Washing Buggies alone, and as a Fire Preventative has saved many valuable properties. May be used for Watering Gardens, Courts, &c., Setting Tires, &c., and many other purposes.

THIS CUT IS OF A

CISTERN FORCE PUMP

And is similar to the large Force Pump in every respect, but its size, which is smaller. Six strokes of this Pump will fill a pail, and it will throw to a distance of sixty feet. It is applied for all purposes for which the other might be used, and is considerably lower in price.



The above Pump excels all others in having

Intermittent Packing, Sectional Stock

AND

SATISFACTORY HOSE ATTACHER.

It took First Prize at Toronto, in 1880, First Prize at Port Hope, 1880, and in fact wherever it was shown as a

LIFT, SUCTION AND FORCE PUMP.

It differs from all others in having 1st:—The SECTIONAL STOCK or HEAD, with its many effective modifications and its firm and durable means of holding the attachments.

2nd:—The INTERMITTENT or DETACHABLE PACKING, which is only used in actual forcing, and is UNFREEZEABLE and UNWEARABLE, at all other times, (say 95 per cent. of the service of the pump.

3rd.—The HOSE ATTACHER which is the acme of simplicity and efficiency.

4th.—It can be adjusted from an ordinary Lift Pump to a Force Pump in a FEW SECONDS, and is consequently a FIRST-CLASS LIFT and FORCE PUMP, COMBINED.

IN CONCLUSION I have to thank all my old friends and customers for their liberal support during the time in which I have been in business, and would remind them that having lately extended my business, and considerably increased my manufacturing facilities, I am in a better position than ever to supply their wants. Although I have opened out a branch of my business in Belleville, I wish my customers in Peterborough to understand that the greater part of my time will be devoted to my business here, and their orders shall still be under my personal supervision. All repairs shall be promptly attended to, and letter orders filled with the greatest care.

Samples of the TORONTO REAPERS AND MOWERS have Lately Arrived, and will be Offered for Sale at my Ware-Rooms during the coming Season.

HENRY OWENS,

Corner of Water and Simcoe Streets, Peterborough. Bridge Street, Belleville.

"THE GENTLEMEN, GOD BLESS 'EM!"

At the thirteenth annual dinner of the Sorosis at Delmonico's last week, Miss Kate Field, in response to the toast, "The gentlemen, God bless them," responded as follows:

What could we do, what should we be, without them? Nothing.

Who wollops us and on our ears
Bestows a box that draws forth tears?
Our father.

Who bullies us and calls us names,
Makes life a burden with his games?
Our brother.

Who takes us home from singing school
So sweetly speeds and plays the fool?
Our Cousin.

Who holds our hands in his and kneels
Until we heed his mad appeals?
Our lover.

Who pays the bills and endargoes
The discipline that Candis knows?
Our husband.

Who gives us spinsters good advice,
And takes us out, and are so nice?
Our Bachelors.

Who, all in all are none too good,
For human nature's daily food?
The men, God bless them.

The sentiment was heartily applauded by all the ladies present.

FARM, GARDEN AND HOUSEHOLD.

Home-made Cream Candy.

Confectionery made at home has the advantage of being unadulterated, and the following recipe from an exchange will be welcome to the little ones; One coffee cup of white sugar, one or two tablespoonfuls of water, enough to make it dissolve nicely as it heats. Boil without stirring, in a bright tin pan, until it will crisp in water like molasses candy. Just before it is done put a tablespoonful of vanilla and a quarter of a tablespoonful of cream of tartar. When sufficiently done pour into a buttered pan, and when cool enough to handle work it as you would molasses candy, until it is perfectly white; then stretch and lay on a marble slab, or if you have to use the moulding board, put buttered papers over it, and with a chopping knife, cut it into mouthfuls and set away until it creams, which it will do as it dries out. If it grain before it is done or before you have a chance to pull it, put it back into a pan and pour water on it, and boil it over again.

What need is there in Shoeing?

Many a man will ask himself that question after reading Sir George Cox's article in the "Popular Science Monthly," copied from Fraser's Magazine. The writer argues extremely plausibly that shoes are not only not necessary, but exceedingly harmful. Now, every year I am in the habit of driving my horses barefoot as long as I can, and find that one of the pair can be driven about three weeks, when the horn will be worn into the quick, just at the toes of the fore feet. Then I have him shod forward. His mate will go barefoot all summer, but still, if given too much "road work," will get tender. This tenderness comes on after going on the gravelly roads, and on account of any breaking due to nail holes, but because the horn wears away. Experience will no doubt prove that little half-moon shaped toe-guards, called "toe-clips," are all that is necessary—just to keep the toe from wearing. These ought really to be factory made, and for sale at the hardware stores. Few things are easier to do than to prepare the toe of the hoof—dressing of a proper surface with the rasp—and then fasten on the "clip" or guard with nails. I use this style of shoeing with great satisfaction; and between letting the horses go barefoot and protecting the toes in this way, while the full natural wear and pressure comes upon the sole and frog, get my horses' feet in perfect form during the summer, so that the smith and the shoes and the calks have only the winter months to damage them. As a general rule this is not long enough for much harm to come to the feet.

I have found, moreover, that the steel "Goodenough" shoes, which when worn a little smooth, must be taken off and a new set put on, if kept for summer shoes will wear a long time, and when cut in two will make excellent half-moon shoes or toe clips.

Since reading the article referred to, I am determined, if possible, to harden my horses' feet so that I can use them freely barefooted all summer. The plan therein suggested is to give the horses a rest, barefooted of course, until the nail holes have nearly or quite grown out, and then to use him carefully at first, until the hoof grows hard and strong. Still, I think the result will show that some horses may be used barefooted while others must have some protection to their feet.

How Poultry Raising, Properly Conducted, Pays.

"The Prairie Farmer" says: Ten years ago a woman who lived in a large New England village was left a widow with four children and a little less than $300 in money. Friends, after the fashion that friends have at such times, advised her to "put the children out, and perhaps she could support herself by sewing or teaching;" but, like the plucky New England woman that she was, she made answer:

"My children shall not be separated while I have health and strength to work for them."

She rented a house with a few acres of land adjoining, invested the greater part of the $300 in poultry, feed, and fixtures, and went to work. The friends predicted a speedy failure.

"Did she expect to support a family of five on the profits from a few chickens?"

"Yes, I expect to do just that," she answered. "When I was a girl I always managed the poultry on father's farm, and as I made it pay then, I see no reason why I cannot make it pay now."

"You'll see," said the wise ones. "It's our private opinion that you have thrown away the little money that you had. Five dollars for a rooster!" and eyes were rolled up and heads shook over the "shiftlessness" of the woman who paid "five dollars for a rooster." Last winter I met this woman at a poultry show, and she told me of her success. She had educated her children, paid for her little farm, worth $800, and had $300 in the bank.

Another woman, whose husband fell from a building and was crippled for life, took up poultry raising because it was the only thing she could do at home; that was thirteen years ago, and to-day she owns a fine farm well stocked, has money in bonds and in the bank.

A young woman whose health failed in the close confinement of the school-room went to raising poultry because she was obliged to do something for a living, and as much out-door exercise as possible. In two years her health was firmly re-established, but in the meantime she had found poultry-keeping so pleasant and profitable that she refused to teach again. She has been in the business five years, and is earning a fortune as fast as ever a pair of woman's hands earned one.

Last year the writer made a clear profit of almost $1,000 on a breeding stock of some 200 chickens, ducks and turkeys. I do not publish this to boast of my success, but to show other women what they may do under the most favorable circumstances. The favorable circumstances in my case were a splendid stock of breeding fowls, healthy location, a thorough knowledge of my business in all its branches, and neatness to a first-class market.

Of course, some doubting individuals stand ready to declare that it is impossible to make $5 profit on every adult fowl kept; but if they will stop and consider that I get spring chickens into market during the months of April and May, when they sell readily for $1 each; that I sell ten and twelve pound capons for 30 cents a pound; that I manage to have eggs to sell all winter when I can get from 30 to 35 cents a dozen, and that I sell a few trios of exhibition birds every year, they will see where the big profit comes in.

Now don't stop right here and give up all thoughts of raising chickens just because you cannot get such prices in your locality, but wait until I give you a few hints from my experience.

I have kept poultry in the west, where eggs sold at "stores" for 8 cents a dozen in summer, and poultry sold in the fall for 9 cents a pound, live weight, but I made it pay. We lived on a line of railroad, 200 miles from a city market, but I soon found out all the poultry and eggs from our place went to the city, and I could not for the life of me see why I could not ship such things just as well as the merchants, so I sent a thirty dozen package of fresh eggs to a commission house in the city; they sold rapidly, and there was a call for more. "These small packages of eggs, every one warranted fresh, are just what we want," wrote the commission man. I did some more thinking, and then put on my good clothes and went to the city. Once there it did not take me long to find a grocer who wanted thirty dozen of fresh eggs a week, so I shipped the eggs direct to him, and saved the commissions merchant's profits. In the fall I sold my poultry the same way.

There was no thoroughbred poultry in the vicinity except that in my yards, and when people began to find out that my chickens were superior to the common mongrel fowls they bought a great many eggs for hatching. There was not one pair of any of the improved varieties of ducks in the country. I sent a thousand miles for a pair of Pekins, and within a month after they arrived everybody had the duck fever, and I was overrun with orders before a single egg hatched. I also procured some bronze turkeys, and sold every egg that I could spare and every turkey that I raised, at good prices.

Every woman that goes into poultry raising may not be able to get in these "extras," but every woman who desires to earn money by raising poultry, and goes into the business with a determination to succeed, will be sure to make it pay, even if she sells every egg and every chicken at market prices.

AN AMAZON FROM LEADVILLE.

SKIRMISHING AROUND HARRISTON WITH A REVOLVER—NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH—ONE OF THE QUEEREST CHARACTERS ON RECORD.

HARRISTON, April 11.—A well-dressed woman, giving her name as Margaret M. Hogg, claiming to be a sister of Martin Hogg of this town, arrived here from Leadville, Col., on Thursday last, remaining over night and next day. She undertook to view the town, and in doing so she became so pleased with the place that an occasional drink was partaken of to magnify its beauty until she became rather restive under its affects, and while looking around the market she came in contact with a couple of men, when a conversation took place, which ended in a quarrel. The woman knocked and kicked both men out of time in short order. From this she proceeded to one of the hotels, and while one James Close was trying to make a trade of some kind in the barroom she approached, and bragging of having killed several men in Leadville, she tried her skill on Close. Drawing from her pocket a revolver, she pulled the trigger twice. The pistol missed fire and Close asked the hotel-keeper if it was loaded. He replied "No," that she had pointed it at him several times during the day, and it never went off. When she snapped it again it went off, the ball just grazing the cheek of Close. She then retired, and took the afternoon train, which was about due, and left for Paisley. A message was at once sent to Paisley for her arrest, and she was brought back here on Saturday morning, when she was brought before the Mayor, Mr. Samuel Robertson, and sent down for trial. Next morning, while in charge of the constable, she asked for a few minutes leave, which was granted, and she left, and was not heard of again for some time. The constables went in pursuit of her, finally overhauled her at Clifford, and she will be brought back here this evening, when she will likely be more "closely" looked after. She is a large masculine-looking woman, with plenty of money, and seems to be putting in a good time generally.

DEATH OF REV. DR. PUNSHON.

A telegram from London, England, announces the death, of the Rev. W. M. Punshon, D. D., at Brixton on the 14th, at the age of 57 years. This intelligence will be received with very great regret in Canada, as the Rev. gentleman passed several years in this country, and the people of Peterboro', to whom he was well known, will share in that regret, as they admired and loved the brilliant orator and distinguished Christian Minister.

The Rev. William Morley Punshon was born at Doncaster, England, in 1824, where his father did business as a draper. In 1838 he entered the office of his grandfather, a timber merchant in Hull, where he obtained a position beyond his years, and soon became possessed with a strong desire to study for the ministry. He accordingly zealously strove to qualify himself to fulfill his self-imposed task and commenced his career at Sutherland in 1840, by undertaking the duties of a "local preacher." Four years later, after passing a short term as a probationer at the Wesleyan College, Richmond, he accepted his first pastorage charge in the ministry, at Mardon, in Kent. The report of his success here was not long in reaching the leaders of the Wesleyan connection. At the "Conference" of 1845, he was appointed to the ministry of White Haven, in Cumberland, and although only twenty-one years of age, his reputation was such that people flocked to hear him from all parts. He ministered in various parts of the country, besides visiting the metropolis, where his addresses, both from the pulpit and the platform, attracted considerable attention. In 1868 he left England for Canada, and married his deceased wife's sister, a proceeding which led to his being struck off the "Legal Hundred," by the Wesleyan Conference. The lady with whom Mr. Punshon formed the connection, died in October, 1871. During his residence in Canada, he was five times President of the Canadian Conference. He returned to England in 1873, and in July, 1874, he was elected President of the Wesleyan Conference for the ensuing year. Many of his sermons and lectures, published since his removal to London in 1873, are very popular, especially the lectures on "John Bunyan" and the "Huguenots." Mr. Punshon has also published a small volume of poems.

RESTORATION OF THE HEALTH.

During the past ten years the Great Shoshonees Remedy has faithfully redeemed every promise and guarantee made to the public. Alarming and apparently hopeless cases of Lung Diseases, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Afflictions of the Kidney and Chronic Complaints of every description, including Scrofula and Skin Diseases of lifelong duration, have been permanently removed and eradicated. Those who volunteered their testimony to the efficacy of the Remedy, are not bogus people in unheard-of localities of foreign countries, but respectable citizens of this country, easy of access and open to question, upon whose verbal recommendations we are willing to rest the reputation of the Great Shoshonees Remedy If you are afflicted, do not delay until medicine may be powerless to aid you. No injurious effects can possibly follow the use of these Indian Remedies, as they contain no minerals, by which the fate of the invalid is so often sealed under the form of some temporary sedative or stimulant. These Indian Remedies are widely known and still possess the public confidence, after the lapse of sufficient time to test their efficacy.

The Shoshonees Vegetable Sugar Coated Pills have won for themselves the most favorable reputation of any pill before the public. Their efficacy has been fully proved as a remedy for billiousness, Sick Headache and inactivities of the stomach. Price of the Remedy in pint bottles, $1; Pills, 25 cents a box: Sold by all medicine dealers.

PEOPLE TORMENTED by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are thin, nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will find it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for billious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and untimely decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class commends itself so strongly to nervous invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the dangers which threaten the debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which so many so-called tonics simply are. It so regulates the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the "Quinine Wine of Northrop & Lyman." Sold by all druggists

Vivienne's Crime;

FOR LOVE OF HIM.

CHAPTER XIX.—CONTINUED.

Before the next day was over, all in Thornton knew that young Mrs. Jocelyn had run away. She had gone off with an old sweetheart. She had been jealous of Mr. Jocelyn and had gone off in a temper. She had turned Romanist and and gone into a convent. So the tales spread—one more wild than another—each believed till the next came out.

Thornton was agape for news, and it got it, true or false. But how? That was the question. "One told another," as a woman in the village street explained tersely to Paul Knox. Of course he knew that, but who had been the first to tell? She did not know that.

Eliab and all of the servants in the Manor-house, questioned, would have stoutly denied speaking one word about the matter, and yet it was out, known all over the place, and talked of in every corner.

Ethel, hearing it, could not believe it to be true. She knew—none better—how this woman loved Jocelyn, how whole her faith in him was; and she never gave a moment's heed to these whispers afloat which tempered with both those feelings.

"It cannot be true, father," she said, when the Doctor told her the news she had heard so often that day. It is one of her whims, and in a little while she will come back and explain the cause of her absence."

"She will never explain, Ethel; and I don't expect she will ever come back to Thornton Manor." was Doctor West's reply.

She looked at him curiously. Could it be that he knew of some reasons, hidden but powerful, why Vivienne Thornton should never come back to the house that was her own, to the husband that loved her? But he turned away, going out soon afterwards, and she forgot that faint suspicion thinking of other matters.

Paul Knox, coming home in the early dusk, found Ethel sitting by herself before the parlour fire. Herbert Grant was with him. Paul cried out at once against the darkness.

"I hope, Ethel, you have not grown sentimental, since you sit here in the dark dreaming your dreams?"

She got up at the sound of his voice, and stirred the fire into a blaze to light them to her.

"I was thinking," said Ethel, "and I never heeded how fast the night came on. Ring for lights, will you, Paul?"

She put out her hand to the Rector, standing beside her on the hearth, and he took it, holding it in his for the second during which Paul Knox, with his back to them, rang the bell smartly.

"I detest gloom when there is any one to talk to; indeed I object to it under any circumstances for girls of your age," he said.

He was in high spirits—elate, sarcastic, talkative. Ethel wondered at him. In her heart she thought he was hard and indifferent to the cares of others, and she was nearly telling him so more than once.

Herbert Grant began to speak of the single topic every one that day was talking of in Thornton-on-the-Crags. He had just come from the Manor, where he had been visiting Mrs. Thornton.

"Jocelyn has started off for London. Where he will go next, if he fails to find his wife there, she does not know. He does not know himself. 'I will search till I find her. I will search the world over, but I will bring her back with me,' he said, going away; and that was all he could tell his mother. Such trouble, such fear and amazement I have seldom witnessed as are at the Manor-house to-day."

Tears were thick in Ethel's eyes. Her heart was full of pity and keen regret that such sorrow should have come to him, the man whom she had loved.

"This hot-headed Jocelyn Thornton," said Paul Knox, "is like many a man who has preceded him: he is running against his own interests. Better for him to stay at home. He might not be thankful if he brought her back; but I don't believe she would let him bring her if he found her to-morrow. I believe she would die first."

Ethel, surprised, and a little angry, asked him what he meant. Herbert Grant looked anxious; but easy, nonchalant Paul was in no wise disturbed. Presently he added—

"I mean she is just the kind of woman to stick to her fancy through thick and thin. She wanted to go, or she would have stayed where she was, and her husband would doubtless have found it hard to make her change her mind or to rule her in any way,"

"You don't know her at all, Paul," said Ethel. "She is very fond of her husband; she has always been happy at Thornton Manor; she could not possibly want to leave such a home."

"She has left it, Ethel," replied practical Paul.

"But she will soon come back again. Don't you think so, Mr. Grant?"

"No!" Mr. Grant did not think so.

"You are like all the rest," she said, turning away from him—"ready to think ill of her on the instant. I don't understand it."

As weeks went by, and then months, she grew to understand it still less, for Vivienne did not come back.

Paul Knox stayed still with Doctor West, a guest more than welcomed.

When Christmas came, and still no Vivienne, Mrs. Thornton, drooping daily, gave up hope of her return: only Ethel thought, in her heart, that she could not always stay away. She judged this brilliant Vivienne after a fashion of her own.

"She loves him," she said to herself, thinking the occurrance over, "and her love will bring her back sooner or later, when this wild fancy of her's had died away."

Something like this she told to the mother pining for her son, yearning for the sight of home-faces about her in her last days; and the telling even gave her gleams of hope at times.

Jocelyn was now on the continent, going through the cities one week, and then branching away into odd nooks and out-of-the-way villages the next, never wearying in his search, never succeeding in it.

"I must find her," he wrote; "she is only a delicate woman; she cannot fly before me for ever."

Ethel, constantly at the Manor, read such words as these in his letters, and believed them. She too thought that he must find her. But Spring crept round, Summer came, and then Autumn, but no Jocelyn and no Vivienne—just a year to the day since she went away, like a ghost, from their midst—just a year, and she had never been heard of!

Paul Knox, working hard in London, and making money fast, thought of her often, always with a strange pity in his heart for this beautiful woman, cast in the world alone, with that awful stain on her soul, that awful hunger for human love that might never be satisfied eating away at her heart.

In Thornton village people talked of her with awe and fear. These rough fishermen, these rough fisher wives, had grown to think of her with a sort of terrified loathing.

A whisper had arisen among them, faint at first, and mentioned only to be scouted, that this dainty Vivienne had had a hand in Gilbert Thornton's sudden death, that night three years back, before she was the wife of his brother.

"She brought the mixture from the Doctor's house with her own hands: who knows but she brought the wrong one?" so said one to another. But this view was slow of gaining ground.

Doctor West had been blamed for this so long that he could scarcely be washed white in the popular eye, even though another victim was offered up to the popular odium.

But the story grew. Little by little hints swelled into assertions, fancies into facts, till the name of Vivienne Thornton became a name to be whispered under the breath, and kept out of general gossip.

Herbert Grant knew of this, of course. Then he did for his friend the Doctor what it would scarcely have been prudent to have done before. He spoke in his defence. He told the villagers what they all should have known—how tender a man he was, how kind, how unselfish—one who loved God and his neighbour all his life, whose best days had been spent among them whose best strength had been given for them always, when need was.

So it came about that, towards the close of the year in which Vivienne had disappeared, Doctor West found the old look on the old faces, and things wearing round to what they had been wont to be. This new born kindliness needed no words. He read it plainly enough in the altered looks which met him as he went his way, intent only on following Paul's advice, and fighting it out bravely.

What this change was to him his own heart could fully realise. He had grown sadly wan and old in these months, which might almost have been years, for the care they had brought him. Now the weary look went away bit by bit, and the genial smile that had been quenched so long came back. He looked years younger than he had of late, stately and handsome as ever; but just a tinge of sadness lingered in the kind, gray eyes and round the firm lips.

This last was the pencilling of a mighty finger which death alone might wholly erase; for it is only when the last great calm has touched our faces that the marks of pain smooth out of them forever.

Surely any one living in Thornton then might have learned a useful lesson on the worth of popular opinion. Doctor West did. A shrewd man, not cynical, like Paul Knox, and thoroughly practical, he knew its worth well; and yet all the same, he felt great joy and strong thankfulness to see himself clear once more.

So he told Herbert Grant, sitting in the Rectory parlour, talking over, as was often their wont, the events of the past twelve months.

"It has been a hard period for me," he said; "I did not see how I could bear it at times. I had no faith in your hopes; I had no faith in anything, I think. And when Paul told me he had spoken to Vivienne about Gilbert's death the night we dined there, I was more downcast than ever. I felt certain that he had made a false move and a false move meant ruin. And, later on, when she first went away I had strong fear. I did not see how her absence could clear me from suspicion, yet you see it has. The people who doubted the most seem to have grasped the truth at last by instinct, as it were. I can call it nothing else."

Herbert Grant smiled a pleasant smile, which made him look handsome.

"Not quite by instinct, Doctor. I suspect they were helped on towards the truth a little."

"By whom?"

The Rector, still smiling, hesitated.

"It can do you no harm to tell you now," he said, after a little, "but that was Paul's work. It was done according to a plan of his own invention, and it worked well. A word here, a hint there, he told me, was all that was needed. Long before his visit to you was over, these hints had taken effect. So it has gone on from then to now, after the fashion of the 'three black crows.' I have heard often, but never till now have I really understood how awfully easy a thing it is to rise the shadow of suspicion over a name."

Doctor West, listening, felt his heart thrill. How Paul Knox loved him he had long known, and yet this added proof came almost like a fresh revelation.

"Poor Paul! I don't know the thing he would not do for me. Here was no little risk he ran. Jocelyn Thornton, hearing of this, would have punished him to the utmost."

"So I told him," said the Rector, "and he knew it himself; but that never stopped him. He was bent on clearing you, and he has done it, you will own, where a more cautious man would surely have failed. And now, doctor, I am going, with your permission, to do a very rash thing myself," Herbert Grant added, slowly.

"What is that, Grant?"

"Ask Ethel to be my wife."

He was very grave, stern-looking almost, as he leaned back in his chair, with his eyes fixed on the Doctor—a man who had done battle with this love of his and been beaten, a man who knew all that he was risking on this last venture and yet had the will to risk it, hoping against hope that it might win him the love of this girl who was more to him than he had known himself until very lately.

Dr. West, remembering Paul Knoxs ideas on this point, did not think the Rector's resolve a bad one; he said so.

"I think you have as much chance as any one else—only if you fail, it will be——"

Herbert Grant stopped him there.

"If I fail," he said, "I shall leave Thornton—leave England, probably."

Then Doctor West began to understand what a strong love this was that the quiet Rector had hidden away in his heart all these years—to understand, too, what a rare, true heart it was—how safe and sure a shelter for this darling of his to rest in all her life.

"Then let us hope you may live here till you die, Grant," cried Doctor West, with a touch of his old quaint humour.

That very evening, walking, home from the Manor-house beside Ethel, Herbert Grant told her he loved her and asked her to be his wife.

He was no wordy woer, this man learned in books and skilled in eloquence. But he spoke from a full heart, and the language he used had a pathetic beauty of its own, that brought the tears into the eyes of her who was listening to him.

"Three years ago," he said, "I loved you, but your father told me I need not hope. As things were then, Ethel, I knew that was the truth."

He looked away as he said this from the face that blushed so hotly at his words.

"From then till now, I have been trying to make my heart give up its love for you, but I never could do that. Every day I grew to love you more. Tell me that this is a hopeless love of mine, I will go away."

She had walked beside him through the quiet lane in silence. Her heart was throbbing fast with a strange wild joy that startled her.

Remembering other words that she had listened to with keen delight, she said to herself, in sudden shame, that this fickle love of hers was not worth the winning.

All at once it seemed to her that she was not worthy of the love of this man, whose words made such music in her heart, brought such tears of joy into her eyes as she had never thought to feel in them after all their bitter weeping.

She did love him. There was no doubt of that. She had know it long before that night when he walked beside her, asking so humbly if she "ever could learn to love him a little." But she had not the courage to tell him this; he did not dream it was; and a great pain was in his heart, that increased with every step she took beside him in silence.

Coming out of the dimness of the lane, where the trees had shaded them, the moonlight, clear and cold, fell on her face as he bent to look into it. It was pale and nervous-looking, heavy tears shining on the long lashes that drooped under his gaze. Hope was dead in his heart, and he read in her features nothing but pity for him.

With his hand on the gate, which he held open for her to pass through, he stopped, still looking at her, standing close beside him, with the soft shine of the moonlight touching her curls till they shone like gold.

"Then is it to be good-bye, Ethel?"

"No, no, not good-bye!" she said, holding out both hands to him with a sudden gesture, half of fear, half of love. "I could not bear that?" she cried, with a little sob, as he drew her close to him.

Holding both her hands in his close against his breast, he looked down on her—this fair-faced, golden-haired girl, who had turned to him at last, after all those weary years of doubt and fear, whose love was a thing so precious that he had hardly dared to hope for it, a thing so dear that his life would have been sad, wanting it.

"My love, how could I have borne it? I know now it would almost have killed me to have gone away from you," said the Rector.

The firm lips quivered; the dark eyes were heavy with a mist of tears. This joy of his was great, so deep, so subtle, that it tingled in him like a pain, and touched near to sorrow in its fullness, as all earth's strongest pleasures must.

Going together into the low-roofed parlour, where the doctor sat smoking and reading, Herbert Grant's face told its own tale, and Ethel, slipping away from her father's keen glance, left the two to talk it over together.

When she had gone, the Doctor laid down book and pipe, and faced round to have a good look at his companion.

"There, I see how it is, Grant. You have given up all idea of leaving Thornton-on-the-Crags."

Herbert Grant flushed, and laughed a ringing laugh that had a very pleasant sound in it.

"You are right—unless, indeed,, Ethel should tire of it, and care to live elsewhere."

"Well, I am heartily glad of it. As I told you once before, Grant, I tell you now. There is not a man in England I would as soon give my darling to."

This was Doctor West's opinion of the quiet Rector of Thornton, and Doctor West, as we know, was a shrewd man and a keen observer.

CHAPTER XX.

At length, about Christmas, Jocelyn Thornton came home. Contrary to his promise, he came alone. His mother was very ill, or he would not have come. People seeing him, knew without telling how he had suffered—was still suffering.

Nothing but pity and consideration met him on all sides, but he required neither. He would see no one but his own immediate friends. Even to them he said not a word of the woman whose loss was ageing him more than long years could have done, whose unknown fate was breaking the heart within him. Doctor West and Ethel were the only ones to whom he named her—old friends and tried these, with whom he might talk freely.

"I have been or sent to every place where I fancied she might be. Men used to these matters have been at work, till even they say they are baffled as they never have been before by any one. I myself have gone aside into the most out-of-the-way corners, and yet have found no clue. She has slipped out of her place in the world like a shadow. Thinking it over sometimes, I feel as if the awful mystery of it all will send me mad before long."

Seeing his wan face, blue-lined under the eyes, and haggard, the Doctor felt the same fear.

"If I saw any reason for her flight, I might perhaps grow to be content in time. But there was no reason for it—not one."

Hearing the strong man cry out so in his anguish, the Doctor asked himself, "Would it not be kinder to let him know the truth?" But he could not be the one to tell it. He felt bound by those pleading words in Vivienne's letter, and so he held his peace.

Mrs. Thornton's illness had been more of the mind than of the body. Jocelyn at home with her, she soon grew better. And he wanted to be away again. Others were seeking for Vivienne, his wife, but that did not content him. He panted to aid in the search himself. Every day spent in idleness at home seemed to him a day wrung out of his life an I lost for ever.

To Ethel, the sight of his sorrow, so intense, hopeless, and impatient as it was, brought keen pain. She would have done anything to relieve it; but, like the rest, she was powerless; and so the weeks slipped by.

The first day that Mrs. Thornton was able to walk about in the garden, leaning on her son's arm, Jocelyn told her, as gently as he knew how, that he must leave home again for a time—go away and join the paid seekers for Vivienne once more.

"Oh, Jocelyn? don't leave us. Stay with me a little. The loneliness of this place is killing me. I cannot bear to live here by myself and think over all our troubles."

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes of adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 40c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

DRESS GOODS!

BLACK CASHMERES:—Among the numerous Dress Fabrics, for which we are indebted to the French, there are none more serviceable or so well adapted for all seasons and all occasions, for either house or street wear, as BLACK CASHMERES. We ask a special visit for our Dress Department.

Our Black Cashmeres have made a name for themselves, and for us, and people who are now wearing them, are delighted with their durability, color, weight and finish.

We have great confidence in setting forth the merits of our stock of this favorite fabric, because we believe them to be good, and having confidence are not afraid to recommend them.

BLACK STUFFS:—In Black Goods, other than Cashmeres, we invite special attention to the values offered, as well as to the range from which to select. Black Brilliantines, Black Persian Cords, Black India Crape Cloths, Black Balmoral Crape Cloths, Black Figured Lustres, Black Taffetas, and Italian Cloths.

COLOURED CASHMERES:—In Plain Dress Goods our Colored Cashmeres have met with the ready sale. We offer them in UNION and ALL WOOL, and in all the shades most in demand. There is a beautiful cloth being worn at present, called the "POULE CROISE," an All-Wool French Twill, which will take the place of Cashmeres to a considerable extent this season. It makes a rich and effective suit.

FANCY DRESS GOODS: In Fancy Dresses, Checks are being largely worn, although the greater portion of the goods being sold are of a plain character. We have a very stylish line of the checked goods in Fawn, Grey and TEA DRAB grounds, with a neat silk over-check. Plain DeBeiges, Plain Lustres and Cords. Checked and Spotted Sateens, will make up the bulk of the sales during the coming Spring and Summer. Our stock of the above goods is fully up to former seasons in "tone" and value, and of a wider range.

BUNTINGS:—During the warmer months of the Summer, Buntings will again be the prevailing material. We are showing them in Cream, Pale Blue, Drab and Black, in all-wool goods, both plain and checked.

ARRIVED!—A handsome line of ROBE DRESS GOODS.

N.B.—It is well to remember that at least half of the "effect" of any material is made by a judicious selection of the trimmings. We have Fringes, Silk Cords, Cord and Tassels, Satins, Silks, Braids and Buttons TO MATCH in every instance.

GOOD FRIDAY.—Unusually genial weather favoured us on Good Friday, and advantage of the day was taken for breathing in the fresh air to the fullest extent. Services were held in the Episcopal and Methodist churches, and very fairly attended. Over 200 took advantage of the Firemen's Band excursion to Belleville to see that city, and the Band speak in the highest terms of the hospitality given them by the Belleville Band. The Band and party were welcomed at several points on the trip. During the day large numbers were to be seen riding horseback, which promises to be a fashionable pastime in Peterborough this summer. Easter Sunday was observed in the usual quiet manner, in which the congregations which take cognizance of the great church festival observe it.

PERSONAL.

Thos. Boreland, Esq., of Otonabee, left on Friday last for Kalmazoo, Michigan, for the benefit of his health.

The Rev. T. F. Fotheringham and wife left Norwood on Wednesday morning, for California, for the benefit of their health. We wish them every enjoyment during their sojourn. The Rev. J. Campbell, of Toronto, will officiate during his absence.

The Rev. E. P. Hammond arrived in town yesterday, and is the guest of John Walton, Esq. He addressed a meeting at the George-street Methodist Church in the evening.

The Michigan Daily Morning Democrat says that Mr. Ormiston Dixon is a good ventriloquist, and keeps his audience in constant merriment.

The many friends of Rev. Dr. Dewart, editor of the Christian Guardian, will be sorry to learn that illness, produced by over-mental work, has compelled him to lay aside the pen for a few months. He is to sail for Europe in May, and hopes to return to his post in Autumn.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH.

EASTER SERVICES.

At St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, the services of the Great Festival began with a celebration of Holy Communion, at 8 o'clock, at which 50 persons communicated. The morning service at 11 began as usual, on such a day, by the congregation and choir finging an appropriate hymn—"Jesus Christ is risen to-day." The Incumbent preached from I. Thess., IV., 13, 14, and afterwards again administered the Eucharist to a very large number. At the evening service the Rev. V. Clementi kindly assisted Mr. Bradshaw, and preached an admirable sermon from I. Corinthians, XV., 14. All the services were well attended, and the number of Communicants and amount of offerings were larger than on any preceeding occasion. The Church was beautifully decorated with flowers, which adorned font, chancel, pulpit and altar—testifying the joy of the worshipers for the blessed news of their Saviour's Resurrection. The flowers were the gifts of friends of the church, among others Mrs. Ormond, (who contributed a magnificent Calla Lily and some beautiful Geraniums), Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. J. Burnham, Mrs. H. H. Smith, Mrs. T. B. Clementi, Miss Bryson, Miss Burritt, Miss Mills and Mr. H. Long. Miss Florence Burritt executed a very handsome text for the chancel arch, the sentence being a portion of the Easter Anthem—"As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." Miss Cooper had charge of the task of decoration, and was ably assisted by the Misses Burnet and others. Their work displayed taste, care and ability, and the effect added much to the interest and enjoyment of the Easter services.

ANNUAL EASTER VESTRY MEETING.

The annual vestry meeting took place on Monday evening, there being present the Incumbent, Rev. Mr. Bradshaw, in the chair, John Burnham, M. P., Mayor Smith, Dr. H. C. Burritt, Mr. H. T. Strickland, Dr. W. H. Burritt, James Campbell, H. O. Canning, H. C. Rogers, W. Friend, and others. The reports read were such as ought to give every satisfaction to the congregation, and we should have pleasure in giving them, but want of space compels us to leave this over till next issue. Below will be found the resolutions passed at the meeting:—

Moved by Mr. J. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Strickland,—That the S. S. Superintendent's report, as read, be adopted.

Moved by Mr. Smith, seconded by Dr. Burritt,—That H. C. Strickland, Esq., be appointed people's Churchwarden for the current year.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Burnham, seconded by Dr. Burritt,—That Messrs. H. O. Canning and J. Z Rogers be Auditors for the current year.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Strickland, seconded by Mr. Smith,—That the report of the Parsonage Building Committee be adopted.—Carried.

Moved by Dr. H. C. Burritt, seconded by Mr. Campbell,—That the Parsonage Building Committee be authorized to incur the further expenditure mentioned in their report.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Canning,—That a Special Committee to consider the question of retaining St. Mark's in connection with this parish, and other matters referred to in the Incumbent's report, be appointed, such Committee to consist of Messrs. Smith, Burnham, H. C. Burritt, Strickland, W. H. Burritt, Jas. Campbell and Hon. R. Hamilton, to report at a future meeting.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Burnham, seconded by Dr. H. C. Burritt,—That the thanks of this congregation are due and hereby tendered to the Rev. Mr. Clementi for his kindness in taking the Incumbent's duties while he was absent in England, and that the Churchwardens be requested to communicate this resolution to Mr. Clementi.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Canning,—That the thanks of this vestry are due and hereby tendered to the Parochial Association for their handsome contribution to the funds of the Church, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Association.—Carried.

Moved by Dr. H. C. Burritt, seconded by Mr. J. Campbell,—That the thanks of the vestry are due and are hereby tendered to the Churchwardens for their laborious efforts in connection with the Church during the year.—Carried.

ORGAN RECITAL.

Tuesday evening St. Luke's Church was crowded to its utmost capacity, the occasion being what we hope we may now look upon as likely occur every year—the Organ Recital at Easter. The Musical Committee on this occasion procured the services of Miss Emma Martin, of Hamilton, whose ability as a vocalist, though hitherto unknown here, is firmly established in the Province. Miss Martin rendered four difficult solos extremely well, the last being the gem of the evening, and displaying her unusual powers to perfection. Her voice is highly cultivated, strong, clear, flexible and of great compass. Her articulation especially is most distinct, and her appearance and manner are very pleasing. The large chorus under the able leadership of Mr. F. W. Millar showed evidence of careful training, and rendered the anthems selected with good taste and skill. Miss Stratton and the Misses Johnston sang Mendelssohn's "Hear, O hear my Prayer," remarkably well, while the quartette, "La Carita," by Rossini, taken by male voices, met with much approval, and was rendered with good effect and power. Mr. T. Brown sang a solo in his usual pleasing style. Lovers of music must have been highly pleased with the whole programme, which was very judiciously made out. We omitted to mention that Messrs. Heathfield and Hallett presided by turns at the organ. Admission was by invitation, and a collection was taken up between the parts to defray expenses, the surplus going to the Parsonage Fund. The names of the chorus are as follows:—Sopranos—Mrs. Bradshaw, and Miss Stratton, Miss Johnston, Miss McNabb, Miss Lech, Miss Rickey and Miss Adams. Altos—Miss Revell, Miss B. Rickey and Miss H. Johnston. Tenors—Messrs. G. Johnston, J. Miller, J. Butcher and J. Lasher. Basses—Messrs. T. Brown, R. Chowen, E. C. Hill, W. Hill, B. Hudson, J. Buller and W. Thompson. The Incumbent, Churchwardens and Musical Committee desire to express their sincere thanks to the local members of the choir and soloists, for their kind assistance; also, to Mr. Hallett as organist, and especially to Mr. F. W. Miller, as Conductor, who devoted much time and attention to the work of preparation.

Mr. W. Long, general agent of the Canadian Mutual Aid Association, Toronto, was in Town on Tuesday arranging for an agent for this company. We believe Mr. Dawson Kennedy, of Otonabee, has received the appointment. See advertisement next week.

The season is at hand when most people require to take such medicine as will cleanse the liver and stomach of the impurities which are not generally discharged by nature alone, but which must be removed, in order that those organs may perform their functions thoroughly. The most successful agents in such work are often the simplest, and in Warner's Blood Purifier are combined the three qualities of Simplicity, Safety and Success. A course of this valuable medicine just at this time of the year, has the desirable and certain effect of gradually but thoroughly purging and afterward regulating the stomach, liver and bowels and of cleansing the blood, and in this lies the grand secret of the enjoyment of health.

Thorley Horse & Cattle Food.

The best in the world. Has been fed in England HALF A CENTURY. Is the only "Food" patronized by "ONTARIO AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE," Guelph, where it is largely fed. All the FIRST PRIZE fat animals at "Canada's Great Fair," Toronto, and "Provincial Fair," Hamilton, were fed on Thorley Cattle Food. The best importers and stock breeders in Canada now feed it in large quantities.

For horses, milch cows, cattle fattening, pigs and poultry, it stands unrivalled.

SEEDS

ORMOND & WALSH

Are now fully prepared with their Spring supply of newly imported

Field, Garden and Flower Seeds.

Purchasers of Seeds must now be convinced of the disappointment experienced in buying seeds from boxes or packets already put up and placed in stores on commission, and in many instances transferred from place to place for years, before being sold; the disappointment experienced, not only from their non-vegetative power, but from the small quantity contained in each paper. To prevent these disappointments, Messrs. Ormond & Walsh sell the whole of their Seeds by weight, at a fair and moderate price, with a guarantee of their Freshness & Vegetative Power.

Special care has been bestowed in the selection of Flower Seeds, Stocks, Asters, Balsams, Phlox Drummondi, Larkspurs and Portulacca, have been received in the original packages, as imported. Other kinds in great variety.

The conference of Socialists called at London for the end of April has been abandoned, to await the course of political events in Russia and Germany. If the Socialist Conference at Zurich is prohibited, an international conference will probably be summoned at New York.

Lord Beaconsfield in death is more popular than when alive. The workingmen have sent floral wreaths from all parts of the country, even from Scotland, Manchester, and Birmingham, where a year ago his policy was utterly condemned and his candidates mown down by sweeping majorities.

Mr. Bradlaugh on Tuesday attempted to take the oath in the House of Commons, but was prevented on a motion proposed by Sir Stafford Northcote, and passed by a majority of 208 to 175. The debate was an excited one. Mr. Bradlaugh refused to leave the House when ordered to by the Speaker, and was removed by the Sergeant-at-Arms.

Peter Kieffer, Buffalo, says:—"I was badly bitten by a horse a few days ago, and was induced by a friend who witnessed the occurrence to try Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. It relieved the pain almost immediately, and in four days the wound was completely healed. Nothing can be better for fresh wounds."

A general feeling of dissatisfaction exists on the isthmus of Panama with regard to the canal people. The employes are compelled to take board from the Company, and, in order to get anything fit to eat, are charged a high price. Even then the food is often too little to satisfy, and the unfortunate employes are compelled to procure more on credit. For this most outrageous prices are demanded. Many are largely in debt to the Company, and the commissary department seems to be managed so as to secure the labour of the employe for nothing.

A French column, under Logerot, entered Tunisian territory without opposition, and encamped between the frontier and Kef. Two French men-of-war remain at a distance from the shore at Tabarca. All is quiet on frontier. The excitement in Tunis is rapidly diminishing. Considerable reinforcements have joined the commander of the Bey's troops, who occupy the whole of the Kroumir district. Garibaldi thinks that French preponderance in Tunis would be a permanent danger to Italian interests.

TO PUBLIC SPEAKERS.—Public speakers and singers who would possess a clear voice, freedom from hoarseness and sore throat, should use Hagyard's Pectoral balsam, a safe, pleasant and certain healer for the throat and lungs; it speedily breaks up a cold and cures all pulmonary complaints, that so often lead to incurable Consumption. 17-2t

The attention of the Spanish Government has been called to a confidential circular sent in 1880 by the Canovas Cabinet, ordering the Cuban authorities to conceal from the negroes on the plantations the law and the regulations of the Emancipation Act. Consequently, the slaves for months were ignorant of their new position, and on many plantations have not been paid the small salary fixed by the law. In many districts no committees for the protection of the negroes have been formed, as the law enacts, and the blacks get no reddress against ill treatment. Corporal punishment flourishes, and blacks are bought and sold under the new laws. The Minister of Colonies is disposed to correct these abuses, but the colonial authorities and planters offer resistance on the pretext that they fear a black agitation.

THE PROTESTANT HOME.

The Managing Committee of the Peterborough Protestant Home held their annual meeting on Tuesday. The Secretary read the annual report for 1880, as follows:—

In again coming before the public with their annual report, the committee of the P. P. Home would thankfully acknowledge the goodness of God in sparing so many of those under their care and for the continued good health of the inmates.

There are at present in the Home twelve persons. Three are old. One old woman who is blind and delicate, has been nearly fifteen years in the Home. Of the two old men for whom the Town Council pay, one is paralysed and bedridden; the other attends upon him. Another man was sent from one of the back townships, helpless from a wound in his leg, and is only now able to rise from his bed. There are also six children, ten years and under. The other inmates are the Matron and a lad who has lived here for years but is now paying a small sum for his board from his earnings. Seven persons were admitted and six left during the year; there were no deaths. Fifty families have been assisted with food and clothing.

It was found necessary for the comfort of those occupying the Home, that extensive repairs should be made; the roof leaked badly, and the sheds were very much out of order. It was also necessary to fence the yard and renew the drains, all of which was done. An estimate was made that $150 would be required to put all in repair; of this sum only $102 has been received.

Again we regret to say that the usual subscriptions have fallen far short of what is needed for the support of the Home. The trustees of the "Hall Trust" have been unable to give us all they promised, and our committee have to say for the first time in their history, that they began the New Year with a heavy debt. It is sincerely to be hoped that our old friends and former subscribers will not wait to be called upon, but will send in their subscriptions without delay to the Treasurer. The statement below will show how the funds have been expended.

We cannot close our report without again referring to the great loss experienced in the removal from Peterborough of Mrs. Romaine, who, for so many years filled so acceptably the office of President. No one has been found to take her place. Mrs. Clementi was unanimously elected, but could not accept the nomination. The work has fallen principally upon Mrs. Gilmour, and has been most efficiently performed by her, but she is not willing to accept the position permanently.

Thanks are due, to those friends who so kindly visit the inmates, and engage in religious services with them, which services are highly valued; to the medical men who are ever ready when called upon; to the Curling Club, who so often remember them in their games; to the Editors who kindly insert advertisements lists of donations, &c., free of charge; and to the Editors of the Review and the EXAMINER in particular for copies of their papers regularly delivered.

Respectfully submitted,
ISABEL ROGER,

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 28, 1881.

MR. BLAKE ON THE TARIFF.

His Great Speech at the Banquet in Toronto.

The True Attitude of the Liberal Party Toward the Trade Question.

We give below a verbatim report of that portion of Mr. Blake's speech at the banquet in Toronto, in which he dealt with the trade question and defines the attitude of the Liberal party thereto :

THE FINANCIAL QUESTION.

The financial condition of this country is very serious. Our debt in 1879, was almost double what it was in 1871, exclusive of the Pacific railway expenditure; if you add the Pacific railway expenditure and engagements for that expenditure, the debt of 1871 is almost trebled. It is impossible to over-estimate the significance of that fact. Our annual expenditure is rolling up at a very rapid rate of increase. The present finance minister, in the election campaign of 1878, complained at the extravagance of my friend's government. He said that $22,500,000 was all that was required to carry on the affairs of the country, and that $13,000,000 was all that was required from custom duties. The same finance minister is now collecting $17,000,000 from custom duties, and expending about $27,000,000 of money. Have your resources increased proportionately with this expenditure? They have not. They have increased no doubt. We have acquired several provinces, which contribute, in a measure to the revenue, but the Northwest is, and for many years to come, will be, not a source of revenue, but a source of expenditure. But large as our expenditure was, our revenue at this time is increased largely, to an amount beyond what is required for our necessities. Our taxes have been increased between 40 and 50 per cent. That amount is added to the average rate of taxation upon all the goods imported into this country, whether dutiable or free, and it represents an average of increase of from 14 to 20 per cent. Of course you can increase the revenue by increasing the scale of taxation. We propose, however, that the expenditure should be reduced, and that the taxation also should be reduced. We declared that a surplus proposed to be maintained for years, was a mistake, because it was taking out of the pockets of the people more money than was required for the public service. We believe that it was provocative of great extravagance on the part of the governing bodies, and was a great temptation to propose an expenditure up to the limits of that surplus—that there was danger of engagements of a somewhat permanent character being entered into on the strength of a fluctuating and perhaps terminating surplus, to be fulfilled after that surplus had vanished. They, however, said that there was no danger whatever. They repeated their phrases of 1873, when a ten years' budget was made for us, when they told us what the revenue of this country was going to be, altogether blind to the circumstance that there are tides and floods of prosperity and adversity, and that it is impossible to count upon a continuance of either. Well, they say that the revival to which you have alluded is to be attributed to the tariff. Well, there was a depression in free trade in England, in protective United States, and in Canada with our mixed system; there was also a revival in these three countries, and it was impossible to attribute the revival in these countries to tariff laws. We had produced but little, and we had been on the whole extravagant; we had gone beyond our resources. Other countries had done the same during a feverish period of stimulated activity, and our own extravagance and the extravagance of those other countries combined to produce the depression. The conditions of one country act and react on those of another. The railway, the telegraph, the post-office, and the newspaper are, in spite of tariff laws,

MAKING THE WORLD ONE COMMERCIALLY.

We feel the throb and the pulsation all over the world. In spite of the tariff laws it is coming true in reference to the world physically more and more that which we are told by the poet is coming true of the world in a higher sense, when he says :

"For mankind are one in spirit, and the instinct bears along,
Round the earth's electric circle the swift flash of right or wrong.
Whether conscious or unconscious, yet humanity's vast frame,
Through its ocean-sundered fibres feels a flash of joy or shame.
In the gain or loss of one race all the rest —— have equal claim."

(Cheers.) So it is more and more in the moral relations of mankind, and so it is in our commercial relations. More and more the great fundamental, moral and physical laws are being proved to be true of our whole Northern race, and therefore we experience the difficulties of depressions in other countries, and the benefits of revivals of trade in them. We recover by hard work, by saving and economy, it is true, but we recover also by reason of the recovery elsewhere, and by reason of our great agricultural production. In the products of the forest—lumber, animals and their products, and agricultural produce—we were enabled to supply, through a good harvest, an increased production in response to an active demand at enhanced prices. There was an increased quantity to export and increased value for such exports—and our opponents point to this increased export and say, "There is the result of our fiscal policy. The tariff did it. The tariff has given you an increase in your exports." Well, my friend Mr. Paterson from Brant (cheers) proved that in some thirty or forty articles of domestic manufacture which we had exported there was in the aggregate a very considerable deficiency in the export of last year as compared with 1878. Thus, in the twelve months of 1878-9 we exported of product of the forest, animals and their products, and agricultural produce, within a trifle of 47,000,000 of dollars, while we exported of the same in 1879-80 within a trifle of 57,000,000 of dollars over the preceding twelve months. In the last six months of last year we exported of the same articles 45½ millions, making an aggregate of 102½ millions in the eighteen months, or an increase of probably twenty millions over the exports during the previous eighteen months. There is an increase of exports. There it is you find that which has to a great extent produced the revival of business, and made us feel easier in our circumstances, and yet these articles are not affected by the tariff at all. It cannot be pretended that these are articles protected in any way by the tariff. Take the lumber trade. It is estimated to employ $190,000,000 capital and about 84,000 men, and so largely to maintain some 460,000 people. Take that great industry, and it must be confessed that, so far from it being helped, it is seriously injured by the operations of the tariff. I may here say that assiduous efforts have been made, and I have no doubt they will be continued, to represent the Liberal party as OPPOSED TO MANUFACTURES.

I said in the opera house here in August last, and I wish now to repeat, that I utterly deny that charge. This is preeminently a country of labor. The great divison of property, both real and personal, throughout this country, is owing to some extent to the happy custom which exists amongst us of dividing when we leave this world our property amongst those dear to us, instead of leaving it to the eldest son and making a "family" so called. A great estate does not remain in one hand. Superior talent and good fortune may create wealth, but in a generation or two it is pretty sure to be dispersed again. The common school is also a great leveller, or equalizer of all classes in the communities in which it exists; so also the railway and the steamboat, placing the poor and the rich on equal terms as regards the transport of men and produce. All these things tend to produce and perpetuate to a very large extent a condition of comparative equality. We know there are great inequalities. We know some are rich, and some, unfortunately, are poor; but take Canada as a whole, and it is a country in which there is a wonderful and blessed condition of equality in reference to our possessions. (Hear, hear.) The sooner we get to that condition in which there is enough for all and not too much for any, the happier we shall be as a people. (Hear, hear.) How is it possible that any political party in a country like this in which it is our boast and our pride that we earn our bread by engaging in occupations of one kind or another, should deliberately set itself up as the foe of any legitimate industry?

THE PRINCIPLES OF FREE TRADE

are, in my humble judgment, undeniable. I hope the world will come to them. I desire, as far as I can, to promote those principles. I believe that a voluntary trade is a mutual gain to him that sells and to him that buys, and the very circumstance of its being made is a proof that it suits both parties. I believe we have advantages in our various earth which all ought to take advantage of all over the world. I believe that there are in each land facilities and opportunities for the cheap production of certain articles, and that the best thing for each and for all is that in each country those things which can be most easily and cheaply produced should be produced, and exchanged for those products which could be most easily and cheaply produced in other countries. I believe that this is the most profitable labor, and that to apply ourselves to the most profitable labor, and with that to purchase in the cheapest market, is what you want and what will give us most profit. I believe that each man has a right to as great freedom of exchange for his goods as is consistent with the general public interests. These are the general principles, as I understand them, of free trade. But in dealing with the practical application of these principles to our condition, we must look as I said to my friends in Montreal, at what our circumstances have been, are, and are likely to be—(hear, hear)—and I say to you it is perfectly plain that these considerations are the practical ruling considerations. Now, what are these? In dealing with the tariff

THREE PROPOSITIONS ARE CLEAR:

First of all we have to raise, I am sorry to say, a revenue much larger than I want to see raised with the engagements to which we have been recently committed—engagements requiring us to continue for a considerable number of years raising a very burdensome amount of revenue; secondly, that a very large proportion—almost the whole—of that revenue must be raised by indirect taxation; next, that circumstanced as we are and always have been, a very large portion of that taxation must be levied upon articles which are capable of being produced within the country. No finance minister has ever been found for Canada who was able to propose even an approximate application of the English system of finance as regards customs, that of raising your revenue by levying customs duties upon only two or three articles—(hear, hear)—and we know that no such proposition is likely to be made, at any rate within a time worthy to be considered politically. I see no way to the adoption of any such proposition, circumstanced as we are. I say it will be absolutely necessary to continue in the future as in the past to lay the burden of the tariff upon a very considerable number of articles, in order to raise a revenue at all, and that amongst these will necessarily be a large number of articles which are capable of production within the limits of our own country. (Hear, hear.) What next? Of course it follows, and we know it, that when we do lay a tariff upon an article capable of being produced in the country, a protection is given to domestic industry. That has been our experience ever since there was a tariff in Canada at all; it has been so unceasingly, and it will no doubt cease to be the case. In any readjustment of the tariff which it may be the duty of any political party to undertake, regard must be had to the condition of the country, and to the operation of the tariff as we find it and prove it by the experience which in fact the people of this country determined to buy for themselves, and which for two years longer they are going to have the benefit of. (Hear, hear. I think my political party would be justified in taking any other attitude in regard to that question than an attitude of candid enquiry, of careful inspection and examination, and of full and exhaustive discussion as to the actual bearings and practical operation of the tariff upon the industries of the country. (Cheers.) Now, sir, what should our effort be? Our effort in levying taxes, in my opinion, should be to do the least injustice and inflict the least injury that we can upon the community or any member of the community at large, and to interfere as little as we possibly can with the general prosperity of the people. (Hear, hear.) I believe that our taxes are at present excessive. I believe that some reduction ought to be effected, and I cannot better describe in general terms the direction which that reduction ought, in my opinion, to take, than by referring to the words of supported last session in the House of Commons. That resolution declares that in that reduction "regard should be had to those taxes which bear most unequally on the various parts of the country, because it is essential that taxation should contribute as nearly as possible alike to the common burdens, and next to those which, while most burdensome to the consumer, are, at the same time, least productive of revenue." (Cheers.) Now, when you look at the tariff, when you consider its present operation and forecast its future workings, and find amongst the taxes which it levies those which come within these categories, I say to you, and the position is an impregnable one, that it is those taxes which you ought to look to in the reduction of taxation. Many trades to-day are not helped, but actually hurt by the tariff. For many trades the old tariff was high enough to answer all purposes of protection, and the only practical effect of the new tariff has been to increase the cost of the raw material, to require a large capital in these trades, to impose a higher price on the consumer, or to force them to sell goods at a narrower margin of profit. I could refer to numerous trades in which, according to the practical experience of the practical men who conduct them, the result of the tariff has been no help to them, but to hurt them. In some trades there has been an extravagant degree of protection, and the usual result of exorbitant profits has followed. Take for instance

THE RESOLUTION WHICH THE LIBERAL PARTY

THE CASE OF COTTON.

You hear of dividends of from 30 to 60 per cent. being paid, of stock being wanted, of large amounts being put to rest out of the profits, and of large increases being made to buildings and plant, and all this is done out of the enormous profits which the cotton manufacturers were enabled to obtain by tremendous increases in the tariff. The results follow. It is not in human nature, in a business which presents the inviting prospect of 50 to 60 per cent. profit on capital, to avoid putting more capital into it. Now the poor man's goods are taxed higher relatively than the rich man's by this tariff, and this in my opinion is an objection of a most serious character. (Cheers.) Cotton and woolen goods worn by the poorer classes are taxed very much more than similar articles worn by the rich. The necessaries of life are taxed by this tariff. Our fuel is taxed—(hear, hear)—a necessity alike to every consumer, and a raw material in manufacture, and an essential to most manufacturers. Our bread is taxed, without any benefit to the farmer, except in the case where there is no surplus, and I suppose that none of these advocates of the future North-West will tell you that there will not be flour enough in Canada to feed the Canadians for years to come. Farmers not expecting famine, cannot expect their profits increased by an import duty on foreign wheat. This tax is particularly obnoxious to the inhabitants of the Maritime Provinces. They feel it both on wheat and corn flour. The latter, extensively used there, is taxed 40 cents on the barrel, a heavy duty compared with the tax upon flour.

YOUR SUGAR IS TAXED,

and the results of that have now been made apparent. I shall not detain you now by a calculation which I have made, but I believe that it furnishes indisputable proof that the practical result of the exorbitant protection which is awarded to the sugar refiner—I don't say refiners yet—has been that the people of this country have paid about one million and a quarter dollars more during the last fiscal year than they need have paid under the old tariff for their sugar, including of course that portion which they would have contributed to revenue in excess of the portion now contributed. There are to be more refineries, and the usual results may or may not follow. The usual result where there are many manufacturers is competition, and where there are few combinations. These refiners may combine or they may compete; but there is no security whatever against combination, and the consequent keeping up of the rates to the highest possible points compatible with the preventation of the importation of foreign sugars. The loss to the people of this country in this respect is from $1,250,000 to $1,400,000 a year, far the greater part goes into the pockets of the refiner, and the residue is expended in freighting sugar from a point of distribution to another point of distribution equally inconvenient for the trade of the country. The practical result has been that the trade of the country has been changed. The province of Ontario in 1878 had about 55 per cent. of the sugar trade; in the last fiscal year it had about 15½ per cent., because of a violent legislative provision which distorted the course of trade and prevented it going where it would, in order that sugar might be worked by one House in Montreal. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) Who under these circumstances can say there should not be a re-arrangement of the tariff? (Hear, hear.) Who under these circumstances will say that there have not been grave mistakes and errors, both of policy and judgment, in the formation of that tariff under which the people of this country are laboring, and which ought to be rectified at the earliest possible moment? In that rectification due regard must be paid to the masses of the people—the farmer, the laborer, the factory operative, the fisherman—giving to all these avocations equal rights and justice, allowing them to make the best of their labor with as little restriction on their freedom as is compatible with the general good. Such an object becomes a truly national party; becomes a party founded in its political course on justice, freedom and fair play to all, and a party which believes in the future and a great development for Canada, if only prudence shall rule her destiny; to the party which believes that there is something still to do before our political institutions can be called absolutely perfect; a party which believes we have something to do with the measure of control over our own affairs with reference to the organization of our political institutions; with reference to that sacred chamber some eminent representatives of which are sitting around me (laughter and applause); with reference to our representative machinery, now defective in many respects; not resigning its rightful purpose—that of creating a parliament which shall be the mirror of the people who send their representatives there; a parliament determined to examine the line it should follow on these questions with caution and care, but in a firm and decided spirit of progress. Ours, sir, as Reformers, must be, ought to be, a life of struggle. I for my part hope, whether my day shall be long or short, to always find that there is something to do. As long as there is a political future for me I hope it will be one of progress and struggle. (Applause.) That condition will be one of frequent disappointments, but let not these disappointments damp our ardor. Let us struggle on; still remembering that there is quite time enough to rest; for "the night cometh when no man can work." (Cheers.) I was thinking, Mr. Chairman, this afternoon, when I was contemplating the pleasure of being so near you this evening, of a visit I paid last summer to Plymouth, where I saw engraved in the solid rock the names of the Pilgrim fathers, and amongst them I found your own. It may be part of your good fortune, sir, to trace your lineage to that truly noble stock; but whether that be so or not, the name is honored in that it was borne by a Pilgrim father—recalling the words of the poet, who, speaking of that rock, uses words so expressive of the true aspirations of a Liberal party, when after asking

"Turn those tracks to pass or future
That makes Plymouth Rock sublime?"

He nobly answers:

"New occasions teach new duties,
Times make ancient good uncouth;
They must upward still and onward
Who would keep abreast of truth
See! before us gleams the camp fires,
We ourselves must pilgrims be,
Launch our Mayflowers and steer boldly
Over the desolate waters sea,
Nor attempt the future's portal
With the past's blood-rusty key."

When the hon. gentleman resumed his seat the whole assembly again rose and cheered for several moments.

LAND SALT!
TO FARMERS!

The experience of Canadian Farmers during the last few years corroborates almost without exception the benefits to all grain crops by an early and liberal application of LAND SALT. The immediate effects noticeable are the retention of moisture and a marked stiffening of the straw preventing its lodging; thus enabling the kernel more fully to mature.

These effects were fully brought out at the last meeting of the [illegible] Association held in town on the 12th and 13th of January. Many of the most influential members of the Society testified that they had used Land Salt for several years, and always with good results.

In reply to the question as to which kind of Salt was the best, the testimony of all was emphatically in favor of LIVERPOOL SALT. In fact it was stated that one sack of Liverpool Salt was worth from one and a half to two [illegible]

Liverpool Salt is stronger, it has more vitality, and hence is the most economical to apply. It has been proved to be better than bulk salt, which is the refuse left from making the finer kinds of barrel salt, also: it is acknowledged to go further and give better results.

WE OFFER TO THE FARMERS
Several Thousand Bags Liverpool Salt,
GRAND PLASTER in Barrels.

NOTICE

The Business heretofore carried on by the late firm of JOHN BERTRAM & SON, Engineers, Millwrights and Boiler Makers, Peterborough, Ontario, has this day been dissolved by mutual consent.

The business will be carried on in future by John Bertram, who will pay all liabilities, and who requests an immediate payment of all the outstanding accounts due to the late firm.

JOHN BERTRAM.
ALEX. BERTRAM.

Peterborough, Ont., 1st March, 1881.

Editorial Notes.

THE PRINCESS LOUISE will embark at Liverpool for Canada on May 19th or 20th.

THERE will pass into history as the dying words of Earl Beaconsfield, as they were among the last he uttered: "I would rather live, but I am not afraid to die."

THE REMAINS of the late W. Morley Punshon have been interred in the Lower Norwood Cemetery, on the Surray side of the Thames, with considerable ceremony. The attendance was very large.

A Black List has been printed by the Department of Customs and sent to every Collector in the Dominion. It contains the names of all the United States exporters who have at any time given invoices of goods under value.

AT A MEETING of the London Ministerial Association the other day, the Rev. Mr. Scott said he was decidedly opposed to church socials. He considered them a "wishy-washy jumble, that did a great deal of harm." Peterborough churches won't endorse that.

THE SUIT OF Gen. M. Butt Hewson against Sir John Macdonald has been withdrawn. The amount paid to secure this result is of course a matter of private arrangement between the parties and their counsel, but as the proposition for settlement came from the defendant, it is likely that the "General" got nearly if not all of the $20,000 he asked for his services in promoting the Tory cause in the general election of 1878.

The Provisional Directors of the Ontario Sault Ste. Marie Railway have held their first meeting for organization, Mr. J. D. Edgar being elected Chairman and Mr. Robert Jaffray Secretary-Treasurer. The stock subscribed at the meeting amounted to $250,000, on which the ten per cent. payment was made. This is a good beginning, and shows that the Company mean business. The next meeting will be held on the 10th of May.

GRIP'S LAST pleasantly touches upon a raw spot in a report of an alleged clerical encounter with the great author of the N.P., Sir Leonard, being of course, our amiable and excellent Minister of Finance:—

CLERICAL CANVASSER.—Can I sell you a copy of the new revised edition of the Bible, sir. It is an excellent—

SIR LEONARD (interrupting).—They have left the Book of Exodus in, have'nt they?

C. C.—Certainly, sir, it is all—

SIR LEONARD (with emphasis).—Then I don't want it. I have no confidence in the translators. I don't believe there ever was an Exodus, and I don't want a copy!!

THE INTENTION of Sir John Macdonald to rob Ontario of a portion of her territory is too apparent. His boundary bill shows his hand in the matter. He actually proposes to steal enough land from Ontario, for presentation to Manitoba, to make the latter province larger than the former. The areas in square miles of the different Provinces under the new system proposed, are as follows:—Manitoba, as enlarged, 154,461; Ontario, 109,480; Quebec, 193,355; New Brunswick, 27,000 odd; Nova Scotia, 21,000 odd. Before Manitoba gets the population as well as the territory, the people of Ontario should entrust their interests in the keeping of a friend. Sir John Macdonald never scruples to sacrifice his own Province to buy support elsewhere.

Mr. McMaster is said to be the first Senator who has expressed himself in favor of reforming the Senate. His words at the Blake Banquet were: "In view of "the feeling that exists in the country in "relation to the Senate, he would, be a "very bold man who would attempt to "say much in its defence. It would not "be in good taste for me to disparage that "branch of the legislature to which I be"long; but I may say that, having several "years experience in the old Legislative "Council under the elective system, as well "as in the Senate under the "nominative system; I long ago came to "the conclusion that a great mistake was "made in altering the system, and, if any "amendment is made which will give the "people more control over that body, I "shall support it most cordially." He was loudly cheered for this candid and creditable expression.

MANUFACTURERS of Reapers, Mowers and Threshing Machines prefer "Castorine Machine Oil" to any other. It will outwear Lard, Seal or Elephant, and is guaranteed not to gum. 1-ly

THE GREATEST BLESSING.—A simple, pure, harmless remedy, that cures every time, and prevents disease by keeping the blood pure, stomach regular, kidneys and liver active, is the greatest blessing ever conferred upon man. Hop Bitters is that remedy, and its proprietors are being blessed by thousands who have been cured and saved by it. Will you try it? See another column.—Eagle. 15-3t.

Midland District Notes.

Clipped, Compiled and Condensed from County and other newspaper Correspondents.

Street watering in Oshawa has been contracted for at $600.

The Port Hope Orangemen will celebrate the Twelfth in Toronto.

There are at least 3,000 cords of wood on the shores of Clear and Stony Lakes awaiting shipment to Lakefield.

Mr. A. Cox, Road Master of the Midland Railway, has a gang of men repairing the sheds, at Lakefield for the navigation to begin the wood business.

Mining operations in Madoc are being pushed forward with vigor. About 10,000 tons of iron ore from the hematite mine are awaiting shipment.

The Vanderbilt is being overhauled and will leave port as soon as navigation opens. She will this year run between Lindsay, Sturgeon Point and Bobcaygeon. Captain Frank Crandell will again be in command.

Mr. David Reid of Ops sold to Mr. Wm. Jack a steer weighing 1,700 lbs., at 5c. per lb. live weight. The animal brought $85. This is an excellent figure and should encourage other farmers to raise such stock.

Joseph Rawden of the township of Cramahe has a rather valuable Berkshire sow. On April 1st it presented its owner with a litter of thirteen pigs; on the 2nd of April a second litter of seven; and on the 4th of April a single pig. The twenty-one new arrivals are living.

Mr. Frederick Hawkins, a brakesman on the Midland railway, while coupling cars at the Lindsay station received serious injuries. It seems that while he was in the act of coupling he slipped, when a wheel struck his head, causing an ugly gash of about three inches in lenth. He also sustained slight internal injuries.

At the district meeting of the Canada Methodist church Lindsay, the question of holding a district camp meeting at Sturgeon Point was discussed and it was finally decided to hold one there. This action will necessitate extensive preparation for the accommodation of the large numbers who will visit that lovely retreat on that occasion.

Mr. Alex. Scott, of South Monaghan, was in Port Hope last week, and left his little boy, three years of age, at the residence of Mr. Alfred Dawson. The child was playing with the dog, when the brute turned and bit the child's wrist, then bit off his nose and tore the cheek. The nose was hanging to the cheek, but was placed in position and stitched in its place. Several stitches were put in the cheek.

GENERAL NEWS.

Three ladies are among the candidates for matriculation in medicine, in colleges affiliated with the University of Toronto.

The Scott Act, was defeated in Wentworth county by about 600 majority, with a few polling places to hear from.

Farmers report fall wheat as promising fairly. Rain is, however, needed to set the roots.

"Guard your thoughts very carefully" is a good motto, but very few people have possessions enough of that kind to hire an extra watchman.

TORONTO OIL COMPANY are sole manufacturers of "Castorine Machine Oil." infringements will be prosecuted. 1-ly

As spring opens the defects in our township roads are made apparent, and wide-awake councillors would find it to their advantage to look after them. "A stitch in time," &c.

Now that Mrs. Langtry has lost her money the fashionable world of London begin to find out that she never was a very good-looking woman anyway, and hasn't any style about her at all.

The Canada Temperance Act has been passed in King's county, N. S.; in Halton county by a majority of 87; and in Annapolis, N. S., by a majority of 1,200. It has been defeated in Wentworth County, as in the neighboring City of Hamilton.

It turns out that the $10,000, said to have been offered by Forepaugh, the circus man, for the prettiest woman, is a fraud. The enterprising Forepaugh has, however, managed to secure a good deal of gratuitous advertising by his little scheme.

Mr. Archibald Forbes, who has been lecturing in Winnipeg, was favorably impressed with Manitoba, and left a considerable sum behind for investment. He goes to Australia via San Francisco, and after lecturing there will return to America.

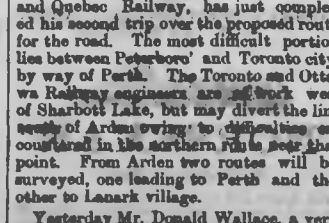
The great World's Fair that was, or is, to come off in New York in 1883 does not seem to "boom" to any appreciable extent. After a considerable effort, a guarantee of a million dollars has been secured; but it has not come out freely, and the lack of interest shown by the New Yorkers is very noticeable.

An exchange says the following remedy for hiccoughs has been given by a gentleman who discovered it by accident and has repeatedly used it with success:—When a fit of hiccoughing seizes you inhale a long breath and hold it as long as possible, repeating the inhalation until the fit ceases. The gentleman referred to, says that he has never had occasion to take more than three long breaths.

Mr. Lumsden, Engineer of the Ontario and Quebec Railway, has just completed his second trip over the proposed route for the road. The most difficult portion lies between Peterboro' and Toronto city, by way of Perth. The Toronto and Ottawa Railway engineers are at work west of Sharbott Lake, but may divert the line nearly of Arden owing to difficulties encountered in the northern route near that point. From Arden two routes will be surveyed, one leading to Perth and the other to Lanark village.

Yesterday Mr. Donald Wallace, a very old and respected resident of Pilkington, with his family, left for Dakota. Some three years ago a son of his, a cousin and other relatives went to Manitoba, and found after enquiry that they could not get land in a desirable locality in that Province for less than $5 and upwards. They accordingly crossed over into Dakota, and bought land in that State lying on the banks of the Red River. These lands they got for settlement duties. The place being a most eligible one they founded a village and got a post office.—Guelph Mercury.

"Our artist" has just produced an allegorical painting, startling in its truth to nature. The time-honored truth which it brings out so forcibly, and endows with immortality, cannot be too firmly impressed upon the minds of the young—and the old:



The man who does not advertise. The man who does advertise.

A TERRIBLE TORNADO.

PEOPLE BLOWN INTO TREE-TOPS, AND BEDDING TAKEN FIVE MILES.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 16.—A terrible storm swept the northern part of Drew County, levelling houses and trees. On Reddy's plantation three houses were blown down, one of which was occupied by Alden Hill (colored). His wife and seven children were torn to pieces. In attempting to save one of the children Hill was hit by a piece of flying timber and killed. Two children were also crushed to death. A colored woman was blown into a tree-top and found dead with a baby in her arms which was uninjured. Two white women are reported dangerously wounded. Others whose names cannot be learned are reported killed and wounded. Some valuable cattle were killed. Bedding and other clothing was carried five miles.

BLAKE PRIME MINISTER.

The Toronto Telegram in speaking of Mr. Blake's reception at Montreal says: "Mr. Blake is a shrewd man and will not be apt to show his hand 'across the walnuts and the wine.' But as to the two great questions of the N. P. and the railway there can be no misapprehension as to the position of the party he leads. Sir John Macdonald has culminated; Mr. Blake is the rising sun. His chances of carrying the next general election are fairly good. Nothing can be said to be certain in this poor world of ours but death and taxes, so that all speculation as to what may or what may not happen in two or three years is mere guess work. At the same time the indications are that the tide is running in Mr. Blake's direction. His future is apparent. Sooner or later he will be Prime Minister of Canada and as he is a man of high moral character, great ability, and liberal ideas, the future can be contemplated with serenity."

OUR SPECIAL EDITION.

WHAT OUR CONTEMPORARIES SAY.

The Peterboro' EXAMINER has the spirit of enterprise in it. Last week 6,000 extra copies, illustrated with comic engravings hitting political themes, were issued gratis to the people of the county.—Herald.

The Peterborough EXAMINER issued an extra spring edition of 6,000 copies of their excellent Journal, from which, if we may judge by their advertising columns, they reaped a pretty good harvest. It was solely in the interest of advertisers that it was issued.—Richmond Liberal.

Our noble contemporary and one of our best exchanges, the Peterborough EXAMINER, has shown great enterprise in issuing 6,000 copies, for spring advertisers, to be circulated free.—Omemee Herald.

The special spring trade number of the Peterborough EXAMINER is a most creditable production. It is illustrated with special engravings by Grip, is well filled with advertisements and it is neatly printed. It reflects the highest credit on the enterprising publisher.—Lindsay Post.

We have before us a copy of the Peterborough EXAMINER'S special edition for spring advertising. Considering the large amount of poster type used, it "presents a neat and handsome appearance." Peterborough for an obscure country village, has reason to be proud of the excellence of its journals in every respect.—Lindsay Warder.

SMITH COUNCIL.

Council met pursuant to adjournment, on April 4th, Deputy-Reeve in the chair. All the members present except the Reeve. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. A By-law to provide for the appropriation and exdenditure of $800 in the general repairs of the roads and bridges in the Township of Smith, and to appoint commissioners to superintend the expenditure of the same, passed its several readings, and was signed and sealed. Moved by Mr. McIlmoyl, seconded by Mr. Garbutt,—That the report of the Committee appointed to examine the culvert on Road Division No.— be adopted, and that the work be proceeded with as ordered by said Committee.—Carried. Moved by Mr. McIlmoyl, seconded by Mr. Myddleton,—That the timber on the 16th concession line, from Buckhorn Lake to the west side of lot 23, be granted to James G. Davies, providing he opens a sleigh road on said line, and that he be allowed three years to remove the same.—Carried. On motion of Mr. Myddleton, seconded by Mr. McIlmoyle, the following payments were ordered:—W. H. Robertson, for printing 150 copies of Auditors' Statement, $8; Mrs. Phelan, for support of James McDermitt, an indignant person, $8; to Mrs. McCanly, $5.50 per month, for the maintenance of Mary Fredinburgh's child, during her imprisonment, unless otherwise ordered, commencing on the 1st of April. To Col. Williams, $7, for timber cut on his land for road purposes. The Council then adjourned till Monday, May 30th, then to meet as Court of Revision on the Assessment Roll.

The many friends—to say nothing of the enemies—of Sir Charles Tupper would like to know whether that great Parliamentarian is getting any better. He went to England for his health—a sea voyage in March is not generally prescribed to cure a lung complaint—and his anxious friends are not sure whether he is in bed or [illegible] candidate Bard. Some way the people do not trust Tupper.—Free Press.

The Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad Company

Now offer for Sale over 1,350,000 Acres of the Choicest FARMING and TIMBERED LANDS in the Northern Peninsula of Michigan.

Destined to be the best wheat-producing region in the world. These lands are situated in the counties of Chippewa, Mackinac, Schoolcraft, and Marquette, and embrace many thousands of acres of the best agricultural lands in the State of Michigan.

Among those in the counties of Chippewa and Mackinac are tracts of what are known as the "burnt or cleared" lands. These lands offer many advantages over the prairie lands of the West, as the timber lands adjoining insure a supply of fuel at little cost. The soil being a rich clay loam of great depth. The timber remaining upon the land being generally sufficient for the settlers' use in building and fencing.

These partially cleared lands are now offered at the low price of from $4 to $6.50 per acre, one-fourth cash, and the remainder at purchaser's option, at any time within nine years, with interest payable annually at seven per cent.

Roads are being opened through these lands, and no better opportunity has ever been offered to men of small means to secure a good farm, and intending purchasers will be wise by availing themselves of this chance before prices advance, as the lands are being rapidly taken and settled upon.

The lands more immediately on the line of the Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad, from Straits of Mackinac to Marquette, are more heavily timbered, and are almost universally good agricultural lands, leaving splendid farms when the timber is removed.

The iron and lumber interests of the upper peninsula are of such magnitude as to call for all the charcoal and lumber that the timber and wood upon the lands will produce—this will enable the settler to make good wages while clearing the land.

Lumber Mills and Charcoal Kilns will be built at various points along the line, and Furnaces are now being erected along the line of the road at Point St. Ignace.

The great demand and good prices for labor, both in winter and summer, make these lands particularly desirable as homes for the poor man. The lands adjacent the Railroad are offered at prices from $5 upwards, according to location, value of timber, etc. The lands are at your very door, and are being rapidly settled by Canadians.

Ayer's

Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

IT is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

Encouragement to Manufacturers.

The oft-recurring question of the advisability or unadvisability of bribing manufacturers to locate at certain points, suitable or unsuitable, was again before the Town Council on Monday evening. The letter of Mr. Hilliard, which has already seen the light through these columns, was formallp presented, and the writer of it was heard before the assembled Board [No pun meant.] in further explanation of his views on the manufacturing industry—or manufactory industry. The most satirical, and at the same time most instructive part of the whole discussion was the care displayed by Mr. Hilliard in reiterating that he was opposed to the granting of bonuses, on principle; and advocated such a thing merely as a matter of necessity. It is a sad sight before the world when anyone, but more particularly one who is assumedly a representative of the people, lets go his firm and enduring hold on principle, in the face of any necessity, however great; whether the need be general or personal. Even the narrow-minded man who clings tenaciously to such consciousness of right and wrong as he may possess, is more to be respected, even when he cannot be admired, than is he who with broader views consents to sacrifice his moral rectitude for any consideration of purse or popularity, or even for the gratification of the better feelings of friendship and love. The stability of the individual, the family, the community and the country depends on unswerving adherence to principle, grounded and rooted in Truth and Reason. He whose principles will not stand these tests is a bigot; but even bigotry is better than the betrayal of the light that is in one. If Mr. Hilliard had announced himself a convert to the idea that bonuses are right, sometimes, he would have appeared to better advantage than he did standing up and publicly advocating the perpetration of a self-acknowledged wrong, and pleading necessity as an excuse for his perversion. A great mind has left us the truth that it is not absolutely necessary that we should live; but that it is needful for the good of the world that we should live right. Even the maintainance of a first position by Peterborough in its rivalry with other towns is not a matter of dire necessity to the progress and permanency of the Dominion; but it does behoove this town, and all others, to maintain such an attitude that they will not be forced to admit wrong-doing, either first or last. Inadvertence is always excusable, but when error is openly entered upon pardon must give full place to punishment: and he who advocates an admittedly wrong course by a community cannot be considered among its true friends.

In the matter of this bonus "boom" it is better to say, once and for all time, "Let us put away the evil thing from our midst, that we may not suffer by even a partial countenancing of it." The theory of doing evil that good may come, is a diabolical one, not generally recognized in Christian communities, such as that of Peterborough will surely consider itself. The proper course, then, is clear and unmistakable.

TOWN COUNCIL.

At the regular meeting of the Town Council, on Monday evening, there were present, Councillors Cahill, Chamberlain, Douglas, Hartly, Kelly, McNaughton, Menzies, Richardson, Rutherford and Yelland, and the Mayor, in the chair.

The Clerk having read the minutes of the last regular session, and of a subsequent special session, they were approved and confirmed.

PETITIONS, ACCOUNTS, &c.

The following documents were laid before the Board:—

A list of persons receiving charities (including remission of taxes) and the amounts paid to each, making a total of $1,174.44—Read and received.

A letter from Poussett & Roger, on behalf of Geo. E. Plummer, applying for the repayment of $100 paid for a transient trader's license, as he has since been assessed and is ready to give security for taxes when the fee is returned.—Referred to the Finance Committee.

A prospectus from Toker & Co., of a proposed directory, and their request that the Council order a number of copies, was also referred to the Finance Committee.

A communication from Thomas Beavis, asking for an investigation into certain alleged sins of omission on the part of Constable Mothee, provoked discussion from Councillors McNaughton, Chamberlain, Yelland, Cahill, Richardson and Patterson, and Mr. Beavis was heard in the matter before the Council.—Referred to the Finance Committee.

The petition of Patrick McNamara and others, for a sidewalk along Park St., from Chamberlanin St., to Lake St., was referred to the proper Committe.

A petition of Geo. Allen and others, for a frontage tax for the watering of a part of Hunter St., between Queen St., and the Iron Bridge, was referred to the Fire, Water and Gas Committee.

A request of John Beavis, asking relief from nine month's taxes on property occupied by him only three months, was referred to the Court of Revision.

An account of F. McCauliff, 75 cents, for watching a fire, was ordered to be paid when certified, as were also accounts from L. Fisher, feather duster, $1.50; Toker & Co, printing, $87.23; Times, printing, $20.50; advertising taxes, $2.90; Hopkins & Montgomery, livery bill, $2.00.

Accounts from the Peterborough Gas Co.:—$10.90 for supply of the Treasurer's office, and $15.30 for that of the Fire Hall, were referred to the Finance Committee; and one from Geo. Patton, $5.50, for supplies and repairs for the Fire Department, certified by the Chief Engineer, was ordered to be paid.

THE TORONTO & OTTAWA RAILWAY BONUS.

The Mayor read an opinion of Mr. Dennistoun to the effect that the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company are not liable to the town for the re-payment of the bonus granted; and further, that Messrs. Scott and Dumble cannot be made personally liable, as the rule is that Directors acting for the Company are not personally liable, unless they so agree.

ENCOURAGMENT TO MANUFACTURERS.

The Mayor apologised for not having formally laid before the Council a communication on the subject of encouraging manufacturers to locate here; but he had caused it to be published through the local press. He then read the letter, which has already appeared in THE EXAMINER.

Mr. Hilliard, who was present, was then heard before the Council. Having become aware of a large increase in the manufactures of the country, he thought in the interests of the town the matter should be discussed to see what could be done in our midst. Many places were willing to offer large bonuses for factories. He was satisfied Peterborough has natural advantages second to none in Canada, and offered every facility to those who would embark in such enterprises. He had never met anything to compare with the water power here. We have a chain of lakes by which thorough control of the water can be maintained, so as to feed it down to manufactories as required. He was aware that there was much grumbling over the result of the Auburn Mills bonus. The town gave barely $2,000, for which it has an establishment employing 114 hands. Even if the full $10,000 had been given there would have been an advantage. He had withdrawn his opposition to the granting of that bonus by allowing his land to be brought into the town. In principle he was not in favor of giving bonuses; but he thought, it a necessity. Other places are doing it, and if we don't do it to we can't get people to come here at all. The village of Coaticooke, with water-power much inferior to Peterboro', gives $20,000 to a cotton manufactory. It had such an establishment, but it was burned. Other places were making bids, and they agreed to give this amount to retain the factory. He would not be in favor of giving a bonus to a company without means; but would say when they had expended at least 75 per cent. of their capital then the matter be taken up. If that were done he thought the town would be justified in offering an inducement. His reason for writing the letter was that he was really surprised at the number of new enterprises began in the Province of Quebec, especially in Montreal, where the water-power was limited to the Lachine Canal. But Peterborough has nine miles which can be filled with machinery, all the way from the town to the village of Lakefield. We have in the limits of this town sufficient to make it a very large city if we go about it. Property-owners had been charged with lack of enterprise and with asking unreasonable terms for their property. But they could not go farther than their capital would allow. He had leased power on easy terms. Since the enlargement by Auburn Mills the town had received an addition of ten to twelve thousand dollars by way of taxation. He thought the town would be wise in offering further inducements.

Coun. Douglas remarked that the Council was always ready to encourage manufactories. The last thing of the kind was in the case of a sewing-machine factory; but the by-law cost $75 or $100 and that was the all that came of it.

Coun. Chamberlain held that if extra taxes were collected on account of the bringing in of Auburn Mills, there was also extra expense. The N. P. was to have done away with all bonuses. It seemed the N. P. needed to be bolstered up by bonuses. The manufacturers were pleased in the light of being a grasping lot, not satisfied with getting water-power at a low rate, but wanting to be bonused to induce them to avail themselves of such an advantage.

Coun. Richardson was surprised that the North Ward paid $1,400 taxes, and was sure it did not cost the town more than $400. Campbellford was going ahead of Peterborough. Mr. Hilliard should have a vote of thanks for bringing this matter before the Council.

Coun. Rutherford referred to the advantages conferred on the town by the Auburn Mills, and approvingly repeated several of Mr. Hilliard's remarks. The town had voted $40,000 to aid the establishment of manufactories here. This was not all exhausted, and the by-law was still intact.

Coun. Yelland held bonuses wrong in principle; and so Mr. Hilliard admitted. All the towns should do away with it. No man had a right to go into any business he was not prepared to pay for himself. Mr. Hilliard had a right to think of Peterborough. There were his water privileges. Too much had been charged for privileges here. That may have been when certain parties left the river and set up steam power. Experience of the N. P. was not pleasant. He believed Canada could manufacture most things as well as the United States without Protection.

Mr. Hilliard announced that to-day power could be rented on reasonable terms. He agreed that the principle of bonusing was wrong. Bearing the market was wrong, too; but it was done. He urged the matter as a necessity.

Coun. Cahill believed the purpose was to find what was for the best interests of the town. Other towns were offering inducements to manufacturers; it will not do for us to fold our hands. If we can make a good bargain we should do so. He would not say a bonus should be offered; but would leave that to a committee and have the matter discussed at a public meeting. He moved,—

That this Council, having heard the communication and the explanations of Geo. Hilliard, Esq., M. P., in reference to encouraging manufactures here, are of the opinion that the superior advantages which this town and vicinity possess for manufacturing purposes should be brought prominently before the public; and with that view that a Committee of Councillors and citizens be appointed to consider the advisability of inducing manufacturers to locate in our midst, such Committee to consist of Councillors Rutherford, Douglas, Yelland, Paterson and Messrs. Cox, Stevenson, Cluxton, Garvey, R. Hall, Hilliard and T. G. Hazlitt, and that they be requested to report any suggestions they may think proper to a public meeting of ratepayers to be called by the Mayor for the purpose.

Councillor Chamberlain presented an amendment declaring against the principle of bonusing; but got no secouder.

Mr. Hilliard, in answer to inquiries, said he had no scheme to propose, but thought the matter might be discussed. He also offered explanations as to why persons had given up water-power for steam.

Coun. Douglas thought from its composition that the proposed Committee would bring in a cut-and-dried proposition, and run the thing. Why not call a public meeting and let the people appoint a committee if they see fit? For his part he wanted no Committee.

Coun. Cahill held that the men on the committee were largely dependent upon the prosperity of the town for their prosperity. If these men met—very likely they never would—it would not cost a cent.

Mr. McNaughton thought the resolution should provide that no expense be incurred.

The resolution being submitted was carried, and Councillor Cahill demanding a record of the vote, such was made, with the following result:—Yeas—Cahill, McNaughton, Douglas, Hartley, Kelly, Taylor, Richardson, Rutherford—8. Nays—Chamberlain, Paterson, Yelland—3.

FINANCE REPORT.

The report of the Finance Committee was received and adopted. It recommends the payment of two accounts of Aaron Comstock, for $12 and $18.50 respectively, one of D. W. Dumble for $10, and the refunding to Thos. Bradburn, of of four years' taxes on property used by the town as a pound.

INJURY TO SIDEWALKS.

On motion of Councillor Cahill, seconded by Councillor Richardson, it was resolved to offer a reward of $25 for information leading to the conviction of any one tearing up or otherwise destroying the sidewalks of the town.

PUBLICATION OF AUDITORS' REPORT.

Councillor Chamberlain moved, and Councillor Richardson seconded, that the Auditor's Report be published in detail, and that the Printing Committee ascertain the lowest rate at which it can be done, and report at next meeting.—Carried.

MORE WORK ON THE STREETS.

On motion of Councillor Rutherford, seconded by Councillor Douglas, it was resolved that the Street Inspector, under the Street and Bridge Committee, straighten and repair the sidewalk on Water Street, between Brock and Murray streets, lay a piece of walk along Donegal street, between Brock and Murray, provide sidewalk and water-table from McDonnell street to the house owned by G. Brown, the sidewalk to be laid out of old plank taken from other parts of the town.

The Council adjourned for four weeks.

Editorial Notes.

MR. GEO. A. COX's successful management of the Midland Railway is evoking general comment from the press.

The examination of Mr. Sandford Fleming, before the Railway Commission, continues from day to day at Ottawa. Perhaps some of his revelations may not be relished by those who appointed the Commission.

A PROPOSAL is under discussion by the companies directly interested for the building of the long-delayed Toronto and Ottawa Railway as an extension of the Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental line, now having its western terminus at the Dominion capital; and of bringing in the Grand Junction road as a branch of the system. We shall see what we shall see.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

How the Sons of "Merrie" England Celebrated the Anniversary of their Patron Saint.

Friday last being St. George's Day, the members of St. George's Society of this town celebrated the anniversary of their Patron Saint by a dinner at the Choate House, in the evening. The company was a very large one, and the spacious dining-room of the hotel was crowded.

Mr. T. Bithray, the energetic Secretary of the Society, read communications from Mr. J. J. Baguley, the President of the Society, and Mr. John Carnegie, President of St. Andrew's Society, regretting their inability to be present.

Mr. E. J. Toker, on motion took the chair, and was supported on his right by Mr. J. E. Belcher and Councillor Chamberlain, and on his left by Mr. Bithray and Dr. Kincaid, the Vice chairs being filled by Messrs. W. E. Sherwood and A. Comstock.

After full justice had been done to the dinner, which it is needless to say was served in the faultless style characteristic of "mine host," Choate, the toasts of "The Queen," "The Prince and Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," "The Governor-General and Lieutenant-Governor," and "The Army, Navy and Volunteers," were given from the chair and honored in the usually loyal and patriotic manner.

Dr. Kincaid, in response to the last named toast, said that he would no doubt be able to respond to the toast as well as his brother officers but for the fact that he did not believe in the system as carried on at present. He thought that too much money was being spent on the volunteers, considering the efficiency of the forces. He well knew that we were a sturdy, self-reliant race, but in the hour of need he was afraid that many of the present volunteers would be found wanting; however, if our Dominion was menaced, he hoped that instead of shouldering a spade and flocing to Dakota, Canadians would be found shouldering rifles and marching to the front. In referring to the recent reverse of the British forces at Laing's Neck, South Africa, he said it was not caused by any cowardice on the part of the forces, but by the act of one man. He thought that the highest positions in the Canadian militia should be filled by Canadians, and that there were plenty of men to be found in Canada who would fill the position of Commander-in-Chief of our forces equally as well as an imported officer from England. He paid a high tribute to General Sir Garnet Wolseley, and drew the attention of those present to the fact that he had received a portion of his education in Canada during the time of the Red River expedition; and wound up by enthusiastically recommending loyalty and attachment to the Queen of Great Britain.

Corporal J. C. Robertson, also briefly responded, returning thanks on behalf of the "Rangers" for the manner in which the toast had been honored. He thought that the evils referred to by Dr. Kincaid would in time be overcome.

The Chairman gave "The Parliament of Canada and the Legislative Assembly of Ontario," which was well received.

In proposing the toast of the evening, the "St. George's Society," the Chairman said that not having any intention of occupying the chair he did not come prepared to make a speech, but from the neat little speech which he, did make, our reporter is of the opinion that it was not necessary for him to make any preparation.

Song, "The Englishman," by Mr. T. Bithray.

The Chairman in proposing "Our Sister Societies and Nationalities," said that although meeting as Englishmen, still they were glad to see their fellow-citizens of other nationalities present. He regretted that the St. Andrew's Society was not represented.

Mr. J. E. Belcher said that although being an Irishman he was not a member of any Society, as up to the present time they had been unable to organize a St. Patrick's Society. He almost felt ashamed to partake of that hospitality of which he had so often been the recipient at the hands of the members of the St. George's Society, as he felt keenly the position he was placed in, in not being able to return the compliment. He however hoped that before long, perhaps before next St. Patrick's Day, they would have a Society formed in Peterborough. As a son of the "Emerald Isle," however, he was proud to reply. Some of the ablest public men in the Dominion were Irishmen. In fact it was well-known that the ablest Governor-Generals we have had were Irishmen. The Scotch were, however, represented at present at Rideau Hall, and he believed, ably represented. He returned thanks for the manner in which the toast had been received, and stated, that although he had been several times at the Annual Dinner of the St. George's Society, yet, he had never seen it so well attended as on the present occasion, a fact which gave him much pleasure, as showing that the Society was in a very healthy condition.

Dr. Kincaid also briefly responded on behalf of the "Gem of the Sea." He felt as strongly as Mr. Belcher did the position in which he was placed year after year, partaking of the cheer of the St. George's Society, without being able, as an Irishman, to return the compliment.

"Our Absent Friends," was next proposed by the Chairman. He said that in looking around the board he missed many familiar faces. While some had left the town to reside in other places, others had been taken from our midst by the hand of Death. He knew that whilst toasting "Our Absent Friends" there would a feeling of deep regret rise up in the breasts of those present for those whom they should never see again on earth.

The Chairman next proposed "Canada, Our Home," and said that while he hoped to see Englishmen always keep the land of their birth green in their memories, he also hoped to see them loyal to the land of their adoption.

Songs by Mr. W. E. Whitehair.

"The Learned Professions," was the next toast, in giving which the Chairman said he regretted they were not honored by the presence of a clergyman; he would therefore include scientific professions, as they were rapidly coming to the front.

Song by the company—"For they are Jolly Good Fellows."

Mr. Geo. Edmison, in returning thanks on behalf of the legal profession, said he was somewhat surprised at being called upon, on account of the well-known bashfulness with which the profession was credited. He paid a fitting tribute to the memory of the late Chief Justice Moss, and referred to the great loss sustained by the country in that gentleman's death. In conclusion he cautioned his hearers to keep out of the clutches of the lawyers, as they were nearly as bad as the doctors.

Dr. Kincaid said his brother physicians in town were so bashful that they would not turn out to reply to the toast, and he having been called on so often was getting tired of it. He referred to the services rendered to the country by the legal profession. It was the lawyers that made our laws, and not, as many persons thought, those statesmen who took the credit upon themselves. He regretted that men like Hon. Edward Blake, a man who would be a credit to any country, were partially forsaking their profession in order to take places in the political field, while less principled men took the foremost position at the bar and on the bench. He also referred to his services as Surgical Inspector in the American Army during the war between the North and South, and said that he might have remained in that country and have been wealthy at the present time, had he desired to lower his profession by so doing. There a blacksmith might hang out his shingle as a "Physician and Accoucher" and make as much money as a regularly licensed M. D.

Mr. J. E. Belcher, in returning thanks on behalf of the scientific professions, said that he did not see the reason why architects and engineers were not on an equal footing with the learned professions, as they had to receive as good an education, and in many cases superior. He instanced his own case, and said he had not only to obtain a University education, but had to work at the bench and in the foundries for years before he was allowed to practice.

"Our Agricultural, Commercial and Manufacturing Interests" was next given, and replied to by Messrs. Thos. Hooper, John Walsh, George Chamberlain, A. Rutherford and John Alford, whose responses we regret space will not permit us to give.

Songs by Mr. Thos. Sabin.

"Our Guests" were next toasted, the members singing "For they are Jolly Good Fellows."

Dr. Kincaid and Mr. J. E. Belcher replied in their usual happy manner.

Songs by Mr. Belcher and others.

"The Ladies" was responded to by Mr. T. Bithray, and we quite believed him when he said he loved them.

The Vice-President, Mr. W. E. Sherwood, proposed "The Press," which was replied to by Messrs. I. H. Brock and J. C. Robertson, of the Times; J. G. Macdonald, of the Review, and S. Jameson, of the EXAMINER.

Dr. Kincaid proposed "Long Life and Prosperity to the Officers and Members of St. George's Society," which was received with enthusiasm by the guests, and elicited a neat speech from Mr. E. J. Toker.

The Chairman gave "Our Municipal Authorities, which brought forth eloquent replies from Mr. E. Pearce, County Clerk and Treasurer, and Councillors Rutherford and Chamberlain.

Messrs. Thos. Sabin, J. C. Robertson, W. Roberts, W. E. Whitehair and Thos. Bithray entertained the company with several songs, while a recitation by Mr. George Chamberlain, "Napoleon and the Sailor Boy," brought forth rounds of applause, and showed that Mr. Chamberlain was an adept at more things than reducing the expenditure in affairs of the town.

"The Host and Hostess," by Mr. Jas. G. Macdonald, brought a suitable acknowledgement from Mr. Choate, after which the National Anthem was sung and a very pleasant evening brought to a close.

SILK.—There is nothing which makes such a satisfactory dress for a lady as does a good silk, well-selected as to shade of ground and trimmings, and neatly made. That more silk is not worn is chiefly owing to difficulties in combining the circumstances of selection from a good, large stock and an abundance of proper accessories to choose from. These difficulties are overcome by the offer of such a stock of black and colored, plain, graised or brocaded silks as are now displayed by Fairweather & Co., who are also offering the goods at such prices as to enable them to defy competition by any other establishment. This is the season when ladies like to select an outfit, and Fairweather's is the place to do it. 18-1t

"THE BIRTH AND DEATH OF WORLDS."

Professor Proctor, who lectured in this town Wednesday evening of last week, under the auspices of the Mechanics' Institute, has the rare faculty of presenting scientific instruction in a way which proves entertaining to the general hearer. He succeded in maintaining the interest of his audience throughout, in his review of planetary existence; and in making his theory of the birth, growth and death of worlds comprehensible to all. The Divine intention in the formation of planets, seems to be for the maintainance of life. But like all lesser matter, a planet not only increases, but decreases, and dies. First it appears as a vapor, then becomes denser and fiery, so that the vapor still surrounding it is prevented from condensing into water. The process of solidification proceeds, and cooling goes on at the same time, until a low enough temperature is arrived at for the deposition of water and the creation of seas and lakes. Animal life becomes possible; but its origin is among the things that are unexplainable. It changes with the various conditions of the planet whereon it may exist, which planet follows still a series of mutations as the ages roll round. Its solid substance, its water and its atmosphere continually succumb to chemical and other effects. In time, it may be millions of years, all the seas may dry and a formerly inhabited planet become uninhabitable. The lecturer showed by stereopticon views the different conditions of different planets. He held the sun to be really the servant of the planets, particularly that of the life-sustaining Earth, and reasoned from this, that some of the larger planets, themselves uninhabitable, such as Saturn and Jupiter, might be regarded as the inferiors of even their own satellites. Mars was shown to have land and water, and the change of white portions of its surface at regular intervals tends to show that it has snow areas like those of the polar regions and higher mountains of the Earth. Fears of disaster from conjunction of the planets were shown to be groundless; as even if the four largest could be brought together—an impossibility—their attractive power would not be equal to one per cent. of that exerted by the moon. The various theories with regard to sun-spots and their effects on the Earth were so opposed to each other as to make none of them tenable. Views of the moon were presented, to show the state of a "dead world." The dry beds of former seas were pointed out, as were the evidences of volcanic disturbances; and the blackness of the shadows on the moon's surface was adduced as an evidence that it has not only no water, but no air by which light can be refracted. It is to be hoped that interesting lectures such as that of Prof. Proctor, may be more frequent in Peterborough than they have hitherto been.

THE exodus of young men from Ontario continues to be a sad proof of the fallacy of Protectionist fancies and the evils of the N. P. It is robbing Canada of her children.

The Belleville Ontario learns that a new mine has been discovered on a farm a little east of Bridgewater, and an asbestos mine near Flinton. The vein of the latter is seven feet wide, and the fibre is said to be the best yet discovered.

It is said that Mr. Wilson, of the Port Hope Guide has served the News with a writ, claiming $5,000 damages for certain comments on conduct when the late suits were in progress. There is also a rumour of another suit against the Guide by a book agent.

All forms of Nervous Debility so commonly prevalent, yield to the vitalizing powers of Burdock Blood Bitters. A young lad twelve years of age, son of W. Robertson, of Port Hope, has been missed since Monday morning. He was last seen on his way to school. The harbour has been dragged, but without finding any trace of the lad.

The Liver, the Skin, the Kidneys and the Bowels, are the natural cleansers of the system; secure their healthy action by nature's grand remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters. The Port Hope Times says:—"Mr. Adam Hall, who has the contract of placing the galvanized iron roof on the Midland Railway Round-house, sent down five men from Peterboro' on Monday morning to complete the job, on which work had to be suspended last fall on account of the cold weather. The work done so far is excellent and has stood the test well, and no doubt the remainder will be done in the same style, and a first-class job in every respect made of the whole roof."

"Where have you been for a week back?" enquired a man of his neighbor; "I have not a weak back," retorted he. "You misunderstand me," remarked his friend; "but if you ever get a weak back try Burdock Blood Bitters. It cures all debility arising from disorded Kidneys, Liver or Blood, and is the best purifying Tonic in the world. All medicine dealers supply Sample Bottles at 10 Cents, Regular Size $1.00. 17-2t

A Real Necessity.—No house should be without a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil, in case of accident. There is no preparation offered humanity that has made so many permanent cures, or releived so much pain and misery. It is called by some the Good Samaritan, by others the Cure-all, and by the afflicted an Angel of Mercy. 17-2t

The new route for the Pacific Railway via the Howe Pass is said to be approximately as follows:—From the summit, which is reached by an easy grade up the Saskatchewan, down the Blackberry River to the Columbia in a south-westerly direction, 40 miles; thence following the right bank of the Columbia River in a north-westerly direction to the boat encampment, 75 miles; thence in a south-westerly direction, 90 miles, to the Big Eddy; thence westward through Eagle Pass, 45 miles, to Shuswup Lake. This is a pretty zigzag route, the great difficulty of which is the crossing of the Columbia River. Mr. Moberly tried to avoid the big bend of the Columbia river by crossing the Selkirk range of mountains, but was unsuccessful in his attempt to discover a practicable route through it.

A FLOWER FOR THE DEAD.

You placed this flower in her hand, you said!
This pure, half-wild spirit heart of mine!
Methinks could she lift her sealed eyes
They would meet your own with a grieved surprise!

She has been your wife for many a year,
When clouds hung low and when skies were clear;
At your feet she laid her life's glad spring,
And her summer's golden blossoming.

Her whole heart went with the hand you took;
If its warm love waned as the years went by,
If it chilled in the grasp of an icy spell,
What was the reason? I pray you tell.

You cannot? I can! and beside her bier
My soul must speak, and your soul must hear;
If she was not all that she might have been,
Here's was the sorrow—your's the sin!

Whose was the fault if she did not grow
Like a rose in summer? Do you know?
Does a lily grow when its leaves are chilled?
Bids it flourish when'er its root is killed?

For a little while, when you first were wed,
Your love was like sunshine round her shed;
Then something crept between you two,
You led where she could not follow you.

With a man's firm tread you went and came;
You lived for wealth, for power, for fame;
Slighting, nothing woman's works and ways,
She kept the narrow path at your side.

Ah, you have hindered her there the while,
What time had you for a kiss, a smile?
You two, with the same roof overhead,
Were as far apart as the sundered dead.

Yes, in your manhood's strength and prime;
She—worn and faded before her time,
'Tis a common story. This tells you why,
You laid in her pallid hands to-day!

When did you give her a fairer thought?
Ah, well! What matter, when all is o'er?
Yet stay a moment; you'll wed again.
I mean no reproach; 'tis the way of men.

But I pray you think, when some fairer face
Shines like a star from her vacated place,
That love will starve if it is not fed,
That true hearts pray for their daily bread.

FARM, GARDEN AND HOUSEHOLD.

Canning Pears.

Prepare the syrup, allowing one-quarter pound of sugar to a quart of fruit and one pint of pure water. While heating, pare the pears, dropping each one as you pare it into a pan of water to prevent discoloring; let the syrup boil fast; place in the fruit carefully and boil until they look clear and pierce easily with a fork. Your cans must be in hot water in the meanwhile; place in the pears and fill to overflowing with the syrup, and seal.

Soap.

The following is a good recipe for making hard soap, also a nice toilet soap:—Take two pounds lime, two pounds sal soda; cook half an hour in two gallons of water, then set off and let settle; turn off the clear water, and cook one and one-half pounds tallow in it till it makes soap, stirring well; add twenty drops each of lavender, citronella and bergamot. If you wish it mottled add Prussian blue and Chinese vermillion, cool in moulds, tea-cups or long tins; if in long tins, when nearly cold cut into squares with a knife.

Potted Meat.

Remove all gristle, hard pieces, and fat from the meat; mince it very fine, and pound it in a mortar with a little butter, some gravy well freed from fat, and a spoonful of Harvey or Worcester sauce; beat it to a smooth paste, seasoning during the process with pounded clove or allspice, mace or grated nutmeg, salt, and a little cayenne; put it in pots, press it close down, and cover with clarified butter, or with marrow fat.

To Cure Neuralgia.

For neuralgia in the face or other acute suffering elsewhere, the following remedy has been tried with good effect:—Cut a thick slice of bread all across the loaf—fresh bread is best. Soak one side for a minute in boiling water, and rapidly sprinkle cayenne pepper over the hot side. Apply while still smoking hot to the painful surface. The bread retains the heat long enough for the cayenne pepper to begin to act, and cayenne does not affect delicate skins as mustard does. It acts as a rubefacient, but not a blister. Another excellent remedy for congestion from cold is to apply a poultice of flax-seed-meal and cayenne pepper. By keeping a bit of oiled silk on the outside of the poultice cloth it will retain both heat and moisture for a long time.

Useful Hints.

Be sure to give the cut portion of large wounds on trees a coating of shellac dissolved in alcohol, or when very large wrap up in moist clay and cow manure.

Canadian farmers often complain that they cannot get good steady hands. One reason is farmers' hours are too long, and men prefer public works in towns. There are in England good farm hands who often work twenty years for one farmer.

Cracks in stoves may be mended as follows:—Mix equal parts of wood ashes and salt into a paste with water and fill in the cracks; it will soon get hard and close the crack with what is known as a rust joint. For cast iron that is not heated, a cement is made of fine filings of cast-iron wetted with a solution of salammoniac and made into a paste with flour of sulphur.

To remove grease stains from wood:—Spread some starch powder over the grease spots, and then go over it with a flat-iron till you have drawn the grease; then scrape with a glass or a proper scraper, and repeat the starch powder and hot iron. Ammonia liquor may be used as a finish, if the starch does not take all the grease out.

The increasing heat of the sun is favorable to window, garden and greenhouse plants, but also to the rapid propagation of insect pests. Fumigate with tobacco, when practicable, and if this cannot be done, syringe with tobacco water at frequent intervals. For the red spider, thorough drenching of the foliage with water is most effectual.

While engaged in pruning your trees keep a lookout for the eggs of the caterpiller, which form a ring round the shoot, usually several hundred in a mass. They may be found by the thickened appearance of the shoot. Cut off the twig and burn it. You will have cleaner trees, aired and healthy, with better appearance and bearing larger, brighter and handsomer fruit.

Quick Growth and Quality.

The shorter the time in which a crop of potatoes can be matured the better the quality will be. It is therefore not advisable to plant them till the weather is moderately warm and the soil in good condition to be worked. The application of suitable manures is desirable not only for increasing the product of a field, but for causing the plants and tubers to mature as fast as possible. Seasons of protracted drouth are very unfavourable for the production of potatoes, as they cause a delay in their growth. The best potatoes found in any market come from regions where the seasons are short and where drouths do not ordinarily occur. The poorest are raised where the climate is very changeable, and where cold rains are succeeded with intense heat and long dryness. The most northern states and territories produce the best potatoes, for the reason that the climate is favorable to a continuous growth. With the exception of the earlier varieties that mature before very hot and dry weather occurs, potatoes are an unprofitable crop in most of the southern states.

Substitute for Bedding Plants.

S. B. Parsons gives a list in a late number of Harper of plants which may be employed for decorating grounds in the place of bedding plants. These brilliant bedding plants, he remarks, give only two months of beauty. Planted in June they rarely cover the ground till August, and much of the bed in the intervening time is bare earth. He would therefore replace them with shrubs and plants which show through the whole season, either low-growers themselves, or such as may be pruned down to a low surface. Among those recommended as substitutes he named Japan quince, Mahonia aquifolia, Daphne cneorum, Euonymus radicans, Retinispora aurea, Biota elegantissima, Aucuba smaena, purple barberry, and the periwinkle and golden yew; some with long continued brilliant flowers, and others with fine, rich foliage. He says that one of the most striking things he has ever seen was a common honeysuckle grown in a flat bed, the edges neatly trimmed and the whole surface covered with flowers. Jackman's clematis and Bignonia grandiflora may be similarly treated.

Killing Canada Thistles.

Can you or any of your readers tell me how to kill six acres of Canada thistles? Will following one year, and plowing four or five times, kill them? Do you know of any one who has tried this remedy, and if so, what has been the result? To this inquiry an agricultural contemporary answers:—We have repeatedly tried this mode and seen it tried by others, and have given the result in former volumes. When done thoroughly, so that every plant has been buried under the soil from the commencement of the work till mid-autumn, it has always been successful. When the ploughing has been occasionally neglected till a few plants get above the surface, it has invariably failed. On heavy soils the remedy is a comparatively easy one; on light soils, the ploughing must be deeper and oftener. Any neglected plants along fences or under stone-heaps will keep the thistles alive. Thoroughly turning the weeds well under just before blossoming, and never allowing one to peep up afterwards, will kill all by the 1st of October, and leave the land in excellent condition for winter wheat. Imperfectly performed, the thistles cannot be killed in one hundred years.

Fix Your Orchards Now.

All persons who have an orchard should go over it carefully now, cutting all twigs off which have the eggs of the tent-caterpillars deposited on them. They can now be detected by careful observation, and for the benefit of those who do not know them we will give a slight description of them. They are of a dark grey color, almost brown, resembling the bark of a tree, and form a ring, generally about half an inch long, which completely circles the twig on which they are deposited, and as the warm weather approaches this grows somewhat larger. All old trees, which have loose bark would be benefited by scraping the body and large limbs with a hoe, being careful not to injure the lower bark; after which they should be washed with lye or diluted soft soap. Young trees which have smooth bark do not need scraping, but the wash would do them good. If you desire heavy crops of fruit you must keep the land rich in which they are planted. They produce better, and are less liable to disease.

CHAFF.

"What's your origin?" is a conundrum that a good many citizens are wrestling with just now.

The first sign of spring is the shriek of the housewife:—"Wipe the mud off your boots before you come in here.—New Haven Register.

"Let me make the ballads of a nation and get them copyrighted, and I don't care who does the legislative stealing!"—Old proverb modernized.

Fashionable belle wants to know what shade will be the most preferable this coming summer. Well, the shade of a big elm tree in the country, but at the seaside the shade of a big umbrella.

Barnum says that a circus man who won't admit orphans free can never hope to go to Heaven.—Free Press. His principal is that orphans have not a pa nor a ma of their own.—Philadelphia Bulletin's fiend.

A medical journal of Munich, says that diphtheria caught by kissing is likely to assume a much severer form than if the disease were contracted or the contagion imparted in some other way. This should be a warning to married men and hired girls.—Chicago Tribune.

"Will the electric light tan?" is the question which is now worrying many lovely young women. We don't know about the electric light, but the material slipper, if properly applied, can tan most effectually.—Puck. The effect is said to be electric when it is applied to a small boy.

"Forget thee?" wrote a young man to his girl—"forget thee! When the earth forgets to revolve, when the stars forget to shine, when the rain forgets to fall, when the flowers forget to bloom; then, and not till then, will I forget thee." Two months after he married a $20,000 widow with sore teeth, and when taxed with fickleness, said he hadn't forgotten his former girl—not at all. He'd know her anywhere.

He enters the city editor's room very mad. "You printed the statement that I was drunk yesterday, cut up rough and made a beast of myself and got run in." "Yes," replied the editor. "You are displeased with the article?" "I am, sir, fearfully displeased with it." "Well, we have to give the news." "Yes, I don't mind your doing that; but by the great stub-tailed bull-dog, sir, I want you to understand that my name is Smyth, with a 'y,' and if you spell it with an 'i' again, I'll wreck your old office! I want a correction published." He got it.

POLITICAL NOTES.

The choice for the leadership of the Conservative party in England is between Lord Salisbury, Lord Cranbrook and Lord Cairns.

The Liberal convention at Cannington selected Mr. Joseph Bigelow of Port Perry as its candidate for North Ontario in the approaching election to the local house. The selection is an excellent one. Mr. Bigelow is a man of long and wide experience in municipal and business affairs.

We hope to find Sir John Macdonald and Sir Charles Tupper in the best of health at the time of the next general election, and that Sir Leonard Tilley has reconsidered his determination to seek the repose of private life. Without these knights at the head of the Conservative hosts in 1883 the Liberal triumph will be robbed of half its charms.—Toronto World.

The Nova Scotia coal miners have struck work. That is very strange. The promoters of the N. P. promised to make the coal miners of Nova Scotia happy, and the coal burners of Ontario have shivered enough to compensate for other people's happiness. Can it be that, though Ontario pays a coal tax, Nova Scotia miners do not get the benefit of it?

The Governor-General of Canada draws $80,000 annually, the same salary the President of the United States is entitled to. But the Canadian official has not one-tenth of the population or the wealth to draw upon that the President has. And the services of the former are not important. He is the fifth wheel to a very small coach.—Chicago Tribune.

The Government has, we learn, imposed a tax of $40 on every bonded warehouse in the Dominion. This gives great offence to merchants, as no such imposition was ever mooted in Parliament, and was never known till the late order was issued.

Canada is discovering by experience what custom house affidavits are worth. She has probably learned enough to agree with the customs office here that protection is the bulwark of perjury.—N. Y. Herald.

USE "CASTORINE MACHINE OIL" for all kinds of machinery. It is also excellent for Harness and Leather, making it water and weather proof. For sale by dealers. 1-1y

GIVEN UP BY DOCTORS.—"Is it possible that Mr. Codfrey is up and at work, and cured by so simple a remedy?"

"I assure it is true that he is entirely cured, and with nothing but Hop Bitters; and only ten days ago his doctors gave him up and said he must die!"

"Well-a-day! That is remarkable! I will go this day and get some for my poor George—I know hops are good."—Salem Post. 15-3t.

NOT THE SLIGHTEST AFFINITY exists between the numberless cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct, itself, and nothing else. It embodies the best results of pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive, decisive results, effectually relieving coughs when the lungs are not tuberculous or hopelessly affected) colds, larnygitis and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure Consumption it is the most reliable means of defence against that dreaded scourge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing emollient action of the cod liver oil upon the inflamed lung mebrane. The phosphorus, lime and soda, in combination with it are all natural components in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of those elements. These the hypophosphites supply, increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tottering human structure with a degree of promptitude as astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both time and experience have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. Prepared by NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto and sold by all druggists.

Vivienne's Crimes;

FOR LOVE OF HIM.

By the Author of "Cleuton Manor," "Mrs. Sheldon's Ambition," &c., &c.

CHAPTER XX.—CONTINUED.

He held the feeble hands tightly in his own; he looked down, not unkindly, into the wet eyes, where the yearning mother-love was kindling, a little pitiful sparkle. He felt for her as much as he could feel for any living creature just then, full as he was of his care for, and Vivienne.

"If you can't bear it, mother, how do you think I should?"

"Oh, Jocelyn! I am an old woman now, and have only you—only one left out of three. I have lost more out of my life than you have. But you have grown selfish, you could not do short for your mother."

She sat down trembling on a garden chair, and put up her hand to her eyes to hide the tears in them. He stood before her, his hands clasped behind him, his face dark, his eyes sullen.

"You could not have lost more than I have. I have lost all in her."

The low voice, deep and solemn, the dire anguish in his face, held her tongue from reproaching him, as she felt inclined to do, for that bitter speech to her, his mother. But after all he was her son, and his pain was her pain, whether she would or no.

"You have done your best. If it were possible to find her, you would have found her before now. I'm sure you have been, or sent, to nearly every town in [illegible] already. What more could you do?"

"What more?" he repeated, grinding the gravel under his heel with fierce energy. "Do you think I can ever rest till I have met her face to face again, living or dead,—my little Vivienne?"

The strong voice faltered, the gray eyes filled with tears. He was talking to himself more than to her. He had half forgotten the patient, dim-eyed old lady, looking at him [illegible] ed before the vehemence of a nature she could not understand.

"When I think over all the streets in one city alone, and over all the houses in each of those streets, and then remember that she might be in one of these ill and dying, while I was going by on the other side, I feel that I never can make a search that will content me."

His mother [illegible] words to comfort him, this strong, [illegible] ent and troubled under the load of a grief that was stronger than he could bear; and so he had his way, as he had ever had it from a boy. He left Thornton in the first week of February, leaving [illegible] for five long months with [illegible] could.

She [illegible] this woman, whose heart, fast rooted in the things of this world, felt them slipping away from her. She would have given much in those days for the glad faith of her husband, who, dying, could yet say, "He doeth all things well." But it was not hers now, when she needed it, any more than it had been hers in the past years, wherein, if she had been asked, she would have said that she did not feel she needed it at all.

Ethel, ever ready to do what she could for Gilbert's mother, lived half her time at the Manor in those days.

This money that had been left her still hung about her like a chain. It lay in the bank as Gilbert had left it, untouched. She had never forgotten the bitterness, the distrust, the nameless things that it had brought upon her. She still remembered how it had changed Mrs. Thornton at the first, though that was long over, she knew; still it was not a pleasant memory. But these things never hindered her from being a comfort to the [illegible] woman, who lived so lonely in the old house, and who clung to her as if she had been a daughter.

Often and often then did Mr. Thornton wish that she had sided with Gilbert, and urged Jocelyn to keep his mouth to the [illegible] while, these [illegible] days she had not thought it to be his wife.

"He would not have been away from me now, Ethel," she said one day, when these thoughts were busy in her brain, "if you had been his wife instead of Vivienne Stuart."

But Ethel would not heed her.

"He never loved me as he loves her. Even if he had been here, he would not have been happy, nor should I. You must forget all about those past days, as I have."

"Is he happy now?" asked Mrs. Thornton, bitterly; "am I happy? or is she, do you think, wandering about the world, no one knows where?"

What could Ethel answer to this? For she, having loved Jocelyn, knew well that away from him poor Vivienne could not be happy.

* * * *

Herbert Grant would have liked a speedy marriage if he had had his way, but he did not. Doctor West was loth to part with his darling yet awhile, and Ethel was well content to remain.

When Paul Knox came to Thornton in the Spring he laughed openly at the Rector's [illegible] at others.

"[illegible] you are going to [illegible] your own way. Give the best of women their own way, and you are sure to ruin them. For my part, I think you have waited long enough for your wife, and the Rectory long enough for its mistress."

Herbert Grant thought so to; but Ethel did not, and being in love, which practically Paul never had been, the Rector felt himself to be wise [illegible] him for so doing, both before his face and behind his back, did not matter at all to quiet Mr. Grant, whose heart had not room for a grievance, it was so brimful of joy.

One night when Ethel was at the Manor, Doctor West stayed at home to chat with Paul Knox. The two men, [illegible] enjoying their pipes in the [illegible] oak that was [illegible] by the [illegible] seemed well content to be left to themselves.

Paul had a great deal to tell of his work, in London, of his rapid growth in fame since he had last been in Thornton.

"I am almost a rich man now, Dick; indeed you would call me one quite. But I have grown ambitious like the rest of the world, and I intend to make a little more before resting. The time is not far off when I shall be able to settle down beside you for the rest of my days. It has seemed long in coming, through. Perhaps I made it longer still by my own folly.

"Do you remember the night you told me my last chance was to leave England? Those were your very words. I never at [illegible] really set up till then. I had been loitering about outside, watching you and Ethel sitting here in the dusk, and somehow the thought fastened on me that I was robbing you and her. I never was able to shake it off afterwards; and when I got the chance, it bore fruit. It made a man of me."

This handsome bearded man, sitting talking in the dusk, had that in his eyes, and his hand, spread before him on the table, moved restlessly. Not a bit was he like the wanderer who had stood out in the garden, in the dark of the past August night, pleading with the Doctor, as one conscious of wrongdoing—not a bit like the sad-faced man, in the dingy London lodging house, with the prospect of a prison before his eyes—not a bit like the thin, half-drowned stranger, brought in by the Thornton fishermen, was the well-dressed Paul of to-night.

Those days seemed to have left no trace on the outward man; and yet they were alive in his heart as he spoke, and their echoes had stings of pain for him.

"I saw your Thornton the day before I came down, he said, a while later, when the talk had changed. "He called to see me, but he did not say much. He seemed to me dazed. Such a change I never saw in my life. His eyes are sunk in his head, his cheeks are hollow, and even his voice is not the same. He was staying in town for a little while, he told me; but he has not yet heard anything of Vivienne. Everything that from him, through [illegible] of all [illegible] Do you know, Dick, I think she must be dead."

"So do I. I have often thought so lately. And I would be almost glad of it. The thought of her, out in the world, with that awful stain on her soul, seems dreadful to me. And she was the very last woman I would have accused of such a thing. She was so harmless, so child-like in all her ways."

"There you are wrong, Dick. That woman has the heart of a lion. She could love more and hate more in an hour than most woman in a lifetime. Did you ever notice her lips and eyes?"

The Doctor shook his head.

"No; I thought not. Well, I am used reading these things, and I saw there the signs of a nature strong either for good or evil—certainly far from harmless. Its very power made that impossible. Poor Gilbert gave it the wrong turn by rising up between her and her lover. And the consequence was—she put him out of her way. She would have done it all the same if he had been a stronger man. She did it so much the easier as he was a weak one. And mind you, Dick, I believe in my heart she suffered in the doing of it. But her love was stronger than her pity, and the poor fellow's life went down before it."

"The crime is awful to think of," said the Doctor. "It turns my heart faint every time I remember it. Not that Gilbert could have lived long—he might even have died before the morning, at the hands [illegible] but the intent on her part was the same—[illegible] horrible. [illegible] Heaven help the poor creture!—she has had her share of suffering for it since."

Voices came to them, or they would have heard a faint gurgle as of crushed down sobbing, that rose without in the lonely garden before their window. Ethel was coming home with Herbert Grant, and was talking and laughing in the still cool night.

He left her at the porch. He had not time to go in, he said; and she stayed to watch him down the little path between the flower-beds, tall and stately, a figure very dear to her eyes.

The moon was up—a faint crescent in a pale sky, where the stars were hidden every now and then by fleecy cloudlets. The wash of the tide against the rocks made a soothing murmur, which the girl liked to hear.

When she went indoors, she found her father and Paul smoking in the dark with the fire, for the night was chilly, dying down before them.

"Why are you sitting in the dark?" she asked, kneeling down on the rug beside her father's chair, and stirring the red embers into a flame.

"We like being in the dark," said Paul. "Could we have a better reason?"

"I suppose not, if that was it," answered Ethel; adding, "Mrs. Thornton has had a letter from Jocelyn to-day. He is on his way to Rome."

"Why? Has any clue turned up there?"

"It seems so. A lady like Vivienne took up her abode there a week or two ago,—so the man who is in his pay in that city writes; and he would not rest till he went himself."

Doctor West sighed.

"This is the hundredth time he has started on such a journey, only to find himself disappointed at the end. I don't know how he bears it."

"It must be very hard for him; yet he only did right in going," observed Ethel.

"You think so, I know, Ethel: and yet the question is, would it be well to find her?" said Paul, gravely.

This was the one point on which they clashed, Ethel and he. He was stern, with reason; she tender, as her nature was. Both were right from their separate point of view. To-night she thought him more than stern—cruel, to talk so.

She had just come from the mother to whom [illegible] Vivienne had caused such pain, in that her flight had wronged the heart of Jocelyn. She remembered very vividly the wet eyes, flushed cheeks, and unsteady lips that had been bent over the short, hurried letter, telling of her boy's whereabouts to the lonely widow at the Manor-house. While he sought his wife, the mother was childless. How could the girl be expected to comprehend Paul's doubting?

"It must, it must be resolved, the better that Vivienne should be found, or, better than all, that she should come back of her own will to these hearts that miss her so."

"It was a year last September since she went away," observed Doctor West, musingly; "two years that same month since she was married; three since poor Gilbert died. How much in a little space of time!"

"Yes," said Ethel; "and do you know I kept thinking in my own mind that she would have come back in September? The month seemed linked with her in some way. She was married in it; she ran away in it. I did hope that if she was alive she would have come home in it."

"Bosh, nonsense, Ethel!" cried Paul, "one of your fancies. I find I must speak to Grant about the superstitious tendency of your mind. It must be looked after—at once, too. Fancy a Rector's wife believing in coincidences, and in her secret heart calling them fatalities!"

Ethel's cheeks burned; but the half gloom hid them. And it was as well, for they would only have set Paul laughing at her, and she was in no humour to be laughed at.

Talking of Jocelyn and of Gilbert had brought back old times. Thoughts came with a rush upon her, and she did not feel inclined to shake them off even if she could.

When Paul had gone up to his room, and the Doctor had settled himself in the study as usual, she still sat, half buried in her easy chair, and gave her thoughts their way.

It seemed to her then only like yesterday since Jocelyn Thornton, with his bright eyes, his sunny hair, and graceful bearing, was the one idol her heart had room for—when the touch of his hand, the clear tones of his voice, even speaking to another than herself, set her pale throbbing.

Then the miserable time stood before her when she lost this love that she had so builded on—lost even the right to go on loving him. Those days of crushed-down pain and bitter patience were close to her again—those days when, in the gloom of a keen sorrow herself, she had stood by as her Vivienne allied with the joy of the love she had stolen; how sad they had been, how dreary! Unspeakably sad they seemed even then, looked back upon with eyes that read a lesson in the past suffering. They brought a little throb of their old pain to her heart, though she had learned that those dark days were not missed days, or bare of after fruit, that had helped to sweeten her life.

How thick the memories gathered!—memories of Jocelyn in his stalwart pride and beauty—memories of this poor wandering Vivienne in her cruel friendliness and grace—memories of Gilbert, with his sad eyes, his sweet lips, and patient smile, that through all had welcomed her coming.

How strong and clear those brain-pictures were she scarcely felt, for she was lost in them, till a faint stir, an uncertain, irregular noise without roused her.

Some one was in the graden. Some one was walking with a heavy step among the long, dry grass before the window.

For a second she was startled. Then she thought it might be some one coming for her father, and went out.

Standing in the lighted hall, very still, she heard a far-off rustle; she swung the door open on the instant with a feeling not all of courage.

No one was to be seen.

She stepped out into the porch—still no one.

Thinking she had been dreaming in real earnest, and quite free from her fear, she went out into the garden, leaving the door open behind her, from which the light streamed out like a white flame in the dimness.

The moon was hid; the stars were hid. There was no wind, and the air was full of that keen freshness, mixed with earth-scents, that one feels in the country on a night like this.

The path before her was empty. The lawn under the windows was empty, too, as far as could be seen. She turned back, holding it idle to search for what she began to think had only existed in her own imagination. As she did so, a figure, kneeling or half lying close by the gate, under the trees, caught her eyes, quick even in that dim light.

She looked again. It was not to be seen. Some streak of light had touched it, and, that being gone, it was gone also.

Trembling, and with her heart beating strongly against her side, like a frightened thing she ran into the house swiftly. She almost thought in her fright that the dark figure followed her.

In the hall she met Paul Knox. At sight of her he stood amazed.

"What is the matter with you, child?"

Then her voice came back to her. Holding his arm tightly, she found power to speak.

"Something in the garden. Do come, Paul. Something all black, almost without shape, and yet like a human creature. Do come and see it."

He took her hand in his, and walked back with her to the door.

"Don't look so scared, child, if that is all you have seen. There are plenty of human creatures without any particular shape in this happy little village. Perhaps one of them has lain down to sleep under your beeches."

She knew he was laughing at her, but she did not care for that.

He went down to the gate, she following close behind, and holding fast to his hand all the time. When they got to the trees where she had seen the figure, there was nothing there—nothing to be seen on the road beyond the gate, either.

Paul had expected this, and smiled. Ethel stood beside him, shivering, not with cold, but with fear. She had seen the figure on this spot she knew. That it was gone only deepened her terror.

As they stood thus, the clouds parted slowly, and showed the stars and the young moon, that showered such light as it might on them both, and on the gaunt crags above them.

Then Ethel cried out sharply. Paul dashed the gate open, and went out into the road with a swift stride. She would have followed him, but she could not; fear held her still, though she had seen it as clearly as he had—the dark figure lying prone on the grass, at the roadside, not five yards away.

In an instant he was back with it in his arms.

"It is a woman," he said to her. That was all; yet something in his voice hinted much more.

She ran back into the house, and called to her father. He came out of the study at once, and the two met Paul in the lighted hall; the doctor not a little startled by the look in his face.

"What is it, Paul?"

"Hush!—a woman. She has fainted."

He went straight by them into the parlor, where Ethel already was, lighting the old-fashioned lamp on the centre table, with hands that trembled in their haste.

"But who is it, Paul?"

The light streamed out just then, rendering any answer needless. Doctor West knew as well as Paul who she was, and Ethel as well as either.

It was Vivienne Thornton.

For an instant there was silence, deep and pitiful. Tears rained fast from Ethel's eyes—Doctor West's were dim. Only Paul Knox stood there unmoved, dark of face, stern a little also.

Lying there, in her shabby black dress, with threadbare cloak and dingy bonnet, she was a sight to awaken any one, this one-time brilliant Vivienne. Her cheeks were hollow, her dainty lips drawn and dry. Her eyes, fast shut, had purple rings under them, marked in heavily.

Withal she was beautiful, this weary, world-tossed Vivienne. Seeing her even thus, no one could wonder that the heart of her husband was empty, wanting her, missing that poor face out of his home, pain-scored as it was then, and faded.

So Ethel thought as she went about, busy over her task of bringing back the life that had so nearly slipped its cords.

After a long time they succeeded. Slowly the lips twitched, and the small hands stirred to the touch.

"She will come round now," said Doctor West, with a sigh, half of pity, half of thankfulness.

Then Paul Knox stole away quietly, still with a grave face, where the mystery of life was deepening the shadows not a little.

When Vivienne had come out of that deathly faint, she was not conscious. Her first words proved it.

"Where is Jocelyn?" she murmured.

"He is not here," said Ethel to her, gently—she was almost choked with tears, but she forced them back, for very pity's sake—"but he soon will be. We will send for him."

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes of adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 40c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

A FATAL KICK.—Mr. T. Fitzgerald, livery-man, Charlotte St., on Saturday lost a valuable young beast through a kick on the head from another horse, behind which it had reared and fallen.

Alex. McFee has sold his farm in Otonabee—100 acres—for $4,000, to W. Renwick, and goes to Iowa, whither some of his friends went some time ago. Thus some of our farmers escape the burdens of the N. P.

TO FARMERS.—Take notice that repairs for Cossitt's Reaper and Gang Plows, and No. 40 Plough, can be obtained at the Agricultural Works of MR. P. HAMILTON in future. DONNELLY & MORRISON, late agents. 15-4t.

The Methodist Conference has decided to remove to another field of Christian labor Mr. J. E. Starr, who has so endeared himself to the members of his communion in this town that they petitioned for his retention as a preacher here.

NEW PAPER.—We have received the first edition of a new paper entitled the Markham Sun. It appears to be an enthusiastic supporter of the N. P., and its advent is no doubt another evidence of the "hum." We hope it may survive the "exodus."

SPRING GOODS.—Spring has at last fairly arrived, and spring goods have not only arrived, but been opened at Mr. John Erskine's, where there is a vast and varied display of dry-goods, with special lines in dress-pieces, hosiery and gloves, sunshades and umbrellas Gents' furnishings also are shown in rich and attractive styles. 17-1t

MIDLAND RAILWAY EMPLOYES.—A meeting of employes of the Midland Railway was held the other day in Port Hope, and a resolution was passed for submission to the Company, embodying the terms of payment demanded by the men for making the various "runs" over the road, including those of Peterboro'.

On Tuesday morning it was discovered that some one had, during the previous night, attempted to gain admittance to the Post Office by cutting a pane of glass in one of the windows. The hole was successfully made, but further operations on the part of the burglar seemed to have been stopped by additional difficulties or interruption.

NEWSPAPER CHANGE.—Mr. I. H. Brock, late of this paper, has entered into partnership with Mr. W. H. Robertson, in the publication and conduct of the Times. The new firm spreads its main and mizzen canvas under a pennon bearing the title, "The Times Printing Company." Better "times" ahead, we hope.

ODDFELLOWS' ANNIVERSARY.—The sixty-second anniversary of the introduction of Oddfellowship into America will be celebrated in Peterborough by the Rev. Mr. Clark, of Lindsay, preaching a sermon to the Oddfellows of this town, in the George-street Methodist Church, on Sunday evening next, the 1st of May. It is expected that all the brethren in Peterborough will be present.

ST. LUKE'S ORGAN RECITAL.—Through inadvertence, in our report of this recital last week, the following paragraph was omitted from the manuscript. We have pleasure in producing it now and regret the circumstance:—

"Mr. W. J. Hallet won golden opinions by his rendition of the well-known solo from Elijah—"If with all your hearts."

On Wednesday, Mrs. John Sanders, who, last fall, had to be forcibly dislodged from a church by Constable McGhee, again began a series of strange actions on George Street. She was arrested by Constable Johnston on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. The Mayor, occupying the bench in the absence of the Police Magistrate, remanded her to custody, that she might appear in a calmer condition.

TALK BUSINESS.—Would it not be better, instead of asking people to offer their money to outsiders, (thus making a tacit acknowledgement of native helplessness,) for advocates of manufactures to at once prove the faith that is in them by devoting their lands, privileges and money to the origination of a company to carry on some particular industry, and to thus induce others to take shares in the enterprise. Come on gentlemen; begin the good work; and if the project be feasible and the shares are not too dear, one or two can be disposed of in this direction. In the language of the betting "sport," to the braggart; "put up, or shut up!"

THE SPRING TRADE.—I am now prepared to show a nice assortment of fresh new goods suitable for Spring and Summer use. New Dress goods in blacks and colors, prints, cottons, table linens, towels, sheetings, cretonnes, white and coloured quilts, lace curtains and amallares, new tweeds, worsteds, broad cloths, ducks, derries, flannels, collars and union shirtings. New ready-made clothing, rubber coats, shirts, collars, scarfs, ties, braces, handkerchiefs, new felt and straw hats, caps, new boots and shoes for men women and children. Fresh new teas, coffees, spices, sugars, syrups, tobaccos, bacon, lard, new crockery and glassware. Inspection invited by everyone. W. J. WALLACE, Lakefield. 14-tf

ODDFELLOWS' EXCURSION.—The Oddfellows of Belleville and Madoc celebrated the 62nd anniversary of their order by an excursion to Peterborough on Tuesday last. Arriving by the 11.45 train, they were met at the station by their Peterborough brethren and the Fire Brigade Band. The Belleville Oddfellows' Band accompanied the excursionists. All formed in procession and marched to the Oddfellow's Hall, where words of welcome were spoken by several members of Peterborough Lodge. An adjournment was made to the Choate House, where a well-prepared spread awaited the guests. This being partaken of the excursionists enjoyed themselves until their departure by by the evening train. As was to have been expected these visitors were a most respectable lot of fine fellows, and Peterborough will be glad to welcome them again. The Belleville Band were the guests of our Band, and were hospitably entertained at the Huffman House.

EVIDENCE OF ENTERPRISE.—The boot-and-shoe establishment of Mr. J. Carey—formerly that of Mr. W. J. Larmour, has since coming under new management been thoroughly overhauled and greatly improved. The shop has been doubled in size by an extension at the rear, the whole being fitted with neatly painted shelves and other furnishings, which add materially to its appearance. The dealer is thus enabled to display a much larger stock of goods, with the important advantage to customers of a distinct distribution of various styles and qualities for the inspection of intending purchasers. Further division for public convenience is secured by the setting apart of an upper room for men's heavy work. All this, added to the announcement of Mr. Carey, that he intends to carry on both the ready-made and custom departments on the principle of the lowest possible prices, should attract a large public patronage. See advertisement in another column.

THE DRAMA.—A number of the members of the Rena Maeder Comedy Company, whose "star" became a meteor about a week ago, were at once reorganized by Mr. T. Brown upon the plan followed by him in London, the less, for several seasons. It consists of presenting with a compact body of players a number of the popular dramas, at cheap prices, in towns and villages within easy reach of headquarters. Opening in Peterborough, the Company on Tuesday evening presented "Lost in London" and "The Loan of a Lover." Though the house was not a "bumper" one, owing probably to the fear that cheap rates of admission presaged inferior playing, the Company appeared bent upon earning a good reputation, and did so. Many passages were heartily and deservedly applauded. In consequence of the approbation called forth they were greeted with a much better audience on Wednesday evening, when they appeared in "Dora," and the farce "Turn Him Out." So well have they fulfilled their promise of good acting for easy prices that they will doubtless have crowded houses at their intended matinee and evening performance of Saturday, on which occasions "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be placed on the boards with the best possible effect and earnest effort. Their pluck, if nothing more deserves patronage. The prices of admission are 15 and 25 cents; and to Saturday afternoon performance 15 cents all round.

NORWOOD.

(From our own Correspondent.)

ENTERTAINMENT.—An entertainment given by the Methodist Young People's Association on Friday evening last was well attended. Some songs and duets were pleasingly rendered, and several readings given were alike entertaining and instructive. The Irradiator—a little paper edited and conducted by Miss Annie Sanderson—was filled with interesting matter, and contained some original articles of much merit.

THE FALL WHEAT.—The serious apprehensions entertained regarding the condition of the fall wheat, lest the severe weather since the rapid disappearance of the snow had again affected this cereal beyond redemption, have fortunately in no case been realised. The roots of the grain have not suffered in the slightest, and the blade, though in many cases looking discolored and sickly, has not been injured. The absence of thaws has been the means of saving this staple cereal, as there has been no upraising of the roots by alternate thawing and freezing. Fields of fall wheat now look quite verdant, healthy and promising—a matter for sincere congratulation, as our farmers place a great deal of reliance—perhaps too much—upon this crop. It is to be hoped that present anticipation may be fully realised.

RAIN.—A copious shower of rain fell in this vicinity on Tuesday last, and came none too early. The color of the grass has rapidly changed, and cattle, sheep and pigs are enjoying the luxury of a "sweet bit." Fall-sown crops have also been greatly revived by the drink from the clouds.

DIVISION COURT.—The usual sitting of the Second Division Court was held here on Wednesday last, His Honor Judge Dennistoun presiding. Though the docket was a light one, the hearing of the cases was unusually heavy. Some of the suits were of an interesting nature, and the Judge exercised great patience in hearing them. The able manner in which Mr. T. M. Grover conducted the cases in his hands was the subject of much favorable comment. The following are the principal cases disposed of:—

J. Baskin vs. Abraham Scott.—The plaintiff had purchased a quantity of hay from the defendant in the lump, giving a certain price therefor without regard to quality; but on removing a portion of the stack found that underneath in an unsound and useless condition, and sued for recovery. The defendant pleaded that he had sold the hay without regard to quantity or quality; that it was stacked in good condition, and that he did not know the hay was in any way injured. A number of witnesses swore hard both for the defence and the prosecution. The Judge reserved his decision till the 30th inst.

W. E. Roxburyh vs. John Peters.—The plaintiff in this case was seeking to recover the sum of $103.00 from the defendant, the proceeds of a lot of barley sold to him by Mr. R. Stewart, of Asphodel, which sum it was claimed should have been placed in the hands of the plaintiff, as trustee to the estate of MR. STEWART, who had some time previously made a compromise to his creditors. An endless amount of papers and books were examined to prove the right to the coveted money, and considerable cross-firing took place between all concerned, which His Honor was compelled to put a stop to. The case occupied about three hours in its disposal, and terminated in a judgment in favor of the plaintiff.

AGRICULTURAL.—Mr. W. E. Roxburgh, the indefatigable Secretary of the East Riding and Asphodel, Belmont and Dummer Agricultural Societies, has been examining several properties in the vicinity of this village to obtain a site for suitable agricultural show grounds. The intention is to hold the Riding show alternately here and at Keene; and as that of the Dummer Society is always held here it is found advisable to obtain grounds for both shows. Considerable money has been lost yearly through the want of attractive and spacious premises for the holding of the Fall Exhibition, but now matters are to be arranged so that all the buildings and appurtenances of the societies will be inside one enclosure, a want hitherto seriously felt.

AN ENTERPRISING MAN.—Mr. John Finlay's factory has this year been kept constantly running, with a larger force of hands than ever before. He is now erecting a large addition to his already extensive manufacturing premises, and adding conveniences that will enable him to conduct his business more advantageously.

PASSED.—Mr. R. Birdsall, son of F. Birdsall, Esq., Asphodel, has successfully passed his examination at the Military School, Kingston, receiving a second-class certificate; and a letter from the Commandant at Kingston to Col. Rogers of the 57th, states that he was a most active and zealous student, gentlemanly in his bearing and conduct, and remarkably proficient in his military duties. He will be quite an acquisition to No. 5 Company of the 57th, and will, no doubt, prove a valuable officer to the regiment. Mr. Birdsall's marks reached high figures on all his papers.

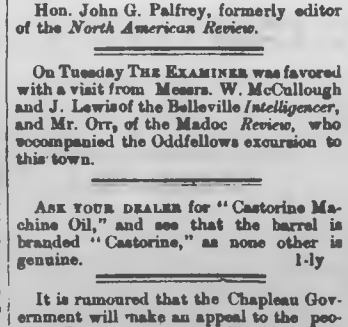
It is rumoured that the Chapleau Government will make an appeal to the people. It is an open secret that Mr. Chapleau is in straits for money with which to carry on the Government. Recently he made overtures to Montreal to set a good example to the remainder of the Province and pay up the $525,000 due since 1866. But till some of the remainder of the municipal debtors to this fund show a disposition to pay up, the Finance Committee will not recommend the Council to pay a dollar, and the Government in that case will sue them.



Will be mailed free to all applicants, and to customers without ordering it. It contains five colored plates, fifty engravings, about 225 pages, and full descriptions, prices and directions for planting 1,000 varieties of Vegetable and Flower Seeds, Plants, Roses, &c. Invaluable to all. Send for it. Address,

The Grand Trunk Railway brakesmen ask an advance from $1.25 to $1.40 per day, and resolved to strike this morning if their demand were not complied with, though they were offered $1.35.

The Hon. Adam Hope, of Hamilton is strongly in favor of the present system of appointing Senators as the only one compatible with Ministerial responsibility and British Parliamentary government.

In the case against the minister and trustees of St. Andrew's Church, Montreal, taken by the temporalities fund of the Canada Presbyterian Church, Judge Torrance gave judgment for the plaintiff, who sued for $1,000 and a mortgage.

L' Union des Cantons de l' Est, a Conservative journal, says in the parish of St. Christophe, nearly one hundred houses are closed up, the proprietors of which have emigrated to the United States. The Bank of Montreal has done so prosperous a business during the past half year that besides the dividend of four per cent declared to the shareholders, a bonus 2 per cent was given, and a surplus of $200,000 carried to the reserve fund. There is likely to be a heavy advance in the bank's stock in consequence.

The Canadian Press Association proposes a banquet to Prof. Goldwin Smith on the eve of his approaching departure from Canada. The Association's next annual meeting will be held in Port Hope in August, to be followed by an excursion to Lindsay, the back lakes, Parry Sound, and Penetanguishine.

A lifetime of torture is often endured by the rheumatic. Their pangs may, however, be promptly relieved and the disease eradicated with Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, which is, moreover, a swift and thorough remedy for neuralgia, lame back, sores, bruises, frost-bite, corns, excoriated nipples, inflamed breast, liver complaint, and all affections of the breathing organs.

The Montreal Gazette blames Mr. Brunel for the withdrawal of the concession to merchants dealing in scales, to send packages on to their customers without the necessity of having them unpacked, set up to be stamped, then repacked again and sent forward; and all but calls for his removal. But so far as can yet be known, the Minister is responsible. Why not first call for his removal?

It seems to be understood that the Grand Trunk are favorable to the construction of the Ontario and Sault Ste. Marie road, and are willing to afford traffic facilities for both East and West bound business, whether going to Ontario or towards Montreal. The distance from the Sault Ste. Marie to Montreal, through Peterborough and Belleville, is about 670 miles, whilst the distance by way of the north shore of Lake Nipissing, the Canada Pacific and Canada Central lines is somewhere about 640 miles. The road from the Sault Ste. Marie to Duluth, would form almost a straight line, and as the Northern Pacific is intended to connect with the Manitoba and South-Western Road, another direct line to Winnipeg will be secured when this project has been carried out. Montreal Gazette

Trenton is greatly excited by the reception of a letter from Mr. Hickson, of the Grand Trunk Railway, to the effect that the railway company will assist the Prince Edward County Railroad in building their northern extension. This most important movement contemplates the use of part of the Grand Junction Railroad and this extension as an outlet for the Sault Ste. Marie line. As the Ontario Government granted the Prince Edward County Railroad, running powers over the Grand Junction, it seems that this power will be used to open up a through line to the Sault, via Trenton and Peterborough. A Grand Trunk engineer will at once go over the line originally surveyed for the Trent Valley Railway, and make a report on the practicability and probable cost, as the work is to be speedily pushed. The line is very easy and favourable.

Plumb, a member of the Dominion parliament, who visited Albany in reference to the proposed park at Niagara Falls, has been obliged to return to Canada without seeing the Governor, who has been absent from the capital. NORWOOD NEWS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

A LARGE BABY.—The wife of Mr. Jas. The child survived but a short time after its birth.

FIGHTING BUSH FIRES.—On Friday last Mr. W. N. Mullins, and a few of his neighbors, were unexpectedly called upon to fight a serious bush fire on his premises, near Norwood. Mr. Mullins and his man Friday were engaged in the morning in clearing up a small patch of ground, intended for potatoes, and had fired some brush. In the meantime a north-easterly wind arose, blowing some sparks into an adjoining field covered with dry brush and partly decayed logs, and soon piece after piece became ignited, till nearly all the heaps of brush and logs were in a blaze, endangering straw stacks, barns and other buildings, rented from Mr. M. by Mr. R. Peters. The fire was only checked by the arrival of barrels of water from a distance, and an assiduous watch kept to prevent it extending to any inflamable material.

PERSONAL.—Mr. J. B. Pearce left Norwood on Monday for Peterborough, to meet several of the Census Enumerators from the back country, under his charge. ENNISMORE.

The remains of Mr. Thos. Kennedy were interred in Ennismore cemetery on Friday 15th ult. He had been seised with inflammation just one week before, while attending Court at Lindsay. Exactly one week after his burial the dead body of his widowed mother was laid by his side, she having, while attending him in his last sickness, caught a severe cold which rapidly developed into inflammation of the lungs.

SELWYN.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Fall wheat is now out of danger from frost and is looking splendid.

Owing to the dry warm weather, farm work is being pushed forward rapidly, being now much further advanced than last year at the same date, and crop-prospects at present are all that could be desired.

The sugar business in what unfavourable, sugar-making was carried on to a very limited extent.

Many in this locality experimented last season in land salt, and were so well satisfied with the results, that they are now going into the business extensively.

Several families in this vicinity are afflicted with the measles but most of them are now in a fair way for recovery.

An attempt is being made to organize a Sunday School in the section north of us. Already some have been round soliciting subscriptions. We wish them success in so praiseworthy an undertaking.

THE ONTARIO AND QUEBEC RAILWAY.

At the meeting last week in Montreal of railway men interested in the construction of the Ontario and Quebec Railway the following railways were represented:—Credit Valley, Mr. Osler, Toronto; Canada Central, Mr. McIntyre; South Eastern, Mr. Chaffee; Grand Junction, Mr. Bickford; Quebec, Montreal & Occidental, Mr. Senecal and the Hon. Mr. Church. The following gentlemen were also in attendance: The Hon. Rosaire Thibaudeau, Hector Cameron, M. P., Mr. Archambault, Mr. Henry Howland, Toronto; Mr. Campbell, Toronto, and Mr. W. L. Gordon, the latter, Secretary of the Provisional Board of Directors. The amount of the capital stock of the Company was fixed at $1,000,000, which was apportioned among the several interests represented. Ten per cent. of this is to be paid into the Bank of Montreal on or before the 6th of May. On that date a notice will be issued, calling a meeting to elect a permanent Board. At a meeting of the Provisional Board considerable discussion took place on questions of detail, and the principal business transacted was the giving of instructions to the Company's Chief Engineer, Mr. Lumsden, to complete his preliminary survey to be ready to report to the first meeting of the Permanent Board in May. Mr. Lumsden informed the Board that no great difficulties were to be overcome in locating the line, and that the work had no particular feature more than that it was ordinarily heavy. Some difficulty might be experienced in entering the city of Toronto from the east, but if the Grand Trunk threw no great obstacles in the Company's way, the entrance could be effected advantageously at present.

PETERBOROUGH, MAY 5, 1881.

The Newspaper and the Public.

The best evidence of the usefulness of the newspaper in all civilized communities, is given in the increased demand for such vehicles of expression and discussion as a country grows in population, wealth and intelligence. The character of a country, or a section of that country, may be very acurately inferred by its newspapers; just as the household or the individual may be fairly judged by the books, and still more by the papers, it, or he, is in the habit of reading. The progress of Canada, particularly that of Ontario, during the past ten years, has been specially marked in this manner. What are known as its "leading newspapers" have been wonderfully improved in size, appearance and general energy of conduct. We are pleased, and greatly pleased, to be able to remark that there is also an improvement in the tone of journalism—a proof that a mere reckless flow of Billingsgate is no longer approved by the people as an evidence of brilliancy on the part of a writer. People now have too correct a notion of the functions of the newspaper press, to be satisfied with a journal which does no more than detail commonplace incidents, reproduce a few coarse jokes or other questionable literary gatherings, and waste its remaining space and powers of discussion on the petty grievances or favorite fancies of its publisher, or his boon companions. Even rabid partyism, still rather conspicuous in Canadian newspapers, is weakening under the growing popular demand for the discussion of public matters on their merits, and in the interests of the whole foreign community, rather than from the standpoint of the leader of a faction, fighting for the existence of his guard of faithful henchmen, and his own chieftainship. It is becoming more and more the opinion that the office of the newspaper is not to discuss private concerns, unless of public bearing, or even to make private announcements, except on the responsability, and at the expense of the interested parties.

It has been complained time and again that there are too many newspapers. This is true just in so far as there are too many lawyers, doctors or merchants. There are too many in any calling, when any one or few of those engaged in it, fail to well perform the duties demanded of them. There are not too many good newspapers; and so long as this is the case, there will arise a demand for better ones to fill their places; for it may be argued that no newspaper, or any other enterprise, was started without some encouragement. Probably the worst error in journalism, as in many other professions and trades, is the attempt to do and be too much, and to thus fail in doing and being what might reasonably be expected. The big morning journals are turned into evening journals as well, and thus fail to be either in the best particulars. The publishers of daily papers try to monopolize the sphere of the weekly press; and this division of energies dissipates their force and weakens their energies in both fields. The larger dailies thus shorn of part of their strength, fail in several essentials, thus creating a demand for numerous small dailies throughout the country. It is becoming more and more evident that the weekly paper, carefully prepared as such, with a digest of the week's occurences, and with remarks upon the leading questions of the time, fills a want which cannot possibly be met by the day-to-day comments, hastily written, for the morning papers, and afterwards pitch-forked into the "weekly edition." It costs less to thus produce a weekly, the matter in which has been already used and paid for; but that class of second-hand 'stuff' is unsuitable to its secondary purpose, stale and unprofitable, and dear at any price. There are fields in which the various journals can do good, legitimate work, fulfil important duties, and command their price; but when any of them goes too far afield, like the farmer who attempts the cultivation of more land than he can well manage, it fails to produce the best fruits, demanded by an intelligent public, and consequently loses where it expected to gain. The people will not be long defrauded by the inferior evening paper manufactured from fragments of the same morning's issue. They have learned that the cheap weeklies composed of stale scraps thrown out from day to day, are as unsatisfactory to the mind as would be a Sunday dinner thus collected; and to the country resident, his local journal is as necessary as is the city newspaper to the dweller in the crowded metropolis. Just now there is a grand "boom" in city journalism in Ontario. There is such a thing, however, as being too enterprising; as was the frog who would be an ox.

The Sault Ste. Marie Railway.

The projected through line of land communication, whereby the Northern Pacific Railway may be united, by a road built to Sault Ste. Marie, to the system of Ontario and Quebec, has a peculiar bearing on the interests of Canada at the present time. It will not only form a route from the North-West to the seaboard in competition with that to the south of Lake Michigan, but also help materially to protect Canada from the attempted monopoly of the carrying trade by the Pacific Railway Syndicate, aided by the present Dominion Government and their subservient followers. Against an independent line like this the Syndicate and its friends, both outside and within Parliament, will fight with all their power of money and machination. But the hopes of all true Canadians turn toward, it as a means of at least partial liberation from the chains so unsparingly and unscrupulously placed on the energies of the Young Dominion at the late Parliamentary session. Many who were defenders of the Syndicate bargain during the heated debates of that time have since calmly considered the dangers of the position, and are filled with alarm at the prospect. They, in common with those who were, and continue to be, steadfast opponents of the ill-considered and injurious contract, look to the construction of a free line of railway with patriotic pleasure. The Toronto Mail, a submissive and self-committed servant of the Syndicate, of course opposes the Sault line; but the Montreal Gazette, an equally influential journal of free Conservative opinion, sees in it nothing but good. It is a cheering sign when those who, driven by the pressure of party polity, have assisted in invoking a great danger, turn in heartily to assist in averting the direful consequences. Loyalty to party led Conservatives to support their leaders in carrying out the bargain with the Pacific Railway Syndicate; but, as no part of that bargain stipulated against the construction of a competing line by an independent company, loyalty is not involved in support, intelligent, hearty and determined support, of the Sault line, as a means of saving the commerce of the country from the grinding exactions of a huge monopoly. We hope the inherent patriotism of the rank and file of the Conservative party will lead them in this matter to accept the direction of their Montreal organ, rather than that of the Toronto Syndicate protector.

A CANADIAN IN COLORADO.

DECISION IN FAVOR OF THE DOMINION.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—As it may not be uninteresting to your readers to know something of the far west State of Colorado, which, of late, has sprung up so prominently before the public, you will kindly allow me space to make a few observations as to how I found it. As my trip has been made with the object of recruiting my failing health, I can assure your readers that my mind has not been biassed by any prejudice for or against this part of the Union; and before I commit myself to any statements, I have taken every opportunity to make myself acquainted on subjects of importance. At my first stopping place, Toledo, I made a diversion into Michigan, to see a sister of mine, and on my return failed to make connection with the train for St. Louis, and I had to remain during day-time for nine hours in Toledo, where busy hands were at work everywhere to clear away the debris caused by the flood. I left at 7 p.m. for St. Louis, regretting to travel at night, thus losing a view of the country. At the dawn of the morning the train was brought suddenly to a halt, by an accident, two freight trains colliding at an intersection of the road, causing a delay of two hours, again losing connection with the train for Kansas City. As I did not want to stay longer than necessary, I was compelled again to travel at night, leaving at 9 p.m., and arriving at Kansas City at 9 a.m., giving passengers for Denver two hours for breakfast. At 11 a.m., Kansas City passed out of sight,

THE UNION PACIFIC

runs for a long distance almost along-side the Arkansas River, with hills of limestone to the right, covered here and there with shrubby trees, and a few shanty-looking houses. But this picture passes soon out of view, in spite of the almost strained efforts of the train's slow speed. After leaving this hilly region, the road passes for about 50 or 75 miles through a farming country, of which I have seen nothing but remnants of the last corn crops, and a good deal in the fields yet in stacks, an indication of no want. Here and there is a farm house visible, surrounded by a few cotton-trees, but lacking the elements of that comfort and thrift of which our farmers' homes of Ontario are so distinguished. No barns or other out-houses are visible here, and I have marvelled where the chickens find a place to roost, unless they alight on the cotton-trees surrounding the house. Is it a matter of surprise that thousands and thousands of cattle have perished during the winter season, filling the air with stench and exhibiting a sickening spectacle to the eye. I have seen numbers of sheep lying dead along the track. As the train slowly moves on the houses become fewer, and the land for farming disappears, and as far as the eye can reach, there is an expanse like neither tree, shrub, nor any other object being visible above the ground. Happily, I had made the acquaintance of a German merchant of Denver, going home from his business trips to New York, and many points of interest I gathered in course of conversation. I was much surprised at the, slow rate of speed at which the train proceeds through a level country with no curves; but since learned it is on account of the clogging and corroding nature of the water, the company being at very considerable expense every year in repairing the boilers of the engines on this account. By looking over the maps of the Union Pacific R. R., it will be seen that there are plenty of stations along the road with such inviting names as Mirage, Deer Trail, Monotony, and the like. My companion traveller often called my attention to a station near at hand, with nothing more to signify that important place than a hut, (or a grave I may call it,) dug in the ground, where a human being might be seen crawling out on the approach of a train. The habitation for a human being is no better then that of a prairie dog or a mole and quite secure against any hurricane.

There are a few stations, of which Wallace is the principal one, with two stores and a station hotel, where a hungry traveller may have his wants satisfied, at 75 cents. I have often read of the prairies represented with a luxurous growth of grass, and cattle feasting upon plenty all seasons of the year. But this idea has been rudely expelled from my mind. I do not know how the antelopes in herds of from 15 to 30 sustain life in such a desert of land. These animals come so close to a running train that they appear unconcerned, and can be only made to run by the crack of a few pistol shots.

was reached after 32 hours travel, at 7 p. m. Any one travelling for the first time through this vast ocean of land will be amply compensated to find such a place as Denver. Although comparatively a new place it has a population of 40,000, with splendid private and public buildings, of which the Windsor hotel, built of a kind of rose-wood marble, is furnished elegantly, looking magnificently when lighted up at night. A new Opera house in is course of construction, which, no doubt, when finished, may outrival the best on this continent. A new Court House is also in course of construction, which promises to be an ornament. Churches are erected through the city in great abundance, The Germans have themselves no less than four, 1 Catholic, 1 Calvinistic, 1 Lutheran and 1 Methodist—a good sign, that they are not so bad as often represented.

The building going on at present is really marvelous, but the material of which bricks are made is so bad that they crumble to dust before the house is constructed. Prices for lots and material have gone up to such a pitch, and the eagerness to sell is so great, that reaction is sure to come sooner or later. I have met here Mr. Graham and Mr. Niblock. The latter, dealing in produce, pays for his store $200 per month rent, while a German grocer, occupying a one-storey wooden shanty, the material of which would not fetch more than $30, pays a monthly rent of $65.

TRADE IS OVERDONE.

The number of travellers is astonishing. The mining interest draws many a speculator, and no doubt many return poorer men. Extravagance is the order of the day, and the hotels enjoy a good trade. Living is not high, considering that almost everything has to be brought from other states. Board can be had at first-class hotels at $6 per week without room, or $2 per day with furnished room. Work for carpenters, bricklayers and common laborers is abundant, the former receiving $3 to $3.50 per day; the latter $2.50. It is extremely difficult to predict Denver's future, as much depends on the mines in the Rocky Mountains. The latter give Denver a picturesque view; the snow-clad peaks towering into the clouds. Trade is conducted on a cash system—an excellent point in business well-worth imitating. Whilst Colorado is boasting of the best climate in the union, the many drug stores here would almost contradict the boast. The water is wretchedly bad, and a continuous war is going on between the press and the water companies, and milk serves to a great measure as a substitute for water.

VEGETATION

has so far not made much progress, although there have been fine days for growth; but the absence of rain to such a soil makes growth impossible. Various companies have been formed for ditching purposes—irrigating the land—but this must prove a very expensive affair. Stock-raisers and dairymen have had to stand a hard season, which will not be easily forgotten. I have counted in a radius of four miles no less than 17 head of cattle and horses which perished for want of food, while those left alive are in such a condition as to require three or four men to lift them on their legs. Vegetation has in the last two summers been burnt out by the heat. Without rain the blades of grass springing up are few and far apart. The supply for winter feed has had to come from Nebraska, at a price of $20 to $24 per ton for hay. That stock-raising in Colorado at such a price for feed and loss of life must be a failure is apparent.

TO SUM UP

my account of Colorado as far as I have seen, I may say I like Denver as a place of business, as it has every appliance of smartness and thrift, and I think a great future is in store for it; but as far as living on the prarie land (anyone can have 160 acres for the asking), I would not exchange the country of hill and dale, with an abundance of wood and water for these parched and monotonous plains.

Yours truly,
W. LECH.

THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.

Cane Culture and Sugar Making in Hawaii.

(Correspondence of the Examiner.)

The Sandwich, or more properly Hawaiian Islands, lie just within the tropics of the North Pacific, and about 2,000 miles south-west of San Francisco. They are not to be classed in that somewhat mythical and indefinite region, the "South Seas; nor confounded with the notorious Fijis, from which they are distant 3,000 miles. The Islands number thirteen, of which, however, only eight are inhabitable. They have a combined area of about 8,000 square miles, and are thoroughly volcanic in origin and structure with living craters and periodical lava-flows, one of which is now in operation, threatening a town not 20 miles away. When its history is completed I may recount it to you. The population of this Island Kingdom, is 65,000 or 70,000, ruled by a Native King, (now making a tour of the world,) a Foreign Ministry and a mixed Parliament. The King is merely an expensive figure head; the Whites rule practically, the Natives nominally, and the relations of the different races have always been most friendly, the Captain Cook tragedy notwithstanding. All business is done by Foreigners, as the ordinary native has not the requisite amount of enterprise and executive talent to carry on any business successfully. As a labourer, however, he is willing, peaceable, easily managed, and able; but spasmodic.

Almost every interest at present centres in, and depends on Sugar culture and manufacture, which are being carried to quite a large extent in the most approved manner. Perhaps in the majority of cases the one person or company controls both the divisions of the general business; but very frequently they are distinct and independent.

RAISING CANE.

Most of the Islands slope rapidly from the sea to the mountains, beginning perhaps with precipitious sea cliffs, 300 or 400 feet high. Then comes a stretch two or three miles wide, of rising grass-land, beyond which lies a belt of heavy wood 8 or 10 miles wide, extending to an elevation of 6,000 or 7,000 feet, succeeded by grazing lands to the upper limit of vegetation. The only land utilized for Sugar culture is the two or three mile strip along the shore; for the double reason that the woodland is too high, (2,000 feet and upwards,) for the profitable growth of cane, and that the clearing of it is too expensive. Thus a plantation is hedged-in pretty effectually by the sea and the wood. Laterally, of course it may extend as far as it can control the land and according as other circumstances are favourable. The lands are owned mainly by the ordinary natives, the chiefs and the government, none of whom make the least attempt to cultivate them; or are as a rule willing to sell, but will lease for a term of years. Control of a section of land having been secured, it requires to be cleared of such light brush and ferns as may have been growing on it from time immemorial. Then it is ready for ploughing. This has generally been done heretofore by cattle teams, consisting of 5 or 6 yokes, but they are being rapidly superseded by California mules, which are undoubtedly the cheapest and most satisfactory in the long run. Steam ploughs are also being used somewhat; but they can hardly be considered as more than experiments so far. After a thorough harrowing and furrowing of the land into rows, the planting is done in any one of the months of May, June or July. The seed consists merely of short lengths of cane like pieces of cornstalk, which are put into the furrowed-out rows, and lightly covered. The lengths consist of half-a-dozen joints, from each of which roots strike into the ground, and shoots spring up into the air.

After being planted, the crop requires hoeing to keep down the weeds, say once a month, or perhaps not quite so often, for the first six months; after which time it has grown up tall enough to cover in the rows and shut off the light from the weeds.

About this time it needs stripping—a careful going-over, and removal of all the dry leaves, so that the young stick of cane may be exposed to the air and sun. This is done two or three times before the cane is ripe. If the field is planted in May or June, and properly taken care of, the cane will begin to ripen about a year from the following January.

About the 17th month after planting it sends up a tall, plumy, delicate flower, a tassel of feathers two or three feet long, which lasts for two or three weeks. Any time after this the cane is ready to come off.

TRANSPORTATION OF CANE.

The mill, is probably, or at least properly, at the lowest point of the land, and as near the centre of it as possible. On every hundred acres of planted land you have from 3,000 to 5,000 tons of cane, according to the yield, which has to be transported to the mill,—a distance, say, of from half a mile to two miles, at the rate of from 50 to 100 tons a day. The question of transporting this cane is the great problem of sugar culture on these islands at present, and one that would yield a handsome fortune to any man that would furnish a practicable solution of it. If there is a sufficient stream of water on the place, or obtainable, with a sufficient grade in the land toward the mill, the question is of easy solution, as a small flume does the work efficiently, cheaply and rapidly. Otherwise it is a baffling problem. The flume solution is as follows: The water is taken out above the highest level of the cane, and led to that particular region where it is required and is there received into a flume consisting of a simple 'v'-shaped gutter, made of rough 12 inch boards, in 12 or 15-feet sections, which lap into one another at the end, forming a continuous water-way. This trough is placed on the ground or as near it as possible. The depth of water necessary is about 5 or 6 inches, with a grade of 1 in 25. When all is ready the belt of cane lying next to the flume is cut by men with large knives, carried to the flume, and thrown in, the rapid flow of water sweeping, rather than floating it to the mill, in an incredibly short time. At no one point is there any great amount of cane in the flume; but a few sticks every few seconds amounts to an immense pile of cane in a day. When a strip 30 or 40 yards wide has been cut parallel to the flume, the troughs are picked up and moved close to the cane again, for another section, and so on, keeping the flume always within easy distance of the cutters.

In the same way, and by means of the same flume, firewood is run to supply the mill, with the only difference, that, being much longer and heavier than cane, it requires more water. As I am writing the wood is fairly whistling down the flume that runs along one side of our garden, and it is a fascinating sight to stand at the top of the precipitous hill just back of the mill, and see the sticks of wood go spinning down the grade, of thirty degrees or more, shooting the water before them in a crest of foam, and scarcely touching the flume as they go down. By this means 60 or 80 cords of wood may be delivered at the mill every day, by an ordinarary small flume, presenting a cross-section of only half a square foot. The distance makes no practical difference except in the first cost of building the flume. This first cost is about $700 or $800 a mile.

Where, owing to a lack of grade or want of water, a flume is not to be had, various other methods are employed.

1st. There is the time-honored and tedious way of hauling with cattle and carts, immense lumbering wagons drawn by 5 or 6 yoke of cattle, with three native drivers, making 3 or 4 trips a day, with any amount of shouting and cracking of whips, and amid clouds of dust or sloughs of mud. This is the state of things where bullock-hauling is done. As a method it is expensive and slow. It requires three or four times as many cattle as are in actual use, with half an island to run them on; experienced drivers to manage them; and a great deal of handling of the cane in loading, unloading, etc. Then it is slow, and not very reliable. If it rains much the roads are too muddy and slippery; and if it is too warm the cattle will not work.

2nd. A tramway, worked on the gravity principle of the down-coming full car drawing up the empty one. This, where properly managed, seems to be much more effective than carting. It is certainly more rapid. It has its disadvantages, however. In the first place, it is rather expensive, the prime cost being $6,000 to $10,000 a mile, to which must be added a very considerable running expense, as runaways and smash-ups are by no means rare. Then, too, it only half solves the question, as the difficulty of getting the cane from the farther portions of the field still remains.

3rd. Where the country is level enough to permit of it, ordinary tramways on which the cars are propelled by mules or locomotives are used, with fair success; but there is still the difficulty of getting the cane to the cars from the more distant parts of the field. Attempts, however, are being made to obviate this difficulty by means of portable sections of track and light cars, which may be run off on either side from the main track.

Of late wire tramways, viz.:-suspended wire ropes on which run a series of cages or baskets, containing the cane, are being experimented with, but they can hardly be considered a success as yet.

A SUGAR MILL.

Having reached the mill, the cane is run through a set of three large iron rollers which squeeze the juice out, leaving nothing but the dry, woody fibre, known as "trash," which passes on into sheds, where it is loosely packed away to dry, for fuel. The juice from the rollers runs into the "clarifiers," large iron tanks, through which are run copper steam-pipes. In these the juice is warmed, so that a large part of the dirt and foreign matter matter may rise to the surface and be skimmed off, and is also treated with lime in sufficient quantity to neutralize any acid there may be in it. From the clarifiers it passes to the "evaporators," where it is subjected to a rapid boiling by means of steam coils. Having been evaporated to the proper density, it is drawn up into the "vacuum pan," a large, globular, air-tight container, from which the air can be drawn by means of powerful pumps. Here, owing to being relieved of the pressure of the air, it boils furiously at a temperature so low that it is barely warm. When it runs out of the pan it is a dark-looking, thick, granular mass, ready for drying. This is done in the "centrifugals," large tubs, revolving on spindles, and with wire gauze sides, through which, when the machines revolve at a rapid rate, the liquid portion runs, leaving the sugar in bright yellow crystals, lighter or darker, according to the quality of the cane, skill of the sugar boiler, method of manufacture, &c. The sugar is then finished, as far, at least as the islands are concerned, and requires merely to be put into bags, ready for SHIPPING.

This latter, however, is not always an easy matter. Most of the good sugar land lies on the windward side of the islands where the coast is very apt to be rugged, precipitous, and beaten by the unbroken swell of the Pacific. Accordingly, the want of even decent landings has proved a great drawback in many otherwise favorable regions, and large sums of money have been spent in attempting to make landings that may be relied on in even fair weather. As a general thing a deep cut is made down the face of the bluff, so that a reasonable grade may be got to the water's edge. Down this incline a tramway is laid, the cars being raised and lowered by means of a donkey engine. A large swinging crane at the bottom lifts the sugar from the car and swings it into the boat or lighter, which conveys it to the schooner. In other cases it is lowered or slid down on a wire rope; but all the various arrangements are simply useless in bad weather. Most of the sugar very unnecessarily goes to Honolulu where it is transhipped to San Francisco, the market for all Hawaiian sugar.

COST OF PRODUCTION, ETC.

For the information of any of your capitalist readers who may be weary of waiting for good times in Canada, I give the following approximate estimates of the cost of producing sugar:—

Clearing land, ploughing and planting, per ton	$ 10 00
Hoeing and cultivating	8 00
Stripping	3 00
Cutting, fluming and manufacturing	13 00
Shipping to San Francisco	11 00
Incidentals	2 00
Salaries, Manager, mechanics &c.,	12 00
Interest, 12%	12 00
Total cost per ton	70 00
Value of sugar, in San Francisco	130 00
Net profit	$ 60 00

Few places calculate on turning out less than 500 tons per annum, and very few exceed 1,500 tons. The above figures are liable to considerable changes, according to locality, special circumstances, &c., but present a very fair average estimate.

Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Billousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

The Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad Company

Now offer for Sale over 1,350,000 Acres of the Choicest FARMING and TIMBERED LANDS in the Northern Peninsula of Michigan.

Destined to be the best wheat-producing region in the world. These lands are situated in the counties of Chippewa, Mackinac, Schoolcraft, and Marquette, and embrace many thousands of acres of the best agricultural lands in the State of Michigan.

Among those in the counties of Chippewa and Mackinac are tracts of what are known as the "burnt or clear d" lands. These lands offer many advantages over the prairie lands of the West, as the timber lands adjoining insure a supply of fuel at little cost. The soil being a rich clay loam of great depth. The timber remaining upon the land being generally sufficient for the settlers' use in building and fencing.

These partially cleared lands are now offered at the low price of from $4 to $4.50 per acre, one-fourth cash, and the remainder at purchaser's option, at any time within nine years, with interest payable annually at seven per cent.

Roads are being opened through these lands, and no better opportunity has ever been offered to men of small means to secure a good farm, and intending purchasers will be wise by availing themselves of this chance before prices advance, as the lands are being rapidly taken and settled upon.

The lands more immediately on the line of the Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad, from Straits of Mackinac to Marquette, are more heavily timbered, and are almost universally good agricultural lands, leaving splendid farms when the timber is removed.

The iron and lumber interests of the upper peninsula are of such magnitude as to call for all the charcoal and lumber that the timber and wood upon the lands will produce this will enable the settler to make good wages while clearing the land.

Lumber Mills and Charcoal Kilns will be built at various points along the line, and Furnaces are now being erected along the line of the road at Point St. Ignace.

The great demand and good prices for labor, both in winter and summer, make these lands particularly desirable as homes for the poor man. The lands adjacent the Railroad are offered at prices from $5 upwards, according to location, value of timber, etc. The lands are at your very door, and are being rapidly settled by Canadians.

Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, MAY 5, 1881.

Announcement.

The editorial and general literary control of THE EXAMINER is now placed in the hands of Mr. Archibald Fleming, a gentleman of large newspaper experience, for half-a-dozen years a member of the staff of the Toronto Globe. Thanks are due to the many newspaper friends who have already spoken complimentary words upon the accession of a new occupant of the EXAMINER'S sanctum. It is to be hoped that happy auguries will prove true, and kindly expectations be realized.

Quebec Legislature.

The Quebec Legislature opened its session on Thursday last. The speech from the throne is long and "thin," being rather a retrospect than a foreshadowing of legislation. It refers to the renewed activity in all branches of industry, the Credit Foncier, beet rootsugar, phosphate mining, colonization and repatriation, the Provincial exhibition, railway subsidies granted, Crown Lands, and the new Provincial buildings, in a labored way, as if attempt were being made to bring forward a set-off of good things against unmentioned sins. All the measures proposed are in respect to the administration of justice, School Act amendment and wrokmen's protection in the recovery of their wages. The consolidation of the statutes is also referred to; and a bill is promised for the extension of the Parliamentary term. The debate on this document, as might have been, and was, expected, has been a lively one, and the members of the Quebec Cabinet find themselves in the position of those overtaken by a retribution, crying for that mercy which they themselves proved they did not possess. It cannot be long before a change is wrought in the political condition of Quebec, and it cannot very well help being a change for the better.

North Ontario.

In Mr. Bigelow the Liberals of North Ontario have a candidate worthy of their heartiest appreciation, and he will no doubt receive that vigorous support which insures a victory at the polls. The Conservatives have brought into the field a victim in the shape of Mr. Frank Madill, a gentleman combining the martyric requisites of youth and temerity. He has placed himself unreservedly in the hands of a committee of Directors and is submissively willing to do just as they bid him. Their principal card seems to be not any merit in their own cause, but a hope of creating dissention in the Liberal ranks, by trying to make other prominent Liberals believe that they have been shabbily treated in being passed over. But the very fact that the men on whose feelings they try to work have been life-long Liberals makes the intended victims of a poor and interested pity proof against the wiles practised for their enamarement. The idea of a man like Mr. I. J. Gould acting in opposition, or even with indifference toward the regular nominee of the Liberal convention is too absurd to be thought of for a moment. First of all, Mr. Gould is a staunch Liberal, which means that he prefers his principles to his personality. Then, too, he is a man of sense, who is able to see that the suggestions of his Tory friends (?) if acted upon would effectually kill his public usefulness, as it would damage his private character. The Tory purpose is to hurt both him and Bigelow, and thus to kill, with one stone, two eagles which have soared high over many a political fight, and inspired the Liberal phalanx, while striking dismay into the breasts of the Tory ranks. It will not work.

Canadian Pictures for the Queen.

In Toronto, on Saturday, Mr. L. R. O'Brien, President of the Canadian Academy of Art, had on private exhibition two pictures for which he has a commission from Her Majesty, Queen Victoria. They are both views at Quebec. One is finished, the other unfinished, though both will likely be ready for the exhibition at Halifax in July. One is a broad view of the peak upon which are the city and citidel of Quebec, with the river in the fore-ground, broken with vessels. The lower town and the distant north shore, seen through autumn haze past Point de Carcy, are lighted by a a gleam of sunshine from the west, shining behind and past the high rock, which mellows the light into luminous shadow in front. Only those who have seen Quebec in the bewitching glory of autumn can understand the beautiful bronzing effect given to the whole scene by such a light—bright, yet subdued—glowing around rather than upon the grand contrasts presented by rock and river, city and sky, and presenting objects in most poetical shadowiness, but distinctly withal. The subject is a happy one; and excellently treated. It is Mr. O'Brien's best picture. The other is a clear view down the river from the citidel, with an angle of wall and a glimpse of a a battery, with guns and soldiers. The view reaches over upper and lower town, river, shore island and distant mountains,—all basking in the smile of a perfectly-wrought sky, in which the feathery floating clouds merely betoken steadfast fair weather. Though unfinished, this picture displays much power in its handling, and skill in detail.

Editorial Notes.

THE Toronto Globe on Monday announced itself as an independent journal, delivering only the utterances of the managing-director. The Liberal party is to be congratulated.

"Vivienne's Crime," the story which ends with this week's issue, has, we understand, given general pleasure to the readers of the EXAMINER. We shall begin the publication of shorter tales, if we can secure the rare union of brevity and excellence of arrangement.

THE letter we this week publish on sugar-culture in the Sandwich Islands, will be found an excellently written and highly interesting production. It is from the pen of Mr. J. M. Lydgate, formerly of this town, but now dating his correspondence from Lampahoehoe, Hawaii.

THE QUEBEC Mercury is in the right of it when it denounces the expensive show of fuss and feathers at the opening of every Legislative session. The burning of powder and the roar of cannon, so far from making a Lieutenant-Governor a "big gun," rather provides a contrast not flattering to the grandeur and dignity of that ordinarily ordinary official.

The ability of Port Hope editors has lately been tried in the courts. All three have been trying their level best to libel each other. And with what result? One has been proved incapable; another, by his utmost efforts is declared to be able to damage a character only to the extent of twenty cents; while the capacity and vigor of the third are yet to be subjected to the legal test. But from the decisions already given it is likely he will be pronounced powerless, on the ground that he had no decent material to work with, and be dismissed with a reprimand for his folly in trying an utterly impossible thing. The combatants seem to have just enough judgment left to carefully refrain, 'mid all their ire, from any vain attempt to knock each other's brains out.

JUST now there is excitement in Toronto journalistic circles. The big papers are making a dead set at their troublesome evening contemporaries. The Mail issues from its office a small independent sheet, called the News, sold for a cent. The Globe is contented with a re-arrangement of its morning news, with afternoon additions—all for one cent. The News, taking advantage of the increase of the price of Globe and Mail, effected by a combination between these two papers, has begun the issue of a morning edition at a cent; and will doubtless secure a good share of public support in its plucky venture. It is rumoured that the Telegram will also shortly appear as a morning paper. The Globe-Mail syndicate is also about to threaten the country press by the issue of one-dollar weeklies. Lay on Macduff! Guess a country weekly with a head can hold its own against any paper run by a foreman with a scoop-shovel.

THE CONSERVATIVE PRESS is just now diligently endeavoring to make its wish bring forth the thought that Hon. Edward Blake is not cut out for a successful Premier of the Dominion. The hope is always accompanied with its twin feeling, fear. Blake will, if he lives, be Prime Minister of Canada; and if he cannot be a success, so much the sooner will the Conservatives return to power. Then why all this wringing of hands? It is because they see in him the Blake who broke the power of Sandfield McDonald, and who drew in living words that exquisitely sarcastic picture of him and Sir John, in his first speech at Ottawa. They see in him the power of personal character, and the triumph of public honesty and integrity. These attributes of the Reform leader shine so brightly that the electorate see thereby the contrast of blackness in the policy and practices of the Conservative leaders. The light of a great mind and a good character in our politics is displaying day by day the base material and faulty construction of the Tory fortifications. Hence those tears.

MIDLAND RAILWAY CHANGES.

(Condensed from the Port Hope News.)

The Midland Railway Directors have appointed, as mechanical superintendent, Mr. Marling, at present employed at the Intercolonial Railway works, Moncton, N. B. Mr. Tate, engineer, has decided to leave the Midland Railway. The appointment of a successor has not been finally decided. The construction of 100 flat and 60 box cars at the workshops has been authorized. Plans are approved for the extension of the workshops, and the introduction of a large quantity of new machinery, and it is decided that in future all cars, passenger or freight, required for the line, should be constructed at Port Hope. Plans for a new station at Port Hope are to be prepared immediately, so that if negotiations with property holders can be brought to a favorable conclusion, ere long there will be seen at that terminus, such station accommodation as the convenience and comfort of the public has demanded. The office of the secretary of the road, Mr. H. Read, will be removed to Peterborough, this step being rendered necessary from the fact of the President's office being there. Either Mr. Cox had to remove to Port Hope or Mr. Read had to go to Peterborough, so that under the circumstances the latter was decided on. One of the new locomotives from Portland will arrive this week, a second one ten days afterwards, and the other two in June and July. The superintendant, Mr. W. B. Ferguson, proceeds to Portland, Me., at once, to arrange for four additional locomotives, to be constructed and delivered with the least possible delay. The question of the wages of the men employed in the workshops has been so arranged that their pay is increased from the 1st of May. An offer for carrying 30,000,000 feet of lumber for one of the largest mill-owners on the Georgian Bay, who has been accustomed to send his lumber around by Buffalo, but now wants to send it to Midland City, and ship via the Midland Railway and Port Hope, cannot, it is feared, be accepted; as the Company have not sufficient rolling stock to carry much more than has already been contracted for. If the Directors could secure the locomotives and freight cars which they are now prepared to pay cash for, they would be able to contract for the removal of such a quantity of freight from the Georgian Bay as would render it necessary to run four times as many trains as have ever yet been run on that line. Such evidence of increased traffic and favorable prospects are seldom met with in the history of railroad enterprises.

SEEDS

ORMOND & WALSH

Are now fully prepared with their Spring supply of newly imported

Field, Garden and Flower Seeds.

Purchasers of Seeds must now be convinced of the disappointment experienced in buying seeds from boxes or packets already put up and placed in stores on commission, and in many instances transferred from place to place for years, before being sold; the disappointment experienced, not only from their non-vegetative power, but from the small quantity contained in each paper. To prevent these disappointments, Messrs. Ormond & Walsh sell the whole of their Seeds by weight, at a fair and moderate price, with a guarantee of their Freshness & Vegetative Power.

Special care has been bestowed in the selection of Flower Seeds. Stocks, Asters, Balsams, Phlox Drummondi, Larkspurs and Portulacca, have been received in the original packages, as imported. Other kinds in great variety.

Timothy, Clover, Vetches, Hungarian Grass, Seed and Millet, are strictly cash.

IT IS A FACT!

WORTH READING.

It is a fact that in presenting an advertisement for the perusal of the public, care should be taken to carry out what is advertised, and anything to the contrary only results to the disadvantage and loss of the Merchant who advertises. I have made it a rule to adhere strictly to the prices put in my advertisements, and the public will bear me out in what I say. It is a fact that the prices of my Goods always correspond with the prices advertised.

H. B. Weller, attorney, at Millbrook, has been gazetted a Notary Public.

Mr. Martin J. Griffin has assumed the managing editorship of the Toronto Mail.

Mr. Henry Wade, of Port Hope, as been elected Secretary of the Agricultural and Arts Association.

With pleasure we announce that Mr. Mr. M. Sanderson, Warden, lately laid up with rheumatism, is out again.

Rev. W. A. Hunter, of Parkdale, Toronto's most progressive suburb, favored us with a call on Thursday last.

Messrs. F. W. Fairbairn and T. Sullivan are among the successful candidates at the late primary examinations at Trinity Medical School.

Rev. Dr. Castle, to the great regret of his flock, leaves the pastorate of Jarvis St. Church, Toronto, to take the Presidency of the Baptist College.

Hon. Alex. Mackenzie has sailed for Europe for the benefit of his health. The Premier of Ontario went in the same steamer, to join Mrs. Mowat in England.

George H. Sills, of Belleville, has been appointed Bailiff of the First Division Court of the County of Hastings, in the room and stead of John Farlington.

Mr. Joseph Flavelle, of this town, accompanied by Mr. E. W. Cox and by Mrs. J. R. Dundas and Mr. J. D. Flavelle, of Lindsay, will shortly go on a trip to Europe.

Mr. Mackie, of the St. Lawrence Hall, Port Hope, has, in conjunction with Mr. W. Bingham, another well-known hotelman, taken hold of the American Hotel, foot of Yonge street, Toronto.

Mr. Joseph Walsh, lately connected with the Peterborough post-office, left on Tuesday for Souris River. His successor here is Mr. D. Gladman, from the Lindsay post-office.

Mr. Weatherston, the new Superintendent of the Grand Junction Railway, arrived at Belleville on Monday, in company with his fellow-officer, Mr. Watt, the new Freight and Passenger Agent.

Mr. James Watt, a first-class accountant, and a gentleman of large railway experience, has been secured for the important position of General Freight and Passenger Agent of the Grand Junction Railway. He will no doubt discharge the duties of the post acceptably.

Mr. James Fahey, once editor of the Port Hope Guide, but since then a fervent Conservative, has the editorial management of the Toronto News—the Mail's evening edition. He is assisted in city work by Mr. Kernighan, late of the World.

Bishop Sweatman has gone to England in order to seek a successor to the present Provost of Trinity College. He is accompanied by the Bishop of Ontario—both being members of the College Corporation. They intend to return by the end of June or beginning of July.

Mr. R. F. Tate has resigned his position as Chief Engineer of the Midland Railway, and will remove in a few weeks to Colorado, where we are glad to know he has secured a lucrative position as Resident Engineer of the Denver and Rio Grande R.R. Mr. Tate has been connected with the Midland Railway for ten years, and has made many friends for himself in this section. We regret to see so many of our young men leaving Peterborough; but hope it is for their own gain. Mr. Tate has our best wishes for his success, and we feel confident that he will make many friends in his new home.

The Winnipeg Daily Times of the 29th April contains the following:—"Among the arrivals of last evening are a number of prominent residents of Peterborough, Ont. A. F. Huffman, of the Huffman House, is here on a prospecting tour of the Prairie Province. He runs a first-class house when at home, and is a very popular host. Harry Calcutt, who also arrived, is a well-known brewer from the same town. He has been taking stock of the Silver Heights brewery to-day, and may shortly locate. Harry Rush, a leading liquor merchant, and Dave Henthorn, members of the same party, are also on a tour of the North-West. All express surprise at the size and business activity of Winnipeg, as they never expected to see a city of such magnitude in the Prairie Province.

A Real Necessity.—No house should be without a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil, in case of accident. There is no preparation offered humanity that has made so many permanent cures, or releived so much pain and misery. It is called by some the Good Samaritan, by others the Cure-all, and by the afflicted an Angel of Mercy. 17-2t

A bill is before the Pennsylvania Legislature providing "to use the services of constables to bring children before Aldermen who are growing up in ignorance." We need similar legislation in this country.

"Where have you been for a week back?" enquired a man of his neighbor; "I have not a weak back," retorted he. "You misunderstand me," remarked his friend; "but if you ever get a weak back try Burdock Blood Bitters. It cures all debility arising from disorded Kidneys, Liver or Blood, and is the best purifying Tonic in the world. All medicine dealers supply Sample Bottles at 10 Cents, Regular Size $1.00. 17-2t

USE "CASTORINE MACHINE OIL" for all kinds of machinery. It is also excellent for Harness and Leather, making it water and weather proof. For sale by dealers. 1-ly

Says the Detroit Evening News:—The protectionists both in and out of Congress declared that if the duty was taken off quinine the American manufacturers could not compete with the pauper labour of France, Germany, and England. The duty was taken off two years ago, and our American manufactories are not closed, but running to their full capacity, employing as many men as before the duty was removed and paying them higher wages, while the consumer gets cheaper quinine.

All forms of Nervous Debility so commonly prevalent, yield to the vitalizing powers of Burdock Blood Bitters. It is the best regulator of the Liver, Bowels and Kidneys; the most perfect Blood Purifier and permanent Tonic known. Purely vegetable, safe and pleasant to take, and unfailing in its effects as a health restorative. Sample Bottles 10 Cents 17-2t

The question of the Greek frontier is about settled. An Imperial irade has issued authorizing the Porte to accept the proposed solution of the difficulty. The Turkish evacuation will commence in three weeks and terminate in three months after the signature of the convention. Ordinary war material will be removed within three months, but six months will be allowed for the removal of heavy guns. The International Military Commission will have a general supervision of the evacuation, and will fix days and hours when the Turks are to withdraw and the Greeks advance.

A LOSING JOKE. A prominent physician of Pittsburg said jokingly to a lady patient who was complaining of her continued ill health, "Try Hop Bitters!" The lady took it in earnest and used the Bitters, from which she obtained permanent health. She now laughs at the doctor for his joke, but he is not so well pleased with it, as it cost him a good patient.—Harrisburg Patriot. 18-2t

Hamilton is a manufacturing city, and some of the wealthy capitalists of Hamilton have made large additions to their wealth by taking advantage of the protection of the tariff to charge higher prices for their goods than they could obtain in a market where foreign competition was admitted. Do the workingmen discern any willingness on the part of their employers to share those inordinate profits with them? By no means. A protective tariff is not good for the workingman. He cannot get any more wages, then he can force from his employer, whether that employer is making 10 per cent. or 75 per cent. on his investment.

The Liver, the Skin, the Kidneys and the Bowels, are the natural cleansers of the system; secure their healthy action by nature's grand remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters. It cures Scrofula—It cures Liver Complaint—It cures Dyspepsia—It cures Female Complaints and purifies the Blood while it restores strength and vitality to the shattered system. Trial Bottles 10 Cents. 17-2t

GIVEN UP BY THE DOCTORS.—Where doctors have failed to cure, and have given their patients up to die, Electric Bitters have often been used, and a cure effected, greatly to the astonishment of all. Diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Urinary Organs are positively cured by Electric Bitters. They invariably cure Constipation, Headache and all Bilious Attacks. Try them, and be convinced that they are the best medicine ever used. Sold by all druggists, at fifty cents a bottle. 18-1t

The value of medicines compounded by a thoroughly educated physician and scientific chemist must be apparent to all. As such we take pleasure in commending Dr. J. C. Ayer's Cathartic Pills. Public confidence in them has steadily increased, until now their use can be said to be universal. Great and permanent popularity does not come without merit. Our experience convinces us that Ayer's Pills are superior to any others in all the uses of which a cathartic medicine is employed. They are pleasant to take, and are perfectly safe, sure and effectual. Ayer's Pills satisfy all the requirments of a reliable family physic and their timely use undoubtely prolongs many lives and promotes the health and comfort of thousands. —Northern Ohio Democrat.

TO PUBLIC SPEAKERS.—Public speakers and singers who would possess a clear voice, freedom from hoarseness and sore throat, should use Hagyard's Pectoral balsam, a safe, pleasant and certain healer for the throat and lungs; it speedily breaks up a cold and cures all pulmonary complaints, that so often lead to incurable Consumption. 17-2t

In brief the Maine Law is working in just the direction its original promoters intended it should work, and though there is still plenty of room for improving its efficiency, no sane man can travel through the State with his eyes open and fail to note (1) that it has contributed much toward the material prosperity of the community; (2) that it has greatly improved the moral tone of society generally; and (3) that it has utterly banished every thing in the shape of drinking, and has made natives of the State essentially a sober community, from among whom all sorts of intoxicants have been banished in deference to public opinion if from no other cause.—[Prohibition Cor. Toronto Globe.

A GREAT CHICAGO ENTERPRISE.—The Laboratory for the manufacture of Electric Bitters is one of Chicago's greatest enterprises, giving employment to a large number of hands. The extensive sale already attained for this wonderful remedy is astonishing. Wherever once introduced and become known, it is almost impossible to supply the demand, because of their true merit—curing where all others fail—and at a reasonable price (fifty cents.)—Exch. 18-1t

Thos. D. Belcher, in a letter to the Montreal Gazette, says of the line of Trent navigation:—"For four months in the year, there is never less than 5ft. 6 in. on the mitre sills of the locks, and for three months we can get 7 ft. The carrying capacity of a barge with the present locks, 134 × 34 ft., is 15,000 bushels of wheat. The capacity of the Erie Canal locks is not more than 8,000 bushels, and it is the regulator of the carrying trade of the Union. There are, I am informed by the Hon. Mr. McAlpine, C.E., barges on the Mississippi, drawing not more than 3ft. 6in. water, with a carrying capacity of 100,000 bushels. The great question to be considered in the forwarding of grain to the seaboard, is "by what route can the greatest quantity be forwarded in the shortest time, and at the cheapest rate?" A "tow" of twelve barges=180,000 bushels, can get from Georgian Bay to Montreal in less than six days by the Trent route, and it is estimated to cost not more than 3c. per bushel. Is there any other route by which the same quantity of grain can be moved from, say the Straits of Mackinaw to Montreal, in the same time and at the same rate?

JOHNSTON CAREY,

SIGN OF THE RED BOOT, GEORGE STREET.

SISTER MONTHS.

When April tears gems for May.
Like diamonds all the rain-drops glisten;
Fresh violets open every day;
To some new bird each hour we listen.

The children with the streamlets sing.
When April stops at last her weeping,
And every happy growing thing
Laughs like a babe just roused from sleeping.

Yet April waters, year by year,
Help Leopard May her thirsty flowers;
And May, in golden sunbeams clear,
Pays April for her silvery showers.

All flowers of Spring are not May's own;
The crocus cannot often kiss her;
The snow-drop, ere she comes, has flown;
The earliest violets always miss her.

Nor does May claim the whole of spring:
She leaves to April blossoms tender,
That closely to the warm turf cling,
Or swing from tree-boughs, high and slender.

And May-flowers bloom before May comes,
To cheer, a little, April's sadness;
The peach-bud glows, the wild bee hums,
And wild-flowers wave in graceful gladness.

They are two sisters, side by side,
Sharing the changes of the weather,
Playing at pretty seek and-hide—
So far apart, so close together!

April and May one moment meet—
But farewell sighs their greetings smother.
And bruises tell, and birds repeat,
How May and April love each other.

Farm, Garden and Household.

Farm Hints.

Pip in hens is caused by exposure to damp or wet weather. Symptoms are: a short, quick, spasmodic cough resembling a chirp, with a stoppage of the nostrils, compelling the bird to respire through the mouth. It is not considered a disease in itself; but is a symptom, which, if not attended to and checked, will result in a catarrh, and oftentimes end in croup. Remove the bird to a dry, warm place. Wash out the mouth and nostrils with a weak solution of chlorinated soda, and mix cayenne pepper with the food.

An Illinois device for pulling stumps is a "triangle" of 3 by 4 material, about 8 feet long, with ends projecting like a St. Andrew's Cross. A strong log chain is put around the stump and then passed over the top of the triangle, (set near the stump,) and on to the whiffletrees. The instrument serves as a fulcrum by means of which the stump is pulled out by the draft of the horses. This triangle will answer for all small stumps up to 8 inches in diameter. A steady team is best, and the roots may require to be chopped.

Swamp muck is capable of being turned to valuable account as a manure. It should be dug out and thrown up in heaps to sweeten and dry. Then it may be used as an absorbent under cattle, in stables, or as a layer at the bottom of the manure cellar; or composted with barnyard manure; in the proportion of three loads of dry muck to one of manure. A compost thus made is an excellent fertiliser for all manner of crops.

Running daily in the fields and eating freely of dry stuff, is very hazardous to the life of cattle unless they have sufficien drink to soften the entire mass. No digestion can take place until the food is thoroughly moistened, and they should receive daily attention and water plentifully provided for their use.

Sufficient Farm Help.

If we start out in the spring to till a farm of a certain number of acres without sufficient help, then a part of the necessary work must be left undone or the work be only partially accomplished. Then is when the farmer has too much to do and gets behind with his work; neglect disturbs method, and all things are soon out of balance. Many farmers say they cannot afford to hire much help. It is as necessary to have sufficient help to carry on a farm successfully as it is to have any help. If help cannot be had, then let some farmer have a part of the farm to work; for the extra amount of land which cannot be properly tilled is so much land lying idle. The first thing is to provide the best tools for all kinds of work and sufficient team power to use them. Employ the best help, as skilled labor is the cheapest. Hiring cheap labor to save a few dollars does not pay, loss in damage to teams and tools more then off-setting any saving so made. It takes but a few hours for an inexperienced or careless hand to do much damage. Keep as much help as the farm requires. Start this spring with more help and till your land as it should be tilled; put the farm in proper shape; and when the year comes round figure up the difference, and see if money has been lost.

The Garden.

Sweet peas need scarce any care, will bloom early and late, even till frost comes, while their beauty, grace and odor are beyond question. Avoid mixed packages. They should be planted the same depth as garden peas. Brush is better than string for them to twine upon. Once in blossom they will make the whole summer delightful.

Mignionette deserves its French name of "poor man's darling." One great cause of failure with this and other seeds is that they are buried too deeply. It should be scattered on the top of the ground and a little fine, loose earth sifted lightly over it. Thus treated the likelihood is that it will come up too thickly, and need thinning. If it does, pull out the weaker plants as soon as they can be got hold of.

Put verbenas in the middle of your bed, and let them alone. Remember, they like a sandy soil, and are as averse to water as your favourite kitten. Let the sun shine on them; keep them clear of encroaching neighbors; cut off all the flowers, not even permitting one to go to seed; and they will be the wonder of yourself and everybody else that sees them.

Never tip up a heliotrope. Let it lie on the ground, and beware of dosing it with fertilizers. Fertilizers make very strong plants, with lots of fine foliage, but the flowers do not open well, and the clusters are small.

Roses need rich soil. You can make it rich with liquid manure water. Watch the bugs, which are death on roses.

For a background, get ferns, if you can, or a plant or two of mountain fringe. Failing these, plant a little carrot seed, and you will have a rich green background.

Household Hints.

In cleaning floors take clean, hot water, and put a teaspoonful of spirits of ammonia in a three gallon pailful, stir it, and with a clean, long-handled mop, scrub the floor all over, then wipe it off with clean water. It will take a little while to get the gray out of the boards, but it will come out after a time, and you will find it far easier to keep your floor white and nice than when it was cleaned with soap, which destroys paint, and gives an unpainted floor a grimy, dirty look.

To clean zinc rub it with a piece of cotton cloth dipped in kerosene. Afterward rub with a dry cotton cloth, and it will be as bright as when new.

Large bags made of brown wrapping paper will be found very convenient receptacles for many articles of wearing appearl which are not to be used for a season.

Girls, do you want to know how to freshen up your old cashmere dresses preparatory to making them over? First carefully rip every seam and pick out all the threads, shake and brush out the dust from pleating and ruffling of each seperate piece. Then to one pailful of warm water (say eight or ten quarts), add two ounces of aqua ammonia and sufficient bluing to make the water of a very dark blue. Should your dress be rusty you will need all the more bluing. Then take your basket of pieces and carry it out to your clothes-line, also your pail or small tub of water prepared as above. Take each piece separately, immerse thoroughly in the water, but do not wring it on any account, as it would leave creases which it would be almost impossible to press out. Hold for a moment over the tub to drip, then pin on the line, being very careful to place the goods with and right side toward the line, so that the pins will press the wrong side, as sometimes an imprint is made which is hard to remove if made upon the right side. Go on thus till all the pieces have been thoroughly immersed (or "soused up and down," as Bridget says). Then have a good fire with warm irons ready, and soon as the pieces are partially dry, still somewhat damp, iron them in the following manner: Take your ironing board and fold a thick woolen blanket so as to have six or eight thicknesses over your board; then take a dark woolen shawel and pin it over the folds of the blanket tightly around the board, to keep all in place. Never on any account use cotton sheets, as every wrinkle and crease shows, and leaves a glossy mark on your cashmere. Now, if your pieces are of the right dampness (and it is better that they be too damp than too dry) and pressed very carefully on the wrong side, you will be surprised to see how nice and fresh they will look.

BITS ABOUT BEACONSFIELD.

Most of the obituary notices of him made the mistake of giving as his birthday, December 21, 1805. In reality, he was born December 21, 1804. Not only has there been an uncertainty as to the time of his birth, but the place of his birth is absolutely unknown; it is not definitely known by whom he was taken to be baptized, and there is not the slightest record of his school life preserved. The story of his family is even attacked as fanciful, and apparently with some force. What is not so generally known, is that one of the playmates, or, at least, neighbors, of the little Jewish boy, was John Henry Newman. The Hebrew was to become the champion of the church, and the pious little Protestant the mainstay and ornament of English Romanism.

The anagrammatists, a couple of years ago, discovered that "Disraeli" made "I lead, sir," and "Gladstone"—"G. leads not." On the other hand, another cheap wit put it "Gladstone—Doesn't lag," while "Disraeli," made "Idle airs," and Beaconsfield in Latin, "Fidens calebs," and in English, "Colned Fables."

Several curious plagiarisms, or, at least, parallelisms, might be found in Lord Beaconsfield's books and speeches. The peroration of his speech on the Corn Law Bill (May 15, 1846,) was taken from Urquhart's "Diplomatic Transactions in Central Asia." In the first edition of "Venetia," a passage was "conveyed" from Macaulay's essay on Byron. His famous speech about "Extinct Volcanoes," seems to have been inspired by Hope's "Anastasius," a book of which there are traces to be found in "Tancred." Probably the most famous of the many phrases with which his name is connected, is that concerning the critics. "You know who the critics are,—the men who have failed in literature and art," is the expression, almost in the very words, of a thought which had already occurred to Balzac, Dumas the elder, Pope, Shenstone and Dryden. The last wrote, in his "Siege of Grenada:"

"Those who write ill, and those who ne'er durst write, Turn critics out of mere revenge and spite."

Old John Murray was the first to advise Benjamin to adopt literature as a pursuit. Benjamin was not only at the law office of Swain & Maples, where his attesting signature can be seen on many documents, but he also kept one or two terms at Lincoln's Inn. As a young man, the extravagance of his dress and smartness of his conversation made him known in society. A friend remembers his appearing thus at a dinner party:—In a black velvet coat, lace ruffles, black waistcoat, with a striking yellow embroidered design like a huge sunflower, dove-coloured trousers, patent-leather shoes, a half-score of rings, and two or three long gold chains displayed on his waistcoat, showing several handsome cameos. The lady whom he was escorting to dinner said, "Ben., this is too bad; are you Lord Mayor or a mountebank?" This youthful extravagance involved him in debt, and when he married, a large portion of his wife's fortune was required to meet his liabilities. He wrote "The Young Duke" to raise money for his Eastern tour. During the tour with Meredith, Disraeli was engaged to his sister, who died soon after. When Disraeli returned he was so fascinated with the Orient, he was asked why he did not stop there. He replied, "There are no politics in the East, and England would not be worth living in but for its politics.

Contrary to the general supposition, Lord Beaconsfield leaves a fair fortune, although the exact amount does not appear in his will. His wife brought him a good property, and he made something out of his books. Then the romantic old Mrs. Williams left him £40,000, on condition that she should be buried beside him at Hughenden. Mrs. Williams is buried in the same vault as his wife.

Disraeli called O'Connell a traitor. Coming to speak soon afterward O'Connell referred to it: "He calls me a traitor. Now when I speak of Disraeli as a Jew I do not wish to reflect upon his race, for better ladies and gentleman I have never met than among the Hebrews. There were miscreants among them, however, and it must have been from one of these that Disraeli descended. Indeed, I think that the name Disraeli, which his family wears, was borne by the impenitent thief who died upon the cross; and in that belief, I here and now forgive the lineal descendant of that impenitent thief who died upon the cross." The audience and the whole nation laughed. Disraeli fumed in vain.

Beaconsfield, in private life, especially with the ladies, was always a great favourite. His Lordship all his life was a devoted chevalier des dames, and has been heard to say that his respect for the ladies had won him as much success as anything else in his career.

It is told in one of the society papers by a lady who was staying in the same house with him only a year ago, that his presence there raised quite a riot between the children and their parents and nurses. The little ones would not go out for a walk with their proper guardians, because they wanted to go with him, and they could not be got to bed at night, because they insisted upon sitting up and making Lord Beaconsfield tell them some more fairy tales.

PEOPLE TORMENTED by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are thin, nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will find it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for bilious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and untimely decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class commends itself so strongly to nervous invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the dangers which threaten the debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which so many so-called tonics simply are. It so regulates the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the "Quinine Wine of Northrop & Lyman." Sold by all druggists

We make this statement, and give below testimonials from persons who have used it, to prove our statements. It is excellent for removing unnatural enlargements of any kind. It does not blister nor cause any sore. It has no equal, to our knowledge, for spavin, ring-bone, curb, callous, sprain, swellings, galls, lameness from whatever cause, and all enlargements of the joints, or any part of the body or limbs, and is also good for cuts, scratches, wounds, etc.

For man, it is a complete remedy, for Corns, Frost-Bites, or any bruise, Cut or Lameness.

Vivienne's Crime;

FOR LOVE OF HIM.

"Do, or we shall be late. We are starting for home to-day, you know, and I would not be late for anything—Jocelyn wants so to get home."

"She must be got to bed at once, Ethel," said the Doctor; "and—there is no help for it—we must trust Jane. Send her in."

The old servant came, glad to be consulted; and between her and Ethel, Vivienne was soon in bed, soothed and quieted.

When Ethel came down again, she found her father standing before the fire, moody, and anxious-looking.

"Mrs. Thornton will be glad of this; though it is a sad coming home," said she.

"Mrs Thornton will hear nothing about it, Ethel, until Vivienne is strong enough to tell us herself that she would like her return made known."

"But, father, she would be so thankful to hear it; and Jocelyn too—it would spare him his vain journey."

"I must judge what is best to be done in this matter, Ethel," replied the Doctor.

When days went by, and Vivienne did not get strong, nor even conscious of the faces watching her bed so closely, Doctor West and Paul took counsel together. Paul was a little harsh at first, but the Doctor conquered that. His motive was too strong to let him give way to his companion's fancies.

"Why should we turn against her? Let the past be past as far as we are concerned. I tell you, Paul, this woman has been crushed by a hand stronger than ours. I am mistaken if she will not soon appear before a higher court than we could bring her to. Let her rest."

"You think she will not live long? returned Paul.

"I do. I think her near to death now. From her wild talk when the fever rises, I should say she has been dying by inches ever since she has lived away from Jocelyn Thornton. I have hard work at times to listen composedly to her words. Ethel thinks her speech due to delirium. So it is, in one way. But her face tells how she has suffered. I intend to send for Jocelyn; let her have him by her bed for long or little, I would sooner go through it all again than keep them parted now."

Paul knew what he meant; his eyes softened, and he heard him to the end in silence.

So it was settled.

That very day a letter went to Jocelyn Thornton, calling him home in haste. "Vivienne has come back; you are wanted home at once."

That was all the Doctor took time to write. That it was all he needed to send, he knew well.

Ethel, a patient nurse, sitting in the sick room, counted the hours and the days till Jocelyn came. She longed for his coming then as she had never had longed in the days gone by, in the hope that it would bring calm and rest to the white face she watched so tenderly.

She had a great and tender pity for the restless Vivienne, who was for ever talking to her without knowing her, and called piteously—now in a whisper, now in a ringing cry—for Jocelyn—always for Jocelyn. No wonder Ethel wished him home.

CHAPTER XXI.

The days went swiftly by. It was drawing near to the time when Jocelyn Thornton might with reason be expected. Only once had Vivienne been conscious. All knew now that she was dying.

"No skill can save her now," the Doctor said. "And her life may be counted by hours only."

Vivienne seemed to know this, in a vague way, herself. Her dry eyes had well-nigh wept out all their tears; but the agony in her voice, when she called on Jocelyn to "come quickly; to come before she was dead, and could not see him." was harder to listen to than much weeping would have been.

"You know," she would say to Ethel, "I have so little time to stay, that if he is not here soon I shall not see him. His brother is here now; he is always here, and I don't want to see him; but he will not go away. And his face is white and still, awfully still. Will no one bring Jocelyn?"

So her voice went on, ringing through the quiet room, with a broken echo of its old music. Ethel, always by her, wept and prayed for this poor soul, slipping so fast away; blinded still, and with no thought but for human love, even then, with the one fearful change close upon her.

Late one night, as they sat in the darkened sick-room, Ethel and her father keeping watch together, the sound of wheels made their hearts beat.

"Can it be Jocelyn?

"I think so," the Doctor whispered. "Yes, it must be."

The wheels had stopped before their gate. The pale face on the pillow flushed hotly; the great dark eyes grew alight.

"That is Jocelyn! He has come! Oh, he has come at last!"

The Doctor was out quickly to see. It was Jocelyn—all that was left of him. The tall, gaunt man, haggard and worn, looked little like the Jocelyn he used to be. Even at the moment the Doctor had noticed this.

"Let me see her."

That was all he could say. He did not see the hand the Doctor offered.

"Yes, at once. But first——you must be prepared for a change."

The other looked at him in silence. Paler he could not grow, no more haggard; only his eyes questioned, "What change?" His lips could not.

"She has been very ill. She is not yet conscious; and——Be a man, Jocelyn; bear it as best you can, my poor fellow—she is dying."

The kindly voice broke down—the Doctor turned away. The pain, the pitiful pain, in the strong man's face, the awed, stricken look in his eyes, were more than he could bear to see.

They had turned into the little parlour, and, sitting down on the nearest chair, Jocelyn Thornton covered his face with his hands. The Doctor walked up and down the room, as was his wont when excited, seeming not to hear the loud gasping sobs, that all the pride of the man could not keep down.

How the time went neither knew. When Jocelyn Thornton raised his face again, it was bitterly calm, and his eyes were dry and bright. He looked at the Doctor, and the Doctor understood the mute appeal.

"Come with me now—she will be expecting you, perhaps."

The two men stole upstairs softly, passing with a stealthy tread into the hushed room where Vivienne lay moaning. By this time the flitting flash of reason was passed, and Vivienne did not know him. She called for him as he held her hands; she turned her face from his, to cry that Jocelyn was not coming.

Ethel slipped out of the room. Doctor West sat down again by the bed's head, and Jocelyn Thornton on the other side shared his watch. He was tired, dusty, faint with hunger and thirst, but he had no thought of these things—no thought of himself. All he knew then was, that he was watching the life ebb and fade away in the eyes he loved best on earth, and which now in the last hours had no gleams of reason in their dusky troubled depths.

Ethel stole in and out of the room at intervals. She and Paul were keeping watch in the parlour, for they knew the end was near. Doctor West had whispered so to Paul, and he had told Ethel.

Once, when Vivienne lay still and seemed to be sleeping, Jocelyn rose softly and crossed round to the Doctor.

"Will she be conscious at the last?"

"I can't say yet. If she wakens so, she will; if not, I'm afraid we can't expect it."

A man of the world this Jocelyn Thornton, but now the world for him was condensed in Vivienne, and she was fading from him. He could not forget the soul that was not dying—only changing its home. Subtle change, awful mystery!

One thought rose up before him, and haunted him all the night long: "Is she prepared to die?"

Had he known how prepared she was, it might have been more than he could bear. As it was, he was in torture. He remembered how Gilbert had looked forward to his last sleep, calmly sure of his hope. He had been little more than a boy when his father died, but he could recall the perfect peace of that going-away also. Would hers be like these, or different?

Once she stirred in her sleep. She was dreaming a dream that to her was all too real. Bending over her he heard the pale lips whisper, "I could not help it. I tell you I would do it again for love of him."

That was all; then there was a silence again, and he sat still and waited.

In the early morning, when the sky was all aflame, and the fresh breath of the new day stole into the quiet room like a blessing, Vivienne opened her eyes and knew him, as he bent above her, brimful of love and vain longing to keep her yet awhile, his darling Vivienne.

Then the poor thin face grew grand in its gladness; the wonderous eyes filled and brightened.

"Mine," she said, stirring feeble fingers that had not strength to clasp his, smiling on him tenderly with lips that grew pallid as they smiled.

He kissed them; he kissed the little cold fingers, raining hot tears upon them, and sobbing like a child over her, this one love of his life.

"Stay with me, Vivienne! Live for my sake!" he cried, not knowing what he said.

She lay and looked at him, the calm of strong joy in her face, where the past beauty was shining. Lips and eyes told him how gladly she would, if she could—how whole her love for him was even then, in her pain and weakness.

But, with a swiftness terrible to see, that look quickly faded. The eyes grew wild and wide with dumb fear; the lips parted gaspingly. She looked at him no more. She looked straight before her, with that awful horror stamping all life and grace and love out of her face.

Doctor West started forward to help her. He knew what that fixed look betokened. But she was past the help of human hands, however tender—past the power of human skill, however great. Her husband raised her in his arms, but the Doctor whispered to him to lay her back upon the pillow. He did so, and she was quiet for a time. Then, with a shiver, a cry, a pitiful struggle to hold fast to the hands that clasped hers, Vivienne Thornton passed from life into death.

Paul Knox changed his mind about going back to his work in London. He was not so greedy of money as he was wont to be, he told Ethel; and he intended practising economy in the country for the rest of his days. He had changed his ideas of how rich a man ought to be before he rested.

"You can go off to the Rectory any time you like now, Miss Ethel. I intend to keep your father company—a grand substitute!"

That he was a welcome substitute the Doctor's face testified.

Perhaps Herbert Grant was tired of waiting. Perhaps Ethel thought she had tried his patience long enough; at any rate, she took Paul at his word. She was married in June, and Paul Knox gave her away.

A great favourite this Paul had grown to be with all in Thornton. And when at the wedding breakfast he told the guests he was going to share the little stone house in future with his friend the Doctor, his words met a hearty reception.

"Stop there!" cried Doctor West, rising; "let me set my neighbors right, and introduce you to them afresh, and in your real name this time."

A little buzz rose at that time. Herbert Grant smiled like one who was in the secret, but Ethel opened wide eyes of suprise.

Paul Knox, sitting down in haste, knitted his brows a little, as though he would have been quite content to remain unknown.

"Most of you know," the Doctor went on, speaking slowly, with a voice full of strong emotion, "that old John West of the Hall had two sons."

"Yes, yes," one old gentleman assented audibly, "and one of them a bad one."

Paul Knox, next to the speaker, flushed.

"Good or bad, Mr. Holmes, he was a good man's son, and my brother; and here he is."

He brought his right hand down with a hearty stroke on Paul's shoulder, and the love in his gray eyes shone out with a rare glow.

Then arose a babble of voices, surprised and glad, in the midst of which Paul Knox West was right warmly welcomed to Thornton.

"I could not well love you more than I do, uncle Paul," said Ethel, her fair face upturned to his with the tears of the parting on it; "but I am very glad to know that you are my father's brother; it gives me a right to love you that I like to have."

The dark face bent over her was pale and red by turns; and the bearded lips she had known so mocking quivered a little as they kissed hers.

"Heaven bless you," he said, "and keep you! Bring her back soon, Grant," he cried, as the carriage rolled off. "Thornton will seem empty till she is here again."

CHAPTER XXII., AND LAST.

Jocelyn Thornton did not leave home again, as his mother had dreaded he would. He stayed quietly in the old house with her; for, dismal and gloomy as the place had grown to be, it was still his own home.

When Herbert Grant and Ethel came back from their wedding tour, the first face to meet them on the platform of the quiet little station, the first hand held out to them in welcome, was Jocelyn Thornton's.

His heart, in his loneliness, clung to Ethel. This fair girl, who had once been his promised wife, had never in his eyes seemed so dear as now. She was a golden, living link, bringing the dead past near to him. Gilbert had loved her; Vivienne, dying, had crept to her door. Has she been other than she was, this is enough to bind his heart, sore and lonely else, fast to her.

Tears sprang into Ethel's eyes when she saw him—he was so changed. Careless Jocelyn he no longer was. His tall figure stooped, his clear eyes were dim; a patience sadder than grief was in his face, and on his lips.

Riding with them to the Rectory, through the crowded village street, more eyes than Ethel's noticed how worn he looked, how old, alongside of stately Herbert Grant, radiant at this happy home-coming.

People had talked a great deal of late in Thornton village. It was a gossiping place at the best, as all such places are. The day Vivienne was laid in her grave, Thornton tongues had gone more busily to work than usual even. "She was not buried with the Thorntons, as she had the right to be."

Long ago, in the first happy days of their marriage, when parting and death seemed so far from them, and when, like children, they had talked of the things that almost frightened them, she had told Jocelyn that she would not like to be buried in the vault of the Thorntons when she died.

"Let me lie in the little churchyard on the hill," she said to him—"among the long grass and the daisies: I could rest best there."

When she was dead he remembered those words, spoken in an idle mood, with her head on his breast, as they talked together amid the silence and solitude of the Scotch hills. To him her desire was sacred for ever. So she lay, as she had wished, on the breezy hill-side, where the purple shadows and the golden glares daily chased each other. The little daisies starred the tall grass above her, and the wind, blowing in from the sea, passed over her simple resting-place.

Many in Thornton wondered at this, many talked of it, and guessed darkly at the possible reason why Vivienne had wished to lie apart, even in death, from the race she had made hers the day she married Jocelyn Thornton.

Perhaps her husband came to hear some of their gossip. Perhaps a vague surmise had ripened into a dread belief in his heart. Certain it is that from that day he aged fearfully.

His mother, garrulous in her grief, would have talked of poor Vivienne, this woman who had only come back to die; but he would not hear a word. Her name he never mentioned. That he had forgotten her, who would believe? The beautiful girl whose face lived in his heart, mixed with the memory of music, flowers and all things sweet—how could he forget her?

Ethel, with her woman's instinct, knew well that he could not. Herbert Grant knew so also; but he had a far different ground for his belief.

So the years sped on.

Doctor West and his brother grew old men together, in a calm that to them was true happiness.

Mrs. Thornton in course of time died, and was buried beside her son. And henceforth Jocelyn, stately, grave-faced Jocelyn, lived alone.

Did he ever, in those days, seeing the Rector's beautiful wife in her sunny prime, wish that he had given Gilbert his will, and kept his promise to Ethel West? Did he ever have a longing stir in his heart for the touch of baby fingers, the shrill cry of baby voices in his quiet, lonesome house? Or was that old love the one love still? Did the dead face, in its cold beauty, eclipse all other faces, living and bright?

Who shall say? Which of us knows our own heart? How much less do we know the hidden thoughts of another's! Certain it is, Jocelyn never married again.

Ethel had a baby daughter, a tiny, golden-haired, violet-eyed girl, full of pretty baby ways, brimming over with gladsome, baby laughter, that could not fail to win love. She had a son too, a sturdy little fellow, tall of his age, and grave-faced already, like his father. But with Jocelyn Thornton, favoured and favourite visitor at the Rectory, baby Ethel is pet.

"She shall be my heiress, if she lives," he said to Doctor West one day, as the two stood and watched the little body running about on the grass at their feet.

"Her mother could not refuse me this one pleasure, I am sure. At least," he said, speaking more to himself than the Doctor, "the old house shall have an Ethel for a mistress. If Gilbert were here, he would like it to be so."

The Doctor was glad to hear it. Not that he coveted these broad lands for his darling, tiny Ethel, who somehow seemed to have crept into her mother's place in his heart: rather, out of kindness to this lonely Jocelyn, was he glad. He understood the feeling that prompted the wish. This was the one atonement Jocelyn could make to the living and the dead for the hard part he had once played; and Doctor West would not stand in the way of his making it.

Talking it over with Paul, he said so.

"I saw he had set his heart upon it—it will do him a real good too; and do you know, Paul, I think he has somehow got to suspect the real reason of poor Vivienne's sudden flight; for, if you notice, he never names her to any one, and his whole nature has changed, as no common grief could have changed it."

"I think so too," said Paul; "I have long imagined it."

"Poor fellow! it is the drop that brims his cup. He bears it well, and no one but ourselves—ah, yes, Grant knows something of it. I am sure he does, though he has never said so to me. But Ethel knows nothing whatever of the tragedy in which, without dreaming it, she played not the least prominent part."

"Poor little Ethel!" exclaimed Paul, with a smile. "She is just the same as she ever was, guileless and pure. And I am sure, if we were to tell her of that one dark bit in Vivienne Thornton's life, she would think we had gone mad. After all, it is just as well that she knows nothing of it, for how fearfully near it once was to ruining her life and yours!"

Was Doctor West right? Did Jocelyn Thornton know of that stain on the soul of the woman he had loved with a love strong and true, and that in its entirety was passing the love of men?

No one might tell, if he did. Her picture, painted by Paul Knox, hung in his study, where he chiefly sat. No one, seeing him look up at it, as he so often did, with his sad eyes, the patient calm of his face unbroken, might ever guess if he knew of, or had forgiven, the crime of the woman whose soul had gone outshivering into darkness, heavy with the load of sin, self-borne, and that too FOR LOVE OF HIM.

TELEPHONIC.—Says the Intelligencer:—"Peterborough possesses one luxury which Belleville should have possessed long ago; that is, a telephonic system. They have in the former town some thirty-five Bell telephones in use, with a central office, and all the appliances necessary to an efficient system of telephonic communication. They would almost as soon think of dispensing with their telephones now as of cutting off their telegraphic communication with the outside world.

THE BELLEVILLE VISITORS.—Of the Belleville Oddfellows who visited Peterborough last week, the Ontario says:—"All are loud in their praise of the manner in which they were treated by the Peterborough citizens. Particularly is this the case with the members of the band; who speak very highly of the treatment at the hands of the Fire Brigade Band of Peterborough, and promise, should a chance be afforded them, to try and reciprocate the generous treatment." The Intelligencer bears similar testimony.

"LITTLE SCOTLAND,' an entire thorough-bred cart-horse, the property of Messrs. Gamsby and Marshall, and the taker of numerous prizes at fairs in this part of the country, will travel this season the following route:—From Cavanagh's Hotel, Peterborough; Jos. Jackson's, Otonabee; Arch'd Shearer's Otonabee; Gall's Hotel, Keene; R. Jackson's Mount Pleasant; and along the Smith Town line. Colts descended from this horse have been prominent as prize-takers and have generally sold at long prices.

PRESBYTERIAN. — The Presbyterian Synod of Toronto and Kingston met on Tuesday evening at Bowmanville. This session is looked to with more than usual interest from Peterborough, owing to the appeal of Col. Haultain of this town, coming before it, for decision on the Hammond question, raised between the two congregations of St. Andrew's and St. Paul's churches here. Rev. D. J. Macdonnell, of St. Andrew's, Toronto, declined the nomination for Moderator, and proposed Rev. John Smith, of Erskine Church, Toronto, who was unanimously elected.

THE SPRING TRADE.—I am now prepared to show a nice assortment of fresh new goods suitable for Spring and Summer use. New Dress goods in blacks and colors, prints, cottons, table linens, towels, sheetings, cretonnes, white and coloured quilts, lace curtains and smallares, new tweeds, worsteds, broad cloths, ducks, derries, flannels, collars and union shirtings. New ready-made clothing, rubber coats, shirts, collars, scarfs, ties, braces, handkerchiefs, new felt and straw hats, caps, new boots and shoes for men women and children. Fresh new teas, coffees, spices, sugars, syrups, tobaccos, bacon, lard, new crockery and glassware. Inspection invited by everyone. W. J. WALLACE, Lakefield. 14-tf

At the Millbrook spring fair on Monday the show of horses was not so great as usual. The judges were: A. McQuade, Omemee; J. S. Ceaser, Port Hope, and Wm. Bennet, Peterboro'. The following is the prize list: Heavy draught—1st, Graham's Heart of Oak, General purpose 1st, S. Staples' Hobey Noble; 2nd, McLean's Central Jock. Roadster Stallion—1st, Wm. Staples' L. H. Daniels; 2nd, Elliott & Gordon's Royal George. The show of bulls was good, and the judges, Jas. Mitchell, Port Hope; Chas. Garbutt, Port Hope, and James Wood, Colborne, awarded prizes as follows:—Durham, aged—Garndy & Dundas. Durham, two year old—Wm. Benson. Durham; year old—Wm. Redmond, 1st and 2nd.

A MODEL PICTURE GALLERY.—By the enlargement of his photographic rooms Mr. T. Esterbrook has secured a rare combination of advantages of space, light and comfort, while his arrangements of dressing, operating and finishing-rooms go far to ensure a satisfactory picture. His ample show-room and a plentiful supply of scenic accessories give every opportunity for a choice of styles, of which many are shown. The latest photographic novelty, a statuette picture, has met with considerable public approbation. Mr. Esterbrook also makes enlarged pictures in colors—crayon, water or oil—and attends to all orders for mounting and framing. With the advantages offered by such an establishment the people of this town and its neighborhood can feel assured of getting at home photographs quite as good as in city studios.

ARRESTED.—Some days ago Michael O'Neill, of Smith, swore out an information against James Hogan, well-known in this locality as a Parliamentary candidate, and a warrant was issued for the arrest of the accused. The charge was one of obtaining money under false pretences, in having last October taken from the complainant and retained a payment upon a mortgage held by a Toronto Loan Company, for which the accused had acted as appraiser. Constable Johnston, armed with the warrant, went to his residence to arrest the person named in the document; but found that he had left home. The telegraph was put into requisition, and a message was received from Toronto on Tuesday announcing the arrest of Hogan in that city, whither Constable Johnston departed the same day to bring down his prisoner. The inquiry into the particulars of the case will no doubt create great interest hereabout.

ANNIVERSARY. The Rev. Mr. Clark, of Lindsay, preached an excellent sermon on Oddfellowship to the members of Peterborough Lodge on Sunday evening last in the George-street Methodist Church. The rev. gentleman in his remarks explained that the principles of Oddfellowship were those of humanity and religion, its object being to promote the general good of mankind and spread abroad the light of morality and knowledge. Sixty-two years have just passed since the birth of American Oddfellowship, and now over five hundred thousand men are among its votaries. The principles of the order teach in the most beautiful and forcible manner the important lesson of fraternity—that all men are of one family, and therefore brethren. The great duties of the order are to visit the sick, to relieve the distressed, to bury the dead, to educate the orphan and to aid the widow, and in obedience to these commands over four million dollars have been expended during the past year for those noble purposes. The congregation was very large, the church being filled.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY. For the speedy cure of Consumption and all diseases that lead to it, such as stubborn Coughs, neglected Colds, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Asthma, pain in the side and chest, dry hacking cough, tickling in the throat, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, and all chronic or lingering diseases of the throat and lungs, DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY has no equal and has established for itself a world-wide reputation. Many leading physicians recommend and use it in their practice. The formula from which it is prepared is highly recommended by all medical journals. The clergy and the press have complimented it in the most glowing terms. THE TOWN AND COUNTY.

BRIDGES—SHADE TREES—PARK.

The joint Committee of the Town and County Councils having in hand matters of mutual interest to both corporations held a meeting in the Town Hall on Tuesday afternoon.

The bridges over the Otonabee river formed the first matter of consideration. It was decided that the Iron Bridge be re-floored and painted, and that the Locks' Bridge undergo necessary repairs, and receive a new coat of tar. Tenders are to be invited for these works.

The Court House grounds are, by resolution of the committee, to be planted with trees.

The Public Park question was also taken up and a sub-committee was appointed to confer with the County and Town Councils on the propriety of selling the old Cemetery Grounds with a view to devoting the proceeds toward the purchase of a Town Park.

COMFORT FROM CETEWAYO.

King Cetewayo has addressed a remarkable letter to Queen Victoria respecting affairs in South Africa. He very kindly asks her to cheer up and not be at all despondent in consequence of the reverses which her forces sustained at the hands of the turbulent and disloyal Boers. He assures her the Boers will soon flee and beg for peace, but adds that they should be punished for their flagrant and unjustifiable disobedience to the Queen. Cetewayo, expresses surprise that the British should send so few men to take such strong positions, and makes very sharp, pregnant criticisms upon the tactics of the English General. He concludes: "How can the Boers, who are dogs, make head against the superb forces of your Royal Highness?"

WARNER'S BLOOD PURIFIER.

The season is at hand when most people require to take such medicine as will cleanse the liver and stomach of the impurities which are not generally discharged by nature alone, but which must be removed, in order that those organs may perform their functions thoroughly. The most successful agents in such work are often the simplest, and in Warner's Blood Purifier are combined the three qualities of Simplicity, Safety and Success. A course of this valuable medicine just at this time of the year, has the desirable and certain effect of gradually but thoroughly purving and afterward regulating the stomach, liver and bowels and of cleansing the blood, and in this lies the grand secret of the enjoyment of health.

It is hinted that the Quebec Government, as soon as the thirty days necessary to secure for members their indemnity have elapsed, will court an adverse vote on some side issue, in order that they may demand a dissolution of the House and an appeal to the people, thus stifling all enquiry by Parliament into the many charges against the administration of the Provincial Railway.

WORSHIPERS OF ST. PATRICK

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

SIR,—One of your down-town contemporaries has suddenly awakened to the desirability, nay, the necessity, of forming, forthwith, a St. Patrick's Society in our good town of Peterborough, and, while recounting over orators and sample men, bewails, in doleful lay, the absence of a representative of St. Patrick and Ireland, at the annual national meetings of the sister societies amongst us. "Pity the sorrows, etc." The organ is no doubt very solicitous for the honor and glory of St. Patrick, and for the advancement, position, and welfare of his children at home and abroad. Anyone reading its weekly columns during the past, cannot fail to observe this. It is very kind of this influential journal! It would of course be naughty to question the purity, patriotism and disinterestedness of its motives, or challenge the genuine feeling of Irish nationalism and devotion to the doctrines of St. Patrick, that swell to overflowing the doughty bosoms of these prototypes of Irishmen, par excellence, trotted out for our admiration and leadership, to wit:—Messrs. Belcher, Kincaid, Lundy, Morrow, Garvey, etc. "O, Tempora! O, Mores!" "Departed shades of our venerated fathers, etc." What a specimen of valiant Irish Land Leaguers! Only one of the aboved named gentlemen, I understand is to the manor born; but, anywhere born, art and nature combined could not make out of them all half an Irishman. Some of there folk are said to be cute, and noted for possessing an easy, accomodating turn of mind when Irish nationality is sometimes spoken of; others for occasionally making a show of generous liberality. But that there is a single spark of true inwardness, of true Irish feeling, sympathy or patriotism, true love for the cause of Ireland and her sons wherever exiled, or one tinkle of the genuine ring of the real article about them, no Irishman "racy of the soil," knowing them, will for a moment believe. The fact is there is a little game at the bottom of this thing. The wily aspirant for political honors is wide-awake; but too eager. It wont work. The veil is too thin.

TIP.

THE PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY RAILWAY.

(From the Picton Times.)

When the McMullen Bros. a short time ago purchased the Prince Edward Co. Railway it was generally understood that early steps would be taken by them to make it something more than a mere local road to accomodate the way business between the termini. Their well known ergy and business capacity, together with the fact that they had business relations with a number of active and wealthy men in the United States, warranted this conclusion. The result has justified the hopes that were formed. The development of the iron mines of North Hastings is about to receive a new impulse from the fact that some of the richest deposits have passed into the hands of wealthy Americans who will work them vigorously, and the McMullens have set themselves about securing a portion of the carrying trade which must result therefrom. They obtained a character from the Ontario Legislature to extend their line northward from Trenton to the iron region, and a short time since, secured running powers over the Grand Junction. The latter is very important, as it will ultimately give them connection with the railway system centering in Peterboro, and thence westward with Sault Ste. Marie, over the line recently subsidized by the Ontario House, and which will be built immediately.

To secure the iron trade this season a line will be built at once from El Dorado, the present northern terminus of the North Hastings road, westward through the iron beds, some 18 or 20 miles; also a spur line of about a mile and a half from a point near Carrying Place, to Weller's Bay, where a shipping wharf will be constructed. The iron ore will thus in a few weeks be shipped by the trains of the Prince Edward road from the beds, over the North Hastings to Belleville, the Grand Trunk to Trenton, and the Prince Edward to Weller's Bay. As soon as possible the construction of the line northward from Trenton, under the charter of last session, will be commenced, but it will take at least a year for its construction. It will follow the most direct route possible from Trenton to Marmora, crossing the Trent river at Frankford. As soon as it is completed the ore will of course be shipped by it instead of the rather roundabout route to be followed this season. Towards the construction of this line the Grand Trunk is going to assist in the way of guaranteeing the bonds, and Mr. Hickson has further instructed his Chief Engineer to have a survey of the route made at once. The Grand Trunk is largely interested in the construction of the Sault line, and the traffic from the latter point will pass over a portion of the northern extension of the Prince Edward road and join the main line of the Grand Trunk at Trenton.

Hon. Jay A. Hubbell, of Houghton, Michigan, one of the wealthiest and most influential members of Congress, who is associated with the Messrs. McMullen in their enterprise, was in town on Monday. He has made a fortune in iron mining in Northern Michigan, and will be able to direct and control a large share of traffic over the Sault line. He has gone to visit the Marmora district and will return in a day or two. He is fully impressed with the importance of the scheme, and is willing to invest a large amount of money in it.

Grinding Wheat in Bond.

The millers who grind wheat for export are striving hard to make the farmers believe that they are benefitted instead of being injured by the regulation, of a Protectionist Government, which admits the evasion of an import duty on foreign wheat brought in for consumption in Canada. Why then is the farce persevered in of a duty on wheat at all? By the promise of such a measure of so-called "protection" the votes of farmers were secured at the last general election for Protectionist candidates. The worthlessness, to say nothing of the hollow deceit, of such a promise was pointed out at the time by THE EXAMINER and other journals in accord with the trade theories of enlightened and experienced Britain; but the warning was then unheeded. The farmers of Ontario can see now, very easily, who were their most earnest and disinterested friends at that time. The very men who filched their electoral support by false assurances of "protecting" them from the competition of American wheat in the Canadian markets now actually encourage the importation of such wheat, its grinding, and the sale and consumption of the flour made from it, in Canada; and that, too, without the exaction of a cent of duty. In this way is fulfilled the publicly-uttered promise of Sir John Macdonald, the N. P. Chieftain, that, even in times of scarcity, no American wheat would be allowed to come in free of duty, "till the last bushel of Ontario wheat was sold in the market."

We are recalled to the consideration of this subject by letters lately published over the names of George C. Rogers, of Ashburnham, and Wm. Lukes, of Toronto; both exporting millers, and importers of American wheat free of duty; both, therefore, direct benefitted by the regulation which permits them to unload on the Canadian market any amount of flour made from American wheat, and escape the payment of duty by the export, in their names, of an equivalent amount of the product of Canadian flour, at any price. Such men can hardly be accepted as disinterested advocates of the cause they so boldly champion.

Our Ashburnham importer begins by asserting the inferiority of Canadian as compared with American wheat. We might remind him of the eagerness with which a certain statesman has been assailed as unpatriotic because of references to advantages the United States as a country possesses over Canada; but prefer to meet him on the grounds of necessity. If it be necessary to have American wheat in Canadian mills, why should the miller be exempt from the payment of duty on his raw material more than any other manufacturer? If wheat is to be freely admitted, as a necessity, all other necessaries should receive like treatment, and the Protective tariff be thus swept away. Cottons, woollens, sugars, and scores of other commodities are necessaries to hundreds of farmers and workingmen; whereas American wheat is a necessity only to a few millers who would monopolize the trade in flour. That we are not wrong in this estimate of the intention of the grinders in bond is readily proven from Mr. Rogers' own letter, when he pleads for the capital invested in flour mills, and for its encouragement, "as much as possible," because it has built up large cities like Minneapolis and other milling centres the idea is to build up milling centres, at no matter what expense to the smaller millers; at any price of treachery to the farmers.

The Toronto grinder in bond, and free importer of American wheat, Mr. Lukes, contents himself by penning a little fiction, in which a poor farmer is represented as unable to sell his grain except at a sacrifice, because the local millers have no orders for fall wheat flour, and because the local grain dealer has on hand a large stock, which he is kindly represented as having bought at a high price, with the expectation of trading on the local millers' necessities. Then sleep-lessness, and all such "touching" incidents are worked into the story, in order to throw into bold relief the climax of joy created by an order for the dealer's wheat, and its grinding by the local miller, coming from a distant grinder in bond, who wants flour to export, to relieve him from paying duty on 18,000 bushels of American wheat—from which he had made 4,000 barrels of flour, for direct consumption. In Mr. Lukes' little story the effect is cleverly put before the cause. Just reverse the incidents, and see how it looks. The free importation of 18,000 bushels of American wheat and the precipitation on the market of 4,000 bushels of flour made from it, very naturally shut off the sales of the unfortunate local miller and "hung up" the wheat of the careworn local dealer; and the binding of their hands reflected on the poor farmer, who "pays for all;" and who, with the local miller and grain-dealer had been led to believe that he would be "protected" by a strictly-exacted duty on American grain.

In thus turning Mr. Lukes' fable right-end-foremost, and referring as we have done to Mr. Rogers' necessity doctrine, we don't desire to be understood as having modified our belief that no fiscal regulations can protect the farmer or workingman, who have only their labor and its direct results to bring into the worlds' market. But we do wish to reiterate our detestation of the delusions of the Protectionist theories; to point out that the changes already wrought in the operations of the N. P. tariff show their weakness; and to again remind our readers that all such changes—all such interferences with the natural laws which regulate trade—are hurtful to the community and the country, however much they may enable a few favored ones to play for a time a profitable game of grab.

Port Hope Pettishness.

If there is one evil more than another, to which can be traced Port Hope's slowness of progress and lack of prosperity, it is that of pronounced and perpetual pettishness on the part of those whom it is content to call its leading citizens. The mischief has been aggravated and extended by the acceptance of the pettish persons as popular exponents, instead of having them severely and effectually "sat upon" in the first instance; so that instead of a breadth of view and liberality of mind in consonence with the rare natural beauties of the place, the pretty town by Ontario's shore has attained an unenviable notoriety as the abode of illiberality, and grasping selfishness, displayed alike in the conduct of its internal affairs and in its intercourse with the outside world. Even its newspapers have caught the nasty infection, and are thoroughly characteristic of the leading attributes of the population in the midst of which they are published; thereby encouraging, instead of striving, as they should do, to correct, a thoroughly evil tendency. When they have no fancied outside grievance at which to carp, they are eager to fight among themselves.

The latest display of Port Hope pettishness is comprised in an attempt to interfere with the free-action of the President of the Midland Railway Company, under whose able management the road has been wonderfully improved in financial standing and efficiency, greatly to the advantage of Port Hope, as its terminal point on Lake Ontario. At a late meeting of the Directors, it was decided that, as the President resides at Peterborough, the interests of the Company would be better served by having the Secretary with him continually; and accordingly the removal of that officer to Peterborough from Port Hope, was determined upon. But Port Hope pettishness had not been counted upon. It now advances itself in the shape of Mr. David Marshall, Chief Constable of Port Hope, who assumes to be a guardian of his town in all conceivable ways. He, we are informed, has applied for an injunction in Chancery, to prevent the moving of the Midland Railway Company's Secretary from Port Hope. He bases his application on the following statutory declaration, from 43 Vic., Chap. 57, Sec. 25:—

"The head office of the said Company shall be at the Town of Port Hope, in Canada, and the property, affairs and concerns of the said Compony shall be managed and conducted at the said Town of Port Hope."

Now this David is certainly far from being a Solomon, else he never would have confounded the head office of the company with the Secretary of the road. If he, or any of his admirers in this last of his many Quixotic tilts, will turn to 24 Vic., Chap. 17, Sec. 6—still in force—he will find that "the expression 'Railway Company' includes all parties owing, leasing or working any railway." By the Railway Act of Ontario (Con. Stat., p. 1490) it will also be discovered that the officers cannot be directors; and are consequently not included in "the Company," the time and place for the general meeting of which is specified in the Special Act. It would therefore have been more reasonable to have applied for an injunction to compel the President of the Company to reside in Port Hope, and thus to have come straight at the purpose,—absurd as such a proposition may appear. So long as the business of "the Company" is transacted from Port Hope, we take it that it matters little, legally, where the Secretary or any other officer may reside.

The clause on the wording of which the learned Chief Constable of Port Hope bases his application to the Court of Chancery was enacted in lieu of one in a former Act, which repealed clause read:

"The head office of the said Company shall be at the City of London, in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the property, affairs and concerns of the Company shall be managed and conducted at the said City of London."

Would the pettish Premier Pettier of Port Hope have been so eager under that clause to remove the Secretary of the road to London, England, as he is now to prevent his departure from Port Hope? Hardly!

This action in Port Hope, to hamper the free action of the management of the Midland Railway in doing what is found best for the business of the road, can do no harm to the Company, and nothing but harm to Port Hope. Even should it be necessary, legislation could be procured to enable the Company to move, not only its Secretary, but its "head office" and seal, from Port Hope to any desired place on the face of the globe. Petty officiousness on the part of Port Hopers may result in even greater disaster than that to their picturesque town, but where "In vain with lavish kindness the gifts of God are strewn."

By inviting attention to sectional advantages, Port Hope may easily be the loser of the greatest gain conferred on it by the Midland Railway:—the Company's workshops,—for which a more convenient position could be found, either at Peterborough or Lindsay; and probably would have been found years ago, were it not for the expense connected with removal and the erection of new buildings. The Midland Railway Company may, in dealing with Port Hope, follow the suggestion of the Indian Doctor in reference to a petulant patient, "Tink he sick; best make um sick."

Municipalities and Railways.

The announcement that the Prince Edward County Railway had secured running powers over the Grand Junction line, and that the Grand Trunk Railway Company is prepared to assist in making connections and extensions of the first-mentioned road, has created excitement not only in Trenton, but in Belleville. As a part of the scheme for connecting Weller's Bay directly with the iron mines of Madoc and Marmora, the Grand Trunk Railway Company is said to have offered $700,000 for the Grand Junction line as it now stands. Mr. J. B. McMullen, one of the owners of the Prince Edward County Railway, is not backward in stating his determination of reaching the iron mines one way or another, sooner or later. If the Grand Junction line cannot be bought or used on favorable terms the intention is to push forward the extension of the Prince Edward line. The promoters of this scheme profess to have large monetary interests at their back, including the approbation of the mining operators, who seek a ready outlet for their ore. Belleville fears this enterprise as one which, if successful, will cut off its hopes of being the out-port for the iron mines. It looks with desire to the amalgamation of the Grand Junction line with the Sault Ste. Marie route, whereby its position as a terminus and a shipping port may be preserved.

This agitation and conflict of railway interests presents one prominent feature particularly instructive to municipal corporations. It not only shows the utter unreliability of any permanent advantage from bonuses granted to railways, or any other private enterprise; but also demonstrates the probability that any such institution receiving municipal money, may by competition or combination, in a few years, or even months, be so changed as to be useless, or even injurious, to the place which has presented it with capital. Instances in proof of this view can easily be adduced; and it would be well did all communities and Councils weigh well and calmly the possibility of accidents or other circumstances upsetting and completely turning the tables upon any pet scheme, however promising may be its mode of presentation.

East Durham.

By the death of Mr. John Rosevear, the representation of East Durham in the Ontario Legislature becomes vacant. There will doubtless be a scramble among the many aspirants in the Riding, on both sides of politics, for the party nominations; and it is probable also that one or more candidates will take the field on the simple platform of his or their own considered virtues, as has been the case of late years. We hope, however, that the Liberals of East Durham will this time be enabled to unite upon a standard-bearer, and support him unanimously and with such good result as they did their nominee for the Commons in 1872. Only united action then won a Reform victory for them; and want of such union has rendered their efforts in every subsequent contest feeble and abortive. Personal differences, personal ambitions and personal claims, should now, as then, be sunk before the grander demands of political principles,—among which party fealty ranks high, and is of paramount importance, so long as the man continues to profess adherance to the party. Eagerness for the fray is a virtue in a single candidate claiming the party's support, and may with advantage be encouraged; but when it is openly divided among two or more aspirants, its power is nullified, and the virtue becomes a weakness to the party. The best man is he who is ready to retire in favor of his fellow—not his rival—who is perfectly willing to bow to the behest of the party convention; and, if so called upon, to work as heartily and fight as indefatigably for his political friend as he would have done for himself had the decision been in favor of his own candidature. Strive as strongly as he may, in honor, within a convention for the choice, he should never advance his contentions outside; for in so doing he becomes a real renegade and a positive enemy to his party. A victory at the polls is the one aim in entering upon an electoral contest. This can only be secured, especially by the Liberals of East Durham, by solidly uniting upon one man, be he who he may, and polling for him every Liberal vote in the Riding. What they did nine years ago they should be able to do again; if all act up to their name of Liberals.

The Late John Rosevear.

Mr. John Rosevear, M. P. P. for East Durham, who had for some time been severely ill of degeneration of the liver, died at his residence, Lot 7, Con. 2, Hope Township, near Port Hope, last Thursday morning. Born in Cornwall, England, in 1816, he came to Canada with his parents while yet a boy. In 1839 he married Miss Elizabeth McCarthy, and from that time resided continuously in the Township of Hope, where he took an active interest in municipal affairs, being for nearly a quarter of a century a representative of his township in the County Council. In 1875 he was elected to the Ontario Legislature, defeating the Reform candidate, Mr. S. S. Smith, by a majority of 275 votes, though three years before the Riding had elected a Reformer to the House of Commons by a majority of 240 votes. In 1879 he was re-elected in preference to two other candidates. Mr. Rosevear was what is known as a "quiet member" of the House, seldom uttering a word; but he always voted as he thought right. He was of a genial disposition, and "Honest John," as he was called, was a general favorite, for his personal qualities rather than any political acumen. His death will he regretted by a large circle of friends.

The Lindsay Post says:—Mr. A. H. R. Sproule, of Woodrim and Vintage, County Tyrone, Ireland, has purchased from the manufactory of Mr. James Hamilton, of this Town, one handsome top buggy and top phaeton to take home with him to Ireland. It certainly must be very flattering to Mr. Hamilton that Mr. Sproule has selected his work, as we learn that he was anxious to have the best of the kind manufactured in this country, and had visited some of the leading manufactories in the cities, but saw nothing that pleased him as well. The selection is creditable to Mr. Hamilton as well as to the town of Lindsay, and will likely lead to larger expectations of Mr. Hamilton's manufactures.

The prizes awarded at the South Victoria Agricultural Society's spring show were :—Blood Horses.—1st, George W. Curtis' Huckleberry. Road and Carriage.—1st, Porter's horse; 2nd, A. & G. W. At the last Division Court sitting at Fenelon Falls, the case, McFadden vs. Haslitt, was decided after no less than three hearings. Plaintiff is proprietor and captain of the steamer Coboconk, and has a wharf in Cameron Lake at Fenelon Falls, and defendant is a Peterborough lumberman, some of whose employees, in the spring of 1880, injured the wharf by fastening ropes to it for the purpose of hauling their rafts of logs. The defence contended that the wharf was a nuisance and an obstruction to navigation, and as such ought to be removed; but plaintiff held that it was a necessary adjunct to the traffic of this steamboat, and that it was neither a nuisance nor an obstruction as it only projected a few rods into the lake, and was remote from the course which ought to be taken by logs and timber. Judge Dean decided for plaintiff for $60, the full amount claimed, and costs. A. A. McDonald for Plaintiff; Denaistoun for defendant.

At the League Hall re-union, Liverpool, England, the Rev. Father Nugent made the following statement, as reported in the Catholic Times of April 14th :—"I have received a communication from a very old friend of mine and of yours, Father Stafford, of Lindsay, Canada, inclosing the official list of convictions before the magistrates for the quarter, ending 8th March, in which the name of a single Catholic of his parish was not to be found. And while the Catholics of the County of Victoria numbered six thousand out of a general population of 43,000, only three of them had been convicted of any offence, and even these three were up for offences arising out of liquor, viz.: selling liquor without a licence. He thought that they could send to Father Stafford, across the ocean, the congratulations of the League—that great organization—and should rejoice with him who had been so successful in his crusade against drink."

The following telegram from Belleville, dated May 7th, throws further light on the cow-stealing case :—

Two young imposters figured here last night and to-day. They were a boy twelve years, and a girl of ten, who gave their names as Davey, and stated that they had tramped from Orillia. Their story was that their father had died on Christmas day, and their mother on New Year's, and that their effects, all except a cow, had been sold by the undertakers to pay the funeral expenses. The cow, they alleged, they had driven to Hastings, where they sold it for $9 to a man, who, a few minutes afterwards, was offered $24 for it. Then they came to Ballyville to beg of some relatives to give them a home. The chief of police here communicated with Mr. A. Barley, of Orillia, who telegraphs that the children's parents are there, and that the youngsters ran away from home. The cow they stole in the neighborhood of Peterborough. What disposition is to be made of them has not yet been determined.

Mr. E. O. Bickford, Managing Director of the Grand Junction, was interviewed a few days ago with reference to reports recently published to the effect that Mr. Hickson and Mr. McMullen were proposing to continue the Prince Edward County Railway to Stirling, and so complete the Grand Trunk and Midland-Sault scheme by running powers over the Grand Junction lately conferred upon them by the Ontario Government. He declared the project a matter of bounce for the purpose of trying to force the Grand Junction into their scheme on unfair conditions, and declared his disbelief in Mr. Hickson's sincerity, because the Grand Junction would have the same powers conceded to it over the Grand Trunk, Midland and Prince Edward Railways as they would be granted over the Grand Junction. His interpretation of the Railway Aid Act is that it is merely intended to compel an easy interchange of traffic. The Grand Junction would only be too happy to take part in the Sault scheme on equitable terms, but the Prince Edward Railway scheme was too ridiculous to talk about.

COW STEALING.—Two young vagrants on the third inst. took a cow belonging to Mr. John Gillespie from one of his fields, drove her to Hastings, and there sold her for $9 to Mr. Thos. Lynch, with whom they stayed over night. Next morning they took the train for Belleville and have not been heard of since. Mr. Gillespie has recovered his cow, and Mr. Lynch laments the purchase.

NEW BARNS.—Several enterprising farmers of this vicinity are about to erect new barns. That of Mr. Thos. Blezard will be an especially fine building.

THE FALL WHEAT looks well in this district.

ENNISMORE.

APRIL WEATHER.—The weather of the month up to the 20th was rather cold, although dry, sometimes of a low temperature, and on the morning of the 5th, was only 6° above zero, the highest was on the 24th, when it showed 66° at sundown. The aggregate for the month ranged at 32.19. We had only one slight shower of snow on the 11th, and on the 26th, 27th and 28th it fell 1¼in. of rain, making the down-fall for the month 1 3-16. Steady cold, frosty nights up to the later end of the month prevailed, with dry days, which answered well for the husbandmen getting in his crops.

THE CROPS :—The Arnecta and White Russian wheat are the leading varieties this season. A large percentage of barley is sown, and about the average of other coarse grain. The fall wheat, with few exceptions, looks well throughout the township and is already showing considerable growth.

COLD SPRINGS, OTONABEE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

SALE AND EMIGRATION.—At his premises, on the 28th of March, Mr. Thos. J. Welch, brick-maker, sold by public auction his machinery, horses, cattle, vehicles, household furniture, etc., at prices exceeding his expectations. The next evening Mr. W. and family emigrated to Sparta, Wisconsin, to seek a new home. His many friends join in wishing him "God speed."

HALF-DAY SYSTEM.—It will be remembered by some that the system known as the half-day system was introduced into section No. 16, Otonabee, last spring. The school was conducted on this plan from the first of May until mid-summer, and the people were so well satisfied that it is again introduced. Last spring it was tried after consulting the Inspector and Trustees; but this spring it was thought advisable to find out the voice of the people on the matter, and accordingly the opinion of the ratepayers was found by getting the names "for" and "against." After canvassing the section it was found that only two ratepayers voted "against." It speaks well for the half-day system to have it thus introduced the second time.

AGRICULTURAL.—The fall wheat in this neighborhood is pretty badly killed out, most of it being only half a crop, and some of it completely killed. Mr. John Bennett is one of the few who have been favored with a good crop.

PERSONAL.—Mr. Crozier is going on a tour to Germany, his native land, as soon as he finishes his spring work on his farm. May he have a safe voyage and happy return.

THE HAMMOND-HAULTAIN-BELL CASE.

At the session of the synod of Toronto and Kingston on Thursday last the case of appeal from Peterborough, growing out of the visit of Mr. Hammond to that town, came up in the morning. Voluminous papers relating to the case were submitted. After some discussion Principal Grant moved that the papers be referred to a committee that shall also hear the parties, in the hope that a satisfactory settlement may be come to, or in the event of failing, then to prepare the case for the Synod, it being understood that the rights of the parties are conserved. The following were the members of the committee :—Principal Grant, convener; Principal Caven, Prof. McLaren, Dr. Reid, Rev. W. Mc Lean, Rev H. M. Parsons, and Messrs. Yellowlees, Beith and Fordyce, elders.

In the evening the committee presented their report.

Principal Grant, convener, said the following was the finding of the committee, unanimously come to and agreed to by all parties interested :—They recommend that the Synod sustain the appeal so far as to finding that the appellants were entitled to have the enquiry prosecuted or the petition withdrawn; but inasmuch as after hearing all the parties it appears that no interest of justice or religion requires further investigation, the Synod decide that the matter now drop; and further, the Synod recognize the excellent spirit by which the Presbytery were actuated throughout, and their earnest desire to act faithfully in the difficult circumstances. On motion of Rev. Mr. Wilson this finding was adopted.

CANADIAN WATER WAYS.

(Buffalo Telegraph.)

The Welland and St. Lawerence ship canals are destined to revolutionize the railroad commerce of the United States. Already Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit and other upper lake ports are awakening to the necessity of further improving the inland waters so that the largest steamers that can pass through the enlarged Welland, may steam unimpeded to the remotest ports on the great chain of lakes. Again is revived the project of constructing a ship canal from Georgian bay, Lake Huron, to the Ottawa river, and thence to the St Lawerence. This work will some day be carried out, and the ports on Lakes Erie and Ontario will be virtually side-tracked so far as transporation from the far west to foreign ports is concerned. New York by a liberal policy might have maintained her commercial superiority for another decade, but the railroads have too firm a grasp on the state senate, and the state's prosperity is sacrificed that the unnatural interests of the gigantic railroad corporations may be maintained for a few years at the most.

The Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad Company

Now offer for Sale over 1,250,000 Acres of the Choicest FARMING and TIMBERED LANDS in the Northern Peninsula of Michigan.

Destined to be the best wheat-producing region in the world. These lands are situated in the counties of Chippewa, Mackinac, Schoolcraft, and Marquette, and embrace many thousands of acres of the best agricultural lands in the State of Michigan.

Among those in the counties of Chippewa and Mackinac are tracts of what are known as the "burnt or cleared" lands. These lands offer many advantages over the prairie lands of the West, as the timber lands adjoining insure a supply of fuel at little cost. The soil being a rich clay loam of great depth. The timber remaining upon the land being generally sufficient for the settlers' use in building and fencing.

These partially cleared lands are now offered at the low price of from $4 to $4.50 per acre, one-fourth cash, and the remainder at purchaser's option, at any time within nine years, with interest payable annually at seven per cent.

Roads are being opened through these lands, and no better opportunity has ever been offered to men of small means to secure a good farm, and intending purchasers will be wise by availing themselves of this chance before prices advance, as the lands are being rapidly taken and settled upon.

The lands more immediately on the line of the Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad, from Straits of Mackinac to Marquette, are more heavily timbered, and are almost universally good agricultural lands, leaving splendid farms when the timber is removed.

The iron and lumber interests of the upper peninsula are of such magnitude as to call for all the charcoal and lumber that the timber and wood upon the lands will produce—this will enable the settler to make good wages while clearing the land.

Lumber Mills and Charcoal Kilns will be built at various points along the line, and Furnaces are now being erected along the line of the road at Point St. Ignace.

The great demand and good prices for labor, both in winter and summer, make these lands particularly desirable as homes for the poor man. The lands adjacent the Railroad are offered at prices from $5 upwards, according to location, value of timber, etc. The lands are at your very door, and are being rapidly settled by Canadians.

Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, MAY 12, 1881.

The Ontario Boundary Award.

Sir Francis Hicks, on Friday evening last, delivered an address in Toronto, before many prominent citizens, on the subject of the award made by himself, Sir Edward Thornton, and the late Chief Justice Harrison, as to the true boundaries of the Province of Ontario. Sir Wm. Howland presided. It will be remembered that the award has not yet been accepted by the Dominion, and that an Act was passed at the late session of the Parliament of Canada in favor of extending the boundaries of Manitoba within the territory covered by the award as part of Ontario. In this act of gross repudiation of a virtual agreement of the Dominion, when leaving the settlement of the boundaries to arbitration, the Government of Sir John Macdonald was aided by his "mechanical majority;" even the Conservative members from Ontario voting, to a man, for the spoilation of their own Province. It was then stated by members of the Dominion Government, that the arbitrators did not settle on the true boundary; but merely adopted a conventional line, for convenience. Sir Farncis Hicks now comes forward in justice to himself and to his fellow-arbitrators, and emphatically states that the award referred to the true boundary, as fixed by the treaty between England and France, in 1763, an Act of the Imperial Parliament, in 1774, the Treaty of Paris, in 1783, and a treaty of 1794, by which the Northern boundary of the United States was agreed upon. Those who argue for another boundary than that decided upon by the arbitrators, base their contentions upon commissions to governors and judicial decisions, which, however, cannot over-ride Imperial treaties and Acts. On those grounds Sir Francis Hincks holds that the line as laid down by the arbitrators, is the only possible one that can be accepted as the "true boundary." He further asserts that the three arbitrators unanimously agreed upon it after the examination of the documentary evidence bearing upon the subject, each separately coming to the same conclusion, before ever having communicated with each other. He condemns the extension eastward of the Manitoba boundary, as merely an attempt to introduce that Province into a dispute with which it has nothing whatever to do. This exposition of a very important subject, by so old and able a statesman, is calculated to have an important bearing upon the matter on which he lucidly and learnedly dwelt.

The attempt to work up another bonus "boom" in Peterborough is meeting with very little encouragement. From the expression of opinion by leading citizens since the appearance of last week's EXAMINER, we are fully convinced that our position on this question meets with general public approval. Even those who plead most dexterously for municipal money for the future use of themselves or their friends are forced to admit that the giving of it would be radically wrong. By what system of reasoning they justify the asking of what it would be wrong to give, is one of those things "no fellow can find out."

Toronto & Ottawa Railway.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found a reference to the progress made with the surveys of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway line. These are now so far advanced that the promoters of the road have probably already begun to deposit their plans with the Government, and to take all necessary steps to secure their right to the location selected, by way of Carlton Place. The right of way over a large part of the route has been purchased, and it is anticipated that work will be commenced within a few weeks between Peterborough and the mining district to the eastward. The operators in ore are known to be seeking other outlets, and the early construction of this section of the Toronto and Ottawa road means the securing of the traffic from the mines. An American company having purchased a mining tract in Madoc, is ready to begin the construction of some twelve or fourteen miles of railway through the centre of their territory, and the promoters of the Toronto and Ottawa line look to a union with this mining link as certain by the construction, forthwith, of the section from Peterborough to a junction with it. They are further impelled to immediate action by the proposed union of the "Ontario and Quebec" scheme with the Grand Junction road; but which rivalry they feel confident in overcoming, either by an understanding or by the rapid pushing forward of their "direct route."

The intention at present, and for some time to come, is to unite with the Midland Railway system, and reach Toronto by way of Omemee, Lindsay and the Toronto and Nipissing line. A glance at the map will show the easy practicability of such a route.

We are pleased to announce this evidence of active business on the part of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company. In any event it cannot fail to be of immense advantage to Peterboro'. By a vigorous prosecution of construction, the managers of the road will at least be benefitted by a considerable return of popular confidence.

Editorial Notes.

Why will the Review and its correspondent continue their "bounce" concerning the N. P.? If Mr. Robert Graham, of Lakefield, has, as asserted, gained money enough, by that noble N. P.. to enable him to take a trip to Europe, who are the losers? He didn't coin it; then where did it come from?

Port Hope pettishness is further displayed by the following, from the Guide: "There is a gravel train at work on the "Midland railway, between Port Hope "and Millbrook, on which between forty "and fifty men are engaged, and it is "said they are all from Peterborough. "How is this? Why can't some of those "in want of employment in Port Hope "have a chance?" The facts are wrong. That's how it is. We are not exactly sure of the right answer to the second conundrum, but can get pretty near it by saying:—Because Port Hope idlers are so fond of that luxurious life, they will not apply for work; and when they are solicited into labor they want more money than can in justice be given them.

Grip has an excellent cartoon representing Mr. Gordon Brown, as a little passive-faced old woman in a poke-bonnet, labelled "Globe," and cutting with a pair of shears, a string by which is tied to her waist, one leg of Hon. Edward Blake,—a big boy in knickerbockers. The urchin holds in one hand a package of "advanced Liberal ideas," while with the forefinger of the other, he tries to hold in the augh of amusement and joy. On a fence behind the figures are shown placards bearing this quotation from the Globe of May 2:—"Not pretending to infallibility, the Globe seeks to control no one:" and an amendment of the Globe's motto, thus:—"The subject who is truly wise will not attempt to control any person bigger than himself."

NORWOOD.

(From our own Correspondent.)

WHIPPING CASE.—On the 4th inst., Chas. J. Dutton, teacher in the Public School, appeared before a Bench of Magistrates, (John Brackenridge, Hugh Drain, Thos. Rork and Porter Preston,) charged with assaulting Weldon Sargent, a lad of 16 years, one of his scholars. The evidence showed that Sargent had refused to hold out his hand for punishment, and that he was whipped across the sholders, so as to leave marks upon the skin. Much interest was manifested in the case. The defendent was fined fifty cents and costs, ($5.50,) or ten days in goal, Squire Rork dissenting. He will appeal.

HORSE PRANK.—Mr. Thos. Ford, Asphodel, was opening the gate of a neighbour's yard the other day, to pass out, when his horse suddenly bolted, running up the concession line with great speed, and turning homewards found the gate closed; but without waiting the pleasure of those in pursuit, dashed or climbed over the gate, taking with him such portions of the buggy as were able to stand the pressure. The animal made a dash at another gate, but found that its exhausted energies would not sustain such another leap with sundry parts of the buggy attached to it.

OBIT.—Mrs. Jas. King, to whom reference was made in your last, died suddenly at her late residence in Asphodel, on Wednesday last. Her funeral took place on Thursday last, and was attended by a very large number of sympathizing friends and relatives. Deceased was a sister of John Peters, Esq., of Hastings, and of Mr. Geo. Peters, of Dummer. Mrs. Hugh Scott, of Asphodel, died at her late residence on Friday evening last; after a very brief illness. Her remains were conducted to their last resting place on earth on Sunday afternoon last, followed by, perhaps, the largest number of sympathizing people that ever assembled in this vicinity on a like occasion. Much sympathy is expressed for Mr. Scott and his children in the sad loss they have sustained in the death of an affectionate wife and a loving mother.

PERSONAL.—Dr. John Clarke, a popular junior M. D. in this neighborhood, has been visiting his friends in Norwood for a few days back. The Doctor intends to hang out his shingle in the town of Meaford, Ont.

PASSED.—Dr. Jas. F. O'Shea, son of Thos. O'Shea, Esq., of Asphodel, has passed his final examination before the Medical Council at Toronto.

ABSCONDED.—The proprietor of the "Commercial Hotel," of this village, found it convenient to suddenly "vamoose" from this place a few nights ago, leaving behind him a few interested in his present whereabouts. One of his creditors, perhaps getting a hint of his intended departure without saying farewell, managed to pounce upon three or four stoves, and thus was able to reduce somewhat his bill against the absconder.

THE HAY CASE.—Judge Dennistoun on Thursday last gave his deferred decision on the hay case between John Baakin and Abraham Scott, tried at the last session of the Second Division Court, held here. It was in favor of the defendant, Mr. Scott. The particulars in this matter were published in a recent issue of THE EXAMINER.

A LOSING JOKE.—A prominent physician of Pittsburg said jokingly to a lady patient who was complaining of her continued ill health, "Try Hop Bitters!" The lady took it in earnest and used the Bitters, from which she obtained permanent health. She now laughs at the doctor for his joke, but he is not so well pleased with it, as it cost him a good patient.—Harrisburg Patriot. 18-2t

THE EXTENT OF ONTARIO.

Sir Francis Hincks on the South-Western Boundary.

The following extracts from the lecture of Sir Francis Hincks on the Boundary Award will be found instructive:—

"The south-western boundary of Ontario depends on the construction of the Imperial Act of 1774, on the effect of the subsequent Treaty with the United States of 1783, and on the proclamation issued under the Act of 1791. It is important to consider the circumstances under which the Act of 1774 was passed. In the year 1763 a treaty was concluded at Paris, between England and France, which contained the following provision:—"In order to establish peace on solid and durable foundations, and to remove for ever all subject of dispute with regard to the limits of the British and French territories on the continent of America, it is agreed that for the future the confines between the dominions of His Britannic Majesty and those of His Most Christian Majesty in that part of the world shall be fixed irrevocably by a line drawn along the middle of that river and the lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain to the sea . . . provided that the navigation of the Mississippi shall be equally free as well to the subjects of Great Britain as to those of France in its whole breadth and length from its source to the sea." The treaty from which I have just quoted was concluded on the 10th February, 1763, and on the 7th October, 1763, a proclamation was issued erecting four new governments, one of which was Quebec, the western boundary of which was fixed at the south end of Lake Nipissing. In the year 1774, in consequence of urgent representations as to the necessity of establishing a settled government in territories where no government of any kind existed, a Bill was introduced by the Government of the day, the object of which was clearly stated by Lord North in language which I shall quote. "It is well known that settlers are in the habit of going to the interior parts from time to time. Now, however undesirable, it is open to Parliament to consider whether it is fit there should be no government in the country, or, on the contrary, separate and distinct governments, or whether the scattered posts should be annexed to Canada. The House of Lords have thought proper to annex them to Canada, but when we consider that there must be some government, and that it is the desire of all those who trade from Canada to these countries that there should be some government, my opinion is that, if gentlemen will weigh the inconveniences of separate governments, they will think the least inconvenient method is to annex those posts, though low in population, great in extent of territory, rather than to leave them without government at all, or make them separate ones. Sir, the annexation likewise is the result of the desire of the Canadians, and of those who trade to those settlements, who think they cannot trade with safety so long as they remain separate." Now, it must be borne in mind that the principal posts in the unorganized territories, when the Act of 1774 was passed, were situated on the River Mississippi, and of course in British territory by the treaty of 1763. The pretension of the advocates of the due north line, which is the boundary claimed by the Dominion, is that Parliament deliberately abandoned the natural boundary of the Mississippi, thereby excluding from the benefit of the Act the very persons for whom it was specially intended, and that it adopted, without a single conceivable motive, a conventional line running due north from the junction of the Ohio with the Mississippi. It is well known that the Bill was introduced in the House of Lords in 1774, and that as sent down by that House to the Commons the description was "all the said territories, islands, and countries, heretofore a part of the territory of Canada in North America, extending southward to the banks of the River Ohio, westward to the banks of the Mississippi, and northward to the southern boundary of the territory granted to the Merchants Adventurers of England trading to Hudson's Bay, and which said territories, islands, and countries are not within the limits of some other British Colony as allowed and confirmed by the Crown." Now it has never been pretended that there was any ambiguity in that description as to the western boundary, but a discussion was raised in the Commons by Mr. Edmund Burke, then agent for the State of New York, who had doubts whether under the description Canada might not encroach on territory on the north-east of that State, which had actually been in dispute, and which by amicable agreement had been made over to New York, reserving the rights of Canadian settlers in the disputed territory. The territory on the Mississippi had never been in dispute during the protracted wars between the British and the French regarding boundaries in the Ohio Valley.

"To my own mind there is no ambiguity in the language. The object of the Act was to provide for the government of all the territories not included in the old Provinces and not south of the Ohio River. When the Mississippi was reached the word "northward" was quite sufficient, as the western boundary was that established by the treaty of 1763. How any one could have imagined that Parliament would have been guilty of the absurdity of excluding the settlements on the river from the benefit of an Act chiefly intended for them, and abandoning a natural boundary like the Mississippi in order to run a line due north, without any conceivable object, is incomprehensible to me.

"The point which strikes me as important is that De Reinhardt's counsel rested their case on the Act of 1791 and not on that of 1774, and it will be found on reference both to the arguments of counsel and to the judgment of the Court that the most important branch of the decision was that the Act of 1791 only authorized the division of the old Province of Quebec into two separate Provinces, and consequently that the proclamation could not be interpreted to give Upper Canada any territory that had not been included in the old Province of Quebec. Now, the arbitrators were of the opinion that on this point the judgment of the Court delivered at Quebec in 1818 was correct, and consequently that the boundaries of Ontario must be limited to those of the Province of Quebec as defined by the Act of 1774. There have been so many opinions, which I admit to be entitled to great weight, in favor of the boundary which was contended for by eminent counsel for the prisoner in the De Reinhardt case, that it is highly probable that, as lawyers, they held their construction of the Proclamation of 1791 to be correct. I must, however, point out that it is the duty of a lawyer, when defending a criminal, to spare no effort to procure his acquital, and, in thinking the De Reinhardt case over in my own mind, it occurred to me that if counsel had contended for the Mississippi boundary as that established by the Act of 1774, and had concurred with the arbitrators that after the treaty of peace with the United States in 1783, the most north-western angle of the Lake of the Woods became the south-western boundary, they might not have saved the prisoner whom they were defending.

"It must be borne in mind that although the commission of a Governor cannot supersede an Act of Parliament, as the framer of the report of the Commons Committee of 1880 seems to imagine, it may fairly be cited as corroborative evidence of the intention of an Act, where any ambiguity of language is found to exist. The first commission issued under the Act of 1774 to Sir Guy Carleton proves conclusively what was understood at the time to be its meaning. Immediately after the word "northward" the words "along the eastern bank of the said river" were added in the commission. It really looks as if it had occured to the framer of the commission that the hastily prepared amendment to the original Act might create doubt at some future time, and yet Mr. Burke, the framer of the description, thus explained his intention. "My idea was to get the limits of Quebec, which appeared to many as well as to myself intended to straiten the British Colonies, removed from construction to certainty; and that certainty grounded on natural, indisputable, and immovable barriers—rivers and lakes, where I could have them, lines where lines could be drawn, and where reference and description became necessary to have them towards an old British Colony, and not towards this new and as thought favourite establishment." Is it conceivable that the author of the passage I have quoted could have intended to abandon such a natural boundary as the Mississippi, for one without sense or meaning, and the adoption of which would have left without any government the very settlements which it was specially intended to include? I need only observe further that I believe that those who maintain that the boundaries were enlarged by the proclamation issued under the Act of 1791 concur with the arbitrators in the opinion that by the Act of 1774 the Mississippi was the western boundary of the old Province of Quebec.

"When the treaty of peace was concluded at Paris on 3rd September, 1783, boundaries were established to which I shall briefly refer. It is sufficiently evident that there was a desire to find natural boundaries, if practicable, and accordingly the line of division was carried through Lake Superior to the Long Lake, thence by water communication to the most north-western point of the Lake of the Woods, and from thence on a due west course to the river Mississippi. In 1794, another treaty was concluded, which commences as follows:—"Whereas it is uncertain whether the river Mississippi extends so far to the northward as to be intersected by a line to be drawn due west from the Lake of the Woods in the manner mentioned in the treaty of peace between Her Majesty and the United States it is agreed," etc. The agreement was that the two nations would make a joint survey of the said river from one degree of latitude below the Falls of St. Anthony to the principal source or sources of the said river, and if the result should be that the river would not be intersected by such a due west line, then the two parties will proceed to establish a boundary by amicable negotiation. This was subsequently accomplished by the treaty of 1818, establishing the 49th parallel of north latitude. At that time it was not known whether the Lake of the Woods was north or south of the 49th parallel, and it was accordingly provided that a line should be drawn due north or due south from the north-western angle to the 49th parallel. The Mississippi of the treaty between England and France, of the act of 1774, and the treaty with the United States, has its sources almost due south of the Lake of the Woods, where the international boundary is fixed. It seemed to the arbitrators that under all the circumstances of the case, the true south-westerly boundary of Ontario should be held to be at the international boundary, rather than at a point due north of the source of the Mississippi. The latter would have been in nearly the same meridian, I may observe, and would have entailed much useless expense in surveys, besides disputes as to which was really the true source of the Mississippi.

MAN'S NOBLEST WORK.—This is an age of great works and wonderful inventions. Steam, electricity, water, air, all are made to serve man, but unquestionably the greatest inventions are those which preserve man's health and prolong his life, and among the greatest of these is Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Its effects are truly wonderful and hundreds are happy to-day, who once looked forward to an early grave. For Coughts, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, loss of voice, Hay Fever, Hoarseness, Croup, of any affection whatever of the Throat, Chest or Lungs, Dr. King's New Discovery will positively cure. We can cheerfully recommend it to all, and can unhesitatingly say it is the only sure cure for Throat and Lung Affections. Trial bottles ten cents; regular size $1. For sale by all Druggists.

SUDDEN DEATH.—On Saturday afternoon, Dr. M.M.P. Dean, of Keene, was out sailing and enjoying as good health as usual, till about eight o'clock in the evening, when he suddenly experienced a darting pain in his chest. This extended to his back and shoulders, and became so alarming that a physician was called in. The medical gentleman only rallied the patient on his hours, and declared he was all right. But the symptoms continued to grow worse, and another doctor was summoned. He could do nothing to save the life of his brother in the profession, who died in a few hours. Dr. Dean, who was only thirty-seven years of age, has been a resident of Keene for a number of years, was Master of the Masonic Lodge at that place, and Captain of No. 4 Company, 57th Battalion, which corps accorded him a military funeral on Tuesday, to the Little Lake Cemetery, Peterborough. The various Companies were well represented, showing the respect in which Capt. Dean was held as an officer. There was also a large attendance of civilians. The deceased gentleman was a brother of Mr. S. Dean, of Bridgenorth, and politically, a staunch Reformer.

THE O'NEIL-HOGAN CASE.—The arrest of Mr. James Hogan on a charge of obtaining money under false pretences, preferred by Mr. M. O'Neil, of Smith, caused a ripple of excitement last week. The facts as far as learned are:—Mr. O'Neill through Mr. Hogan negotiated for the mortgage of certain property with a Toronto Loan Company; but an amount due on a previous mortgage had first to be paid. To this end there was placed in Mr. Hogan's hands a sum of money, but not sufficient to meet the claim. Mr. Hogan proposed to the Company to procure O'Neil's note, endorsed by himself, for the balance. The correspondence on this point caused considerable delay, but was finally accepted. Mr. Hogan wrote the Company a letter, stating that the note was enclosed; but he carelessly neglected to send the important document. When he learned that it had not been received he fancied he had lost it, but after his arrest discovered it folded within and sticking to other papers in his pocket-book. Meanwhile Mr. O'Neill had become impatient at the delay, and disgusted at the prospect of having to pay interest on two mortgages instead of one; and when he learned that the note had not been sent on he procured the arrest of Mr. Hogan on the charge mentioned. On explanations and the final settlement of the claim, the suit was dropped, and nothing further is likely to come of it. Mr. Hogan easily procured bail and speedily arranged the matter after his return from Toronto, whither he had gone on business

THE SUNDAY MAGAZINE FOR JUNE, is peculiarly attractive in its literary and artistic departments, and brilliantly closes its ninth semi-annual volume. It is a publication which should be found in every household, for its literature is pure and healthy; it is always vivacious, and edifies while it entertains and instructs. The 128 quarto pages are crowded with good things; among the most prominent articles are "A Peep at the Mormons"; "Country Church Architecture," by John Benton; "Experiences in Australia and Ceylon," by Phillip Phillips; "The Modern Sunday-school Movement," by Charles B. Stout; "Adoniram Judson," by Rt. Rev. W. Pakenham Walsh, D. D.; "The Methodist Ecumenical," by Rev. O.H. Tiffany, D. D. The above are profusely illustrated. "Out of the World," a charming serial, is continued, and there are admirable short stories, sketches, essays, etc, etc., and poems of great merit. The miscellany is abundant and exceedingly comprehensive. The Rev. Dr. Deems contributes "Hard Places in the Bible," and "The Home Pulpit" contains a sermon, "Salvation to the Uttermost," by the late Rev. W. Radder, D. D. There are also "The Invalid's Portion and Thoughts for the Afflicted," "Temperance Talk," "Glimpses at the Religious World," etc., etc. The engravings are excellent and very numerous. Just fancy then how often our Omemee friends we'll see."

"Do you think it's really certain," said the
Mrs. M. and T.,
"That they're going to build this railway to Omemee? Why there'll be To us but little profit. Why should a village small
Away back in the country such trouble cause us all?"

"Sunny lawns and fragrant gardens, and
Hottest tea; they say,
Before the locomotive will have to clear the way;
And where the warbling songster once
cheer'd us with its lay,
We'll hear the shrill-voiced engine throughout the live-long day."

"Do you think they'll build this railway?"
said one to Mr. S.,
"I don't know myself it said the Midland will not do so, unless
Our towns will give a bonus; and by some a shame 'tis made,
To cut out the Grand Junction, and monopolize the trade."

Thus 'mid all the varied comments that every day we hear,
One truth above all others conspicuous doth appear,
That self is ever foremost in nearly all things done,
And when a good word's spoken for "Two," there's two for "One."

And listening to the queries about the Missing Link,
We question if the queriers so eagerly did think
Of the road that leadeth upward to Jerusalem the New
Of which all things recorded are unquestionably true.

Farm, Garden and Household.

Farm Hints.

Old thacked lime is best for fertilizing.

A good harness blacking oil.—Melt together 2 oz. asphaltam and 3 oz. beeswax; remove from the fire and add ½ oz. fine lamblack, and ½ oz. of Prussian blue in fine powder; then reduce to a thin paste with neats-foot oil.

Barked apple trees may be saved by wrapping with common gunny or jute bagging, and whitewashing.

It is generally considered better to apply salt in the fall, after seeding, but there is no danger of killing the wheat if it be put on in the spring, provided only a moderate quantity, say four or five bushels per acre, is used.

The ordinary red clover is the kind to seed down with for land fertilization. When sown alone, from 12 to 15 pounds to the acre is the proper quantity. A crop of grain should follow the ploughing under of the two-year-old clover roots.

A Georgia farmer found that his land would no longer bear good crops of corn and cotton, and he planted 25 acres with pear trees. His profits are $400 an acre.

A GOOD PAINT.—Lime slacked with a solution of salt in water, and then properly thinned with skimmed milk from which all the cream has been taken, makes a permanent whitewash for out-door work, and it is said renders the wood incombustable. It is an excellent wash for preserving shingles, and for all farm buildings.

At an Agricultural Dinner a gentleman related the following funny incident: He some time since drained an unprofitable swamp, and was one day watching the result, when a farmer came up to him and said, "Sir, you have a beautiful crop." "Yes, I have," was the reply. "How did you get it?" was asked. "Brains," was the rejoiner. "What, manure the field with brains?" was further enquired. "Oh, yes." The farmer opened his eyes and said, "Oh, yer honor, where d'ye get 'em?"

Mr. J. J. Bennett, of Waterville, N. Y., one of the most successful and extensive hop-growing men in that part of the State, two years ago tilled a hop yard of 75 acres, increased it last year to 90 acres, and will this season still further extend its boundaries, making a total acreage of 90. The land he uses is mainly composed of loam with a clay bottom. Last year he raised from his 90-acre field 190,000 pounds of cured hops, and sold them for 20½ cents per pound, realizing the handsome figure of something like $35,000. The price varies from year to year, sometimes falling to six and eight cents, and sometimes rising as high as 65 cents per pound. He states that the average cost of harvesting is about six cents per pound.

Lime is excellent for clay soils. Argil augments in volume when moist— diminishes when dry. Carbonate of lime possesses neither of these properties; therefore when applied to cold clay soils it enables the air and heat to penetrate more readily, thus making the land friable. On light soils the action of lime is weak, and on such as are very light its use is misplaced. But as the action of lime rapidly transforms the nutritive capital of the land, its success cannot be permanent unless rationally supplemented by direct fertilizers, as farm-yard manure, &c. Hence the adage:—Lime enriches the father, but ruins the children. If the soil have an excess of acids, lime "sweetens" it by neutralizing them. All cultivated lands are acid, such condition being necessary for vegetation. Too much, however, acts directly on plants, and also indirectly, by the formation of soluble and noxious salts of iron.

Garden.

A well-drained soil, together with liberal doses of soapsuds and wood ashes, are considered by experienced grape-growers to be pretty effectual safeguards against mildew.

A mixture of bone dust and ashes is said to be the best fertilizer for strawberries.

If feed is scattered under the currant bushes and the hens allowed to scratch and pick there they will keep the gound loose and eat all the grubs that are in the soil. If this is done there will be no danger from the currant worms that infest bushes where the grass is allowed to grow.

The Chemist says that if a little chloride of lime be sprinkled on the soil, rats, mice and insects will soon desert it. Plants may be easily protected by it from insect plague by simply brushing over their stems with a solution of it. It has often been noticed that a patch which has been treated in this way remains free from grubs, while the unprotected beds round about are literally devasted. Fruit trees may be guarded from their attacks by attaching to the stems pieces of tow smeared with a mixture of chloride and hog's lard. Ants and grubs already in possession will then rapidly vacate their positions.

A mixture of [illegible] and petroleum sprinkled over the [illegible] or two before planting will increase the fertility wonderfully.

Refuse salt and brine from the pickle barrels should be sown broadcast under fruit trees. It will also pay to scatter wood-ashes liberally under them.

Household.

A handful of tobacco stems placed in the box in which the dog sleeps will entirely rid him of fleas.

Much may be done for our children by paying some attention to their diet and so avoid giving medicine as much as possible.

The Lancet says a man may bathe daily in cold water and still be dirty. He must wash in water as warm as the skin and use soap. The feet especially should be washed daily.

Take half a pound of lean meat—the roll of the bladebone is the best part for the purpose—and trim away both fat and skin. Cut the meat into very small pieces, sprinkle a little salt over it, and pour upon it a small tumblerful of cold water. Bring it to the boil, stirring it all the time; let it simmer for five minutes, and it is ready to serve to an invalid.

A Leipsig journal gives a method which it asserts will prevent lamp chimneys from cracking. The treatment will not only render lamp chimneys, tumblers, and like articles more durable, but may be applied with advantage to crockery, stoneware, porcelain, etc. The chimneys, tumblers, etc., are put into a pot filled with cold water, to which some common table salt has been added. The water is well boiled over a fire and then allowed to cool slowly. When the articles are taken out and washed they will be found to resist afterwards any sudden change of temperature.

The way to get the better of a bilious system without blue pills or quinine, is to take the juice of one, two or three lemons as the appetite craves, in as much [illegible] water as [illegible] pleasant to drink, without sugar, before going to bed. In the morning on rising, or at least half an hour before breakfast, take the juice of one lemon in a goblet of water. This will cure the system of dyspepsia and bile, with mild efficacy, without any of the weakning effects of calomel or corrosive water. People should not irritate the stomach by eating lemons clear, as the powerful acid of the juice, which is almost corrosive, infallibly produces inflammation after a while, but properly diluted, so that it does not burn or draw the throat, it does its full medical work without harm, and when the stomach is clean of food has abundant opportunity to work on the system.

Below is a very good time table for cooking vegetables:

Potatoes boiled, 30 minutes.
Potatoes baked, 45 minutes.
Squash boiled, 25 minutes.
Green peas boiled, 20 to 40 minutes.
Shelled beans boiled, 60 minutes.
String beans boiled, one to two hours.
Green corn, 30 to 50 minutes.
Asparagus, 15 to 30 minutes.
Spinach, one or two hours.
Tomatoes, canned, 30 minutes.
Cabbage, 55 minutes to two hours.
Cauliflower, one or two hours.
Dandelions, two or three hours.
Beet greens, one hour.
Onions, one or two hours.
Beets, one to four hours.
Turnips, white, 45 to 60 minutes.
Turnips, yellow, one and a half to two hours.
Parsnips, one or two hours.
Carrots, one or two hours.

The following treatment in epidemic diptheria has saved 99 per cent. of cases treated:—Administer tincture iodine in ten or twelve drop doses every hour, well diluted with water, so long as the fever lasts, subsequently reducing to ten drops every two, and finally every three hours. Local applications are made use of at the same time, and they should be made by a physician twice a day. For internal use the decolorized tincture is chosen. Bread and starchy articles of diet are used in abundance.

Tetanus has been successfully treated by merely applying to the nape of the neck and along the spine, large pieces of flannel dipped in hot water of a temperature just bearable to the hand.

Copperas (sulphate of iron) will preserve the freshness of water standing in barrels.

Management of Lambs in Spring.

As a rule it is best to begin to wean lambs as soon as they can be tempted to eat, when four or five weeks old. A separate enclosure should be made for them, to which the sheep cannot gain access. This may be an adjoining yard, and in it place a long trough upon or near the ground, in which bran and oatmeal should be scattered. The practice of feeding the lambs should be continued after the ewes are turned out to pasture, and if they can have the exclusive run of a part of the pasture it is all the better for them. Such an arrangement can be made by having gaps in the fence, which the lambs are not slow to discover and use. A few small gates or "lamb creeps" may be made in the fence to let the lambs through, and at the same time entirely prevent the sheep from passing. It should not be overlooked that any extra care given to lambs in early spring will have its influence through all their lives, making them stronger and better. At the same time good care to the lambs means a relief to their dams, which is an important point in sheep husbandry.

CHAFF.

"Clothed in a little brief authority"—A young lawyer in his first suit,

"Figaro" asks, "What towns of France grouped together make twenty-one?" The Rappel replies, "Troyes, Foix, Cette." and says that if you add an other town you reduce the total to twenty—thus, "Troyes, Foix, Cette equal twenty-one; Autum (ote us), and twenty remain."

Holmes, speaking of the fierce controversy waged between Dr. Jackson and a rival physician as to which was the organizer of the anæsthesia, said that the best way to settle matters would be to erect a monument with the diplomatic inscription. "Here's to ether."

As the pen is bent, the sheet's ink lined.

Ideas are like beards: men do not have them until they grow up.—Voltaire.

Sheriff's ale is bitter.

Few would care to endorse an observation which fell from the lips of a gentleman, after gazing some time at a skeleton of a donkey, and admiring and wondering at the structure of that despised animal. "Ah" said he. "we are fearfully and wonderfully made."

The neatest thing in bonnets is a pretty face.

"Been vaccinated, Miss Black?" "Yes, indeed, Mr. White, I should just hate to die of that nasty small-pox. Why, they say if you die of it you must be buried in the middle of the night, and nobody goes to the funeral!"

Signal stations will be established by Marconi of a mean [illegible] hereafter they would [illegible] hear, regarding as he [illegible] progress, asks, "would he [illegible] better?" "He'd jump over your head," answered the other. "I don't know what you call that!"

A portion asks, "Is there nothing for me to do?;' Oh, you may be sure there is. Return the flour you borrowed from the woman next door, patch up your husband's clothes, let poetry alone and turn up that old last year's bonnet. There's plenty of work for you to do in this world.

Said Miss Posigush to Syntax the college tutor, "So you teach at Harvard! That must be so delightful I'm sure! But then I should be frightened to death to meet any of their students, with half-a-dozen foreign languages at their tongue's end. I suppose they never speak English at all." "Very seldom speak it," said Syntax in a dreamy way. "There! I knew they didn't," continued Miss Posigush. "What language do they speak most, Mr. Syntax, Greek, or Latin, or—" "Slang," replied the tutor with laconic simplicity.

Mrs. Homespun threw down the paper and pulled off her spectacles with a vicious jerk. "It's perfectly scand'lous!" she exclaimed. "For my part I can't see how any respectable woman could ever wear such a thing as that. When I was a gal I used to wear low necks and short sleeves; but, mercy!" "Why, what's the matter, aunt?" asked Cicely, picking up the paper. "Matter? Matter enough I should say?" cried the excited old lady; "just look at that fashion plate there; if you are not ashamed to look at it. It's perfectly scand'lous." "Why, aunt," said the smiling Cicely, "that's only a liverpad picture!" "I don't care what kind of a new-fangled name they give to it," persisted her aunt, "its scand'lous and disgraceful, and no woman that's got a spark of modesty about her would ever be seen in one of them."

The Bay of Quinte Yacht Club has decided, upon the issue of a challenge on behalf of Capt. Cuthbert, to the New York Yacht Club, for a contest for the America Cup, the date suggested being September next, contingent upon the holders of the cup waiving the six months' notice to which they are entitled.

ADVERTISING CHEATS.—It has become so common to write the beginning of an elegant, interesting article and then run it into some advertisement, that we avoid all such cheats, and simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible, to induce people to give them one trial, as no one who knows their value will ever use anything else.—Providence Advertiser. 13-2t

NOT THE SLIGHTEST AFFINITY exists between the numerous quack mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct itself, and nothing else. It embodies the best results of pharmaceutical science. It invariably produces positive, decisive results. Those distressing coughs when the lungs are [illegible] (and [illegible] or hopelessly affected) colds, laryngitis and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure Consumption it is the most reliable means of defence against that dreaded scourge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing emollient action of the cod liver oil upon the inflamed lung membrane. The phosphorus, lime and soda, in combination with it are all natural components in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of those elements. These the hypophosphites supply, increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tottering human structure with a degree of promptitude as astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both time and experience have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. Prepared by NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto and sold by all druggists.

One of the Most Important Discoveries of this Age.

We make the startling announcement that KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE will cure Bone Spavin and completely remove the enlargement, so that the best horseman cannot tell that the horse ever had a spavin. We make this statement, and give below testimonials from persons who have used it, to prove our statements. It is excellent for removing unnatural enlargements of any kind. It does not blister nor cause any sore. It has no equal, to our knowledge, for spavin, ring-bone, curb, callous, sprain, swellings, galls, lameness from whatever cause, and all enlargements of the joints, or any part of the body or limbs, and is also good for cuts, scratches, wounds, etc.

For man, it is a complete remedy, for Corns, Frost-Bites, or any bruise, Cut or Lameness.

Remember that we claim it will

HYGIENIC!

Pure Water Essential to Health!

To Insure an Abundant Supply of Nature's Beverage, Pure and Unpolluted, Provide Yourselves with one of

HENRY OWENS'

Boom or Model Pumps.

As the Spring advances, and the Frost-King has to relax his frigid grasp beneath the effulgent rays of his august rival, it is the imperative duty of every householder to thoroughly investigate the sanitary condition of his domestic waterworks.

There is no more fruitful source of disease than impure water, and there are few who give the subject a thought until the doctor's presence in the family brings it painfully home to them. When one takes into consideration the fact that the city of Toronto is, at the present moment, paying out of the civic purse, the sum of $48,000 for improving their water supply, the momentous nature of the question will be more aptly estimated.

To all those who have reason to suppose their water to be unwholesome, we would say:—"Have your Wells CLEANED AND DEEPENED, and preserve your health." To those who may have pumps that work defectively, we would say:—"HAVE A NEW ONE, on the latest improved pattern, and save yourselves from violent out-bursts of temper." To all who may require new pumps, whether from choice or necessity, we would say:—

Buy them Good! Buy them Well Made! Buy them from Reliable Persons! Buy them from the Best Manufacturer! Buy them where you are Sure to get the Best Value for your Money! Buy them from those with whom it will be a Pleasure to do Business! Buy them from Henry Owens!

AND WHY FROM HENRY OWENS? READ AND LEARN!

The result of the recent proceedings in Chancery, testing the validity of the patent for the Cone Pump, is now generally known, but as a few may have been influenced by the garbled reports and puerile misrepresentations of unprincipled hucksters, a proper exposition of the case is indispensable.

Ever since commencing business in Peterborobgh, I have spared neither time nor money, in order to place the very best article in my line at the disposal of my customers. As a proof of my success in this direction I have only to say that EVERY OTHER MAKER IN THE DISTRICT HAS IMITATED ME IN EVERY PARTICULAR, to the best of his ability.

Over eight years ago a patent was issed for the Cone Pump, and I bought from the patentee, at considerable expense to my myself, the sole right for its manufacture and sale in the the Counties of Peterborough and Victoria. Not less than six years ago, several makers commenced, first by stealth, and afterwards openly, to infringe upon my privileges, and during that time I have had a much opposition as if no patent existed, with the additional disadvantage of having to pay on large sums for that privilege.

It is here worthy of remark, that in spite of the difficulties I had to encounter, I have always sold a BETTER ARTICLE AT AS LOW A FIGURE, as any manufacturer in the trade. Mere state nents are worth nothing without FACTS to substantiate them, and to corroborate the assertion that I have always manufactured a better article, it is simply necessary to remind the public that I HAVE NEVER FAILED TO CARRY OFF FIRST HONORS wherever I have shown my Pumps, EVEN IN COMPETITION WITH INFRINGEMENTS OF MY OWN PATENT.

The proceedings just closed were instituted by the patentee, in my name, and unless an appeal to the higher courts should reverse the judgement of the one which has just given its decision, there must be something decidedly rotten in the patent laws. It might be interesting to many to know the kind of testimony upon which that decision was arrived at, but the subject is held too utterly in contempt for a thought to be wasted upon it. Suffice itto say that most of those who gave evidence against the patent, were themselves violators of it. One in particular made himself remarkably conspicuous for his retentive memory, and his minute observation of mechanical improvements at that period of his existence, in which he was doubtlessly "obtaining his sustenance from Nature's founts." As the case now stands, I AM IN A BETTER POSITION THAN EVER BEFORE to supply the public with a first-class article at the very bottom prices. HITHERTO I have successfully and profitably withstood all underhand encroachments and illicit competition; NOW that I am unencumbered with the payment of heavy sums for patent rights, is it not reasonable to suppose that I am more likely than ever to outstrip all competitors?

This progressive age, however, has amply demonstrated the fact that nothing can be so complete in every detail as to preclude the possibility of something better. In this respect the Cone Pump has proved no exception, for as the antiquated Draw-Well was supersceded by the Rope and Windlass; the Rope and Windlass by the Common Pump; the Common Pump by the Swing; and the Swing by the Cone; so now it has in its turn to make way for a more favoured rival, and bow in homage to the superior merits of the

From their introduction until the present time the Cone Pumps have never failed to take first prizes; now the Boom and Model Pumps have stripped them of their laurels, and wherever they have been exhibited have swept everything before them.

THE ABOVE CUT REPRESENTS THE

CONE LIFT PUMP NO. 1,

(LARGE BORE.)

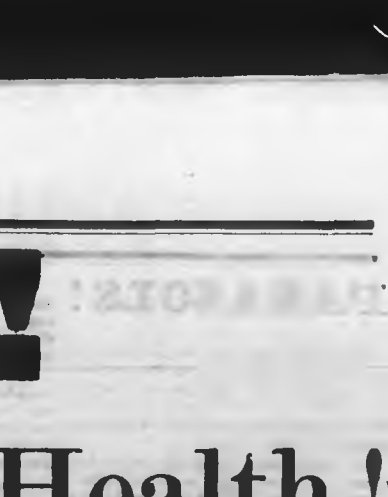
And is warranted to fill a pail with three strokes in shallow wells. This Pump can be so adjusted as to work with ease in wells of any depth, the size of the bore being in proportion to the depth of the well. For wells of more than ordinary depth there is no better, provided that is properly fitted with an Enammeled Iron Cylinder. ☞Can be easily worked with one hand.

This Cut is an apt representation of

NO. 1 FORCE PUMP,

And is capable of filling a pail of water in five strokes, and of throwing a pail of water in the same number of strokes a distance of seventy-five or eighty feet, or fifty feet perpendicularly.

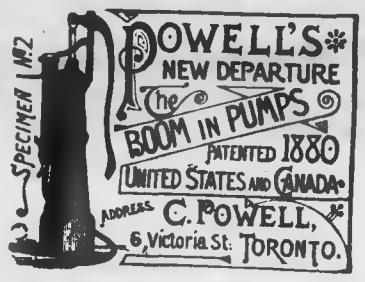
It is adapted to all the uses to which an ordinary pump may be applied, besides being an always-ready Fire Engine. It is allowed to be worth its cost for Washing Buggies alone, and as a Fire Preventative has saved many valuable properties. May be used for Watering Gardens, Courts, &c., Setting Tires, &c., and many other purposes.



THIS CUT IS OF A

CISTERN FORCE PUMP

And is similar to the large Force Pump in every respect, but its size, which is smaller. Six strokes of this Pump will fill a pail, and it will throw to a distance of sixty feet. It is applied for all purposes for which the other might be used, and is considerably lower in price.



The above Pump excels all others in having

Intermittent Packing, Sectional Stock

AND

SATISFACTORY HOSE ATTACHER.

It took First Prize at Toronto, in 1880, First Prize at Port Hope, 1880, and in fact wherever it was shown as a

LIFT, SUCTION AND FORCE PUMP.

It differs from all others in having 1st:—The SECTIONAL STOCK or HEAD, with its many effective modifications and its firm and durable means of holding the attachments.

2nd:—The INTERMITTENT or DETACHABLE PACKING, which is only used in actual forcing, and is UNFREEZEABLE and UNWEARABLE, at all other times, (say 95 per cent. of the service of the pump.

3rd.—The HOSE ATTACHER which is the acme of simplicity and efficiency.

4th.—It can be adjusted from an ordinary Lift Pump to a Force Pump in a FEW SECONDS, and is consequently a FIRST-CLASS LIFT and FORCE PUMP, COMBINED.

IN CONCLUSION

I have to thank all my old friends and customers for their liberal support during the time in which I have been in business, and would remind them that having lately extended my business, and considerably increased my manufacturing facilities, I am in a better position than ever to supply their wants. Although I have opened out a branch of my business in Belleville, I wish my customers in Peterborough to understand that the greater part of my time will be devoted to my business here, and their orders shall still be under my personal supervision. All repairs shall be promptly attended to, and letter orders filled with the greatest care.

Samples of the TORONTO REAPERS AND MOWERS have Lately Arrived, and will be Offered for Sale at my Ware-Rooms during the coming Season.

Misses McNabb and Hall, and Messrs. Brown, Smith and Orr subsequently appeared in the droll play of "The Little Sentinel," to the entertainment of the large audience. Messrs. A. Elliott and A. No Custom-house examination of baggage, and baggage checked through. Mr. Cox will be glad to give any further information that may be desired, in reference to this favourite line.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.—At a meeting of Peterborough Lodge I.O.O.F., on Thursday evening last, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

Moved by J. R. STRATTON, seconded by D. CARLISLE,—"That the thanks of this lodge are due and are hereby tendered to the Pastor, officers and members of the George-street Methodist Church, for the kindness displayed by them in furnishing such excellent accommodation on Sunday evening last for a special service in relation to Oddfellowship, upon the 62nd anniversary of the Order; and, that a copy of this resolution be placed in the hands of the proper officer of said church."

Moved by J. R. STRATTON, seconded by D. H. MOORE,—"That the united and hearty thanks of the members of this Lodge are due and are hereby tendered to Rev. Mr. Clarke, of Lindsay, for his truly fraternal kindness in preparing a sermon on the occasion of the 62nd anniversary of Oddfellowship, coming hither, and preaching for the special edification of this lodge and its friends generally; and, that a copy of this resolution be transmitted to Rev. Mr. Clarke, with brotherly greetings."

At the Huffman House on Saturday were registered, E. Gaujot, Marmora; J. B. McMullen, Chicago; Thos. Kelso, Belleville; and Jay A. Hubbell, Michigan. The first is an extensive iron operator; the second the genius of the Prince Edward Railway; the third, President of the Grand Junction Railway; and the fourth, a United States Senator and a heavy capatalist looking for a good investment in iron territory or railways, or both. The appearance of such a quartette, in close communication, suggests business.

The Port Hope Guide of Monday says: The Rev. N. R. Willoughby, M. A., President of the Toronto Methodist Conference, who was to have preached the anniversary sermons in connection with the Methodist Church here yesterday and also to address the meeting to-night, was taken with hemorrhage of the lungs in Montreal on Friday last. He arrived here yesterday (Sunday) morning and is the guest of his brother-in-law, the Rev. W. H. Laird. He goes home to-night to Brampton. We are glad to state that there is no immediate danger, but it will take some time with the greatest of care before he will be able to resume his work.

Mr. Henry Wade, the new Secretary of the Agricultural and Arts Association, was entertained at a complimentary banquet in Port Hope on Friday night, by his friends in that town, where his life has been mostly spent. From personal knowledge of Mr. Wade we can safely say that he is entirely deserving of the tribute of esteem bestowed on him. His accession to the most important post in connection with the A. & A. Association is hailed with pleasure throughout the Province, as he is known to possess large experience in the matters which will come before him as Secretary, and other qualifications necessary to a thoroughly efficient officer. It is difficult to determine to whom congratulations should be first offered—to the Association or to Mr. Wade; but respect for the Association leads us to give it the preference in this matter.
